

20,000 ITALIANS TAKEN AS DUCE WARNS HIS PEOPLE OF 'IMAGINARY CATASTROPHE'

Atlanta Foggy, Augusta Starry as Leigh Lands There

Fascist Chief Meets Heads of 'Action Squads'

Plane Is Forced To Turn From Airport Here

Disappointed Crowds Wait in Vain Outside 'G. W. T. W.' Party

The best-laid plans of Hollywood's star publicity men went glimmering off into the fog last night as the plane bearing a load of glamorous stars here for the anniversary showing of "Gone With the Wind" couldn't find the landing field in a blanket of mist and finally was forced to scamper dolefully away into the night toward Augusta, where the ship landed at last—at long last.

After heartbreaking weather delays all along the line as they sped 2,000 miles across country to be here for a 15-minute appearance at Loew's Grand theater they arrived over municipal airport at 9:09—12 hours off their original schedule, and five minutes too late to sit down at all.

If they had gotten in at 9:04 there would have been a ceiling of 300 feet or more, plenty of landing room for Pilot Charles Dolson, their aerial director from their last stop at Nashville.

Overlooks Field Twice

Twice in 15 suspenseful minutes Dolson wheeled the big ship over the field, nosing her down and feeling for a hole in the mist. Twice the man in the control tower saw him overshoot the field and talked him off.

The fog, airport watchers say, was rolling up and down like a theater curtain.

The ceiling was shifting by the minute from zero to 100 feet to 200, and nearly up to 300, the limit under which the ship could land.

But each time as she wheeled in, feeling for the earth like a big blind bird, it dropped again, and finally, fearing a third attempt, they told Captain Dolson, for the sake of their nerves, to land out of there for Augusta, where there was decent area of clear air above the earth. In fact, visibility was 10 miles at Augusta.

He lammed, with 200 gallons of gasoline in the tanks, sufficient for a flight of four hours and 20 minutes. If the bouncing fog that thwarted them at Atlanta followed them to Augusta, they could go on to Columbia or Charleston, S. C., or back to Macon, or even to Jacksonville.

They didn't have to. Fifty-three minutes later the ship set down at Augusta. The Scarlett O'Hara of "Gone With the Wind," stepped off, Laurence Olivier, Miss Leigh's husband, stepped off. Alfred Hitchcock, the famed and corpulent director, waddled off. Miss Deezy Scott, of The Constitution, and Ernest Rogers, of the Journal, descended. A hairdresser brought up the rear.

It was 10:43 o'clock. It was about the time Miss Leigh was supposed to step out on the stage at Loew's Grand and cut the mammoth birthday cake that marked "Gone With the Wind's" big birthday party, before a perfumed crowd, bedecked in furs, with orchids in their hair.

But Atlanta was burning, and Scarlett was 138 miles away.

A STAR IN HER FIRST APPEARANCE—Louella Stone, "Miss Anniversary" for the "Gone With the Wind" birthday premiere, stepped into the shoes of the missing Vivien Leigh last night and cut the birthday cake for the premiere audience. Miss Leigh's plane was unable to land at Candler field and proceeded to Augusta.

City, in 18 Years, Gives Help To 400 Opportunity Families

Great Majority of Those Aided Become Self-Supporting.

By FRANK DRAKE.

On 18 Christmas mornings, Atlantans, leaden-hearted mothers and fathers and pinched-faced boys and girls who make up the Opportunity families have awakened to find joy and security awaiting them.

They have awakened to find that generous donors to the Ten Opportunity fund had guaranteed them a new chance in life—had agreed to give them a "break" in their efforts to lick adversity and be absolutely self-sustaining. Do you doubt that that kind of Christmas present would fail to bring happiness and make hearts full of gratitude and appreciation?

This is the 19th Christmas season that The Constitution, in cooperation with the Family Welfare Society, has appealed to you to help the Opportunity families win independence. Atlantans have never failed.

In the 18 years that the Ten Opportunity campaign has been offered, Atlantans have contributed a total of $92,000. The money went to help more than 400 hard-pressed families defeat such overwhelming problems as death, injury, sickness, desertion and other difficulties which cold fate tossed them as their cross in life.

Majority Make Good.

Of course, every single one of the Opportunity families did not make the grade. Some of them, it turned out, couldn't face the responsibility all the way through the trying battle. Some brave, struggling mothers and fathers died even as hope was shining brightest. For some of these four hundred, life had other blows left to keep them over. But the MAJORITY made good and within a comparatively short time after being helped were able to go on alone.

Few indeed are the ones who

Opportunity No. 5

"Goodbye, darling; maybe you won't be seeing me again," Mr. B. said one morning as he stood in the doorway.

Mrs. B. said nothing. They had had a tiff that morning last February. About nothing important. It was just one of those things that some married couples run up against, have out, and it's over.

But Mr. B. didn't come home that night from work. He hasn't come home yet. Mrs. B. and her son, Bob, eight, and her daughter, Erma, three, had been deserted. They didn't know it then. That night Mrs. B. called all the hospitals and the police, and the next day she looked everywhere Mr. B. might have been. He hadn't been anywhere she looked.

And so, Mrs. B. and Bob and Erma are Christmas Opportunity No. 5—an abandoned family.

Mrs. B. and her husband had had difficulties during the previous year, but Christmas last year seemed to wipe them out. Nothing had occurred to intimate to her that he would leave her. When he did, she was so shocked it took days for her to collect herself. And now it's taking weeks and months for her to solve the problem that has been left her. How to feed and clothe and house Bob and Erma and herself?

For a long time, friends and relatives helped. They helped beyond the limit of their ability—and of their endurance. Mrs. B. finds that they avoid her now. They don't like to see her suffer—so they don't look.

Food and money for her rent are Mrs. B.'s main problem this Christmas. She desperately needs at least $25 a month to keep her small family from starving! She is your Opportunity No. 5, Atlantans. Give something to help!

Mrs. B. is only 28. She is willing to work, though inexperienced. She had a temporary job this fall until Bobby got so sick she had to give it up to stay with him for a time. He had pneumonia. Mrs. B. has a tremendous problem to solve for herself and her son and daughter—how to be the breadwinner. Can't you help her?

Permits Issued For Buildings Most in Decade

South Atlantic States Show Increase of 25 Per Cent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Building permits issued in 215 leading cities aggregated $102,539,657 in November, the largest for that month in the past 10 years, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The cumulative total for the first 11 months of 1940 also was the largest in a decade. Of $101,087,240 in November, 1939, but declined 25.2 per cent from the large October volume of $137,159,305.

The South Atlantic states showed the best increase, 25.8 per cent.

For the first 11 months the building permit total amounted to $1,249,114,694, an increase of 7.3 per cent over $1,164,158,313 a year ago.

South Atlantic states again reported the greatest gain, 23.2 per cent, closely followed by 22.4 in the mountain area and 16.1 in the east central region.

Atlanta Is Just Blob of Light To Reporter With Flying Stars

By DEEZY SCOTT.

Constitution Staff Writer.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—A tiny blob of light at the municipal airport was all "Scarlett" could see of Atlanta after crossing the continent to make her second bow to society in the "Gone With the Wind" city.

And Vivien Leigh, far from being a temperamental star who thrives on late entrances, was terribly upset over not making an entrance at all tonight.

So was everyone else on the chartered plane which was also bringing Alfred Hitchcock, famed English director; Laurence Olivier,

Louella Stone 'No. 1 Star' at G.W.T.W. Party

'Miss Anniversary' Carries On for Missing 'Scarlett.'

By LEE ROGERS.

Louella Stone, chosen "Miss Anniversary" and destined—at best—to play second fiddle to Vivien Leigh, stepped into the role of the missing screen "Scarlett" at "Gone With the Wind's" birthday party last night and carried on like a seasoned trouper for the glory of the movie companies and the British Relief. It was an all-Atlanta show.

The birthday premiere was to have been a precedent-setting achievement in motion picture exploitation annals. It turned out to be a perfect setting for an ambitious Atlanta girl wanting to get into the movies. It was a dream come true.

She was a star in her first public stage appearance. Up until two minutes before she went on the stage at intermission of the four-hour "Gone With the Wind," she thought she would be just an added attraction to Vivien Leigh, finding some place in the spotlight after the introductions of Laurence Olivier, and Alfred Hitchcock.

Broadcast Interrupted.

Backstage drama in real life, it was. Film officials were rushing from front the theater to backstage. Definite word came that the plane carrying the stars couldn't land as the first half of the film ended. Robert F. Madox, his whole program changed, walked out on the stage in front of the curtain and read a message from Leslie Howard, whose scheduled broadcast from London was also interrupted by the bad weather. Then he introduced Mayor Hartsfield.

The mayor broke the bad news to the audience. They took it in good nature. He explained how the plane had attempted to land and then had been ordered to Augusta. But he promised a show, nevertheless. Susan Myrick, who coached the film players in southern accent, for "Gone With the Wind," told of her Hollywood experiences.

Bouquets for Author. There were big bouquets of roses for Margaret Mitchell, the author, seated in the audience, and for Miss Myrick. Then the mayor presented the star of the show, Miss Anniversary—Louella Stone. There were roses for her.

All the time the audience was seeing this, the electrician backstage was ad libbing on the light switches. He had a cue sheet cut to the original program. He was on his own when it came to turning on the spots.

As the Bethel choir sang "God Bless America," the newsreel camera was turned on the audience itself and then the fadeout. Incidentally, "Gone With the Wind" is still a pretty good show.

Warship May Take Envoy's Body Home

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The unexpected death of Lord Lothian, British ambassador, created the possibility tonight that a United States warship might transport his body through the Atlantic war zone to his embattled homeland.

Officials, however, awaited word from Lothian's relatives before arranging a funeral for the 58-year-old bachelor diplomat, who died of uremic poisoning at 1 a. m. (Atlanta time).

In view of wartime conditions, it was believed that a decision would be left up to President Roosevelt should burial in England be desired.

The President sent King George VI a message expressing shock at the death of a quarter century.

"I am very certain that if he had been allowed by Providence to leave us a last message," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "he would have told us that the greatest of all efforts to retain democracy in the world must and will succeed."

(A few hours before he died, Lothian appealed for United States war aid to Britain.)

Italians Attack Move To Call Twice and Lose State Assembly Two Positions Annually Seen

Greeks Claim Capture of Many Prisoners, War Materials.

By The Associated Press.

ATHENS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Mussolini's men sprang two counterattacks on the northern Albanian battlefield today only to wind up with the loss of their original positions, the Greeks reported tonight.

Capture of a large number of prisoners and war materials was claimed.

Military dispatches from the front said these thwarted thrusts, made at separate points in the snow-carpeted mountains, were the only serious resistance encountered by the Greeks anywhere during the day.

Resistance Crushed.

The Greek southern army has crushed "desperate" Italian resistance in the region of Tepeleni and the coastal town of Chimara, northeast of that town, capturing a considerable number of Italy's Alpine troops, a government spokesman said.

The drive toward both Tepeleni and the coastal town of Chimara went on without setback, he added.

There were unconfirmed reports that an Italian colonel of Alpine troops was one of those who had fallen in the day's fighting.

"Thrusts against the Italian army continue in the direction of Chimara," the spokesman says. "More to the right the Italians are in retreat in the direction of Tepeleni. In this region the resistance has been stiff and sometimes desperate but has been crushed."

"Further to the right the Italians offered strong resistance. They employed Alpine troops. Nevertheless our army was able to occupy one after another of the heights which select units defended, and we captured a considerable number of them."

Air Raids Hit Italy.

Italian prisoners were quoted as saying the British and Greek air forces had forced the Fascists to abandon the airbases at Durazzo, main Italian port of debarkation, and Tirana. Temporary air bases were reported under construction farther behind the lines.

A reconnaissance pilot also brought back a report that bombing had made Valona, secondary port of entry into Albania, virtually useless for large vessels, with piers and jetties pulverized.

Rome Says Sidi Barrani Lost; Minimize Defeat. ROME, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The Rome radio conceded tonight the loss of the Italian Egyptian base of Sidi Barrani to the British, the speaker remarking: "For the moment General Wavell (the British commander) has captured Sidi Barrani. What of it?"

By The Associated Press.

Italian newspapers warned the Italian people last night against "false news of imaginary catastrophes" for Italian arms, which, it was charged, British agents inside Italy are spreading in an attempt to destroy morale with a "war of nerves."

The warning coincided with Prime Minister Churchill's announcement that the British have driven the Italian invaders from virtually all of the Egyptian coast line, seized more than 20,000 prisoners—probably thousands more—and the Royal Navy and air force are pouring fire and steel upon the last exits from that area of Fascist disaster.

Old Street Fighters.

In Rome, widespread publication was given to news that Adachi Serena, secretary of the Fascist party, had talked with former leaders of Fascist "action squads," the party's street fighting forces in the early days of Fascism.

Virginio Gayda, frequent voice of Premier Mussolini, used three columns in Il Giornale d'Italia to accuse British agents of combining with the foreign radio to retail "insidious" reports of Italian reverses.

In an attack on Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Roberto Farinacci, editor of Regime Fascista, harked back to the marshal's recent resignation as chief of the general staff and indicated that Badoglio was telling friends he had opposed the Greek campaign from the start and that more divisions were needed to launch it than he possessed.

Blames Badoglio.

"It is well, then," said Farinacci, "that it be known that 'someone' (presumably meaning Badoglio) assumed the undertaking without reservations to carry out the action to the finish with the forces already existing in Albania. Everything else is contrary to the truth."

He stressed that no one must blame the "political command," in the hands of Il Duce, for the reverses in Greece and Albania, since "it was the duty of the technical military organization to carry out the war."

Speaking of the Egyptian campaign which was hailed as a victory of the "first order," Churchill said "it would not be surprising if at least the best part of three Italian divisions, including numerous Blackshirt formations, had been either destroyed or captured." An Italian division usually runs from 14,000 to 17,000 men. The total number of Italians in Egypt has been estimated at 80,000.

It's 'Lucky Friday the 13th' For Atlanta Christmas Buyers

Maybe you are one of the thousands who have to keep one eye on the budget while the other one runs down the Christmas list. If you are, you are lucky too. For the store people realize that there are many who must make a short purse go a long way. And they've got something in every department priced to fit a pocketbook that may be beginning to grow a little slender from Christmas buying.

The Georgia Power Company and the Suburban Coach Company are helping make it a lucky day too. They are offering free rides to town between 9 and 10 o'clock. That means you haven't much time to lose. Let the dishes go till later. Forget about doing the house this morning. Grab your hat, your shopping list, and the paper (to tell you where to find what you want) and be on your way. There's a car or a bus waiting at the corner.

It's Friday the Thirteenth, all right. But this time it's Lucky Friday.

Virgin Islands' Refugee Plan Develops Snag

Ickes for It But Says State Department Still Is Undecided.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—An apparent hitch developed today over a proposal by the Virgin Islands to offer shelter there to European political refugees.
Secretary of the Interior Ickes told his press conference that he favored the plan but that the State Department could not persuade itself to support it.
Secretary Hull, in turn, told his press conference, in answer to a question:
"I don't know anything about it."
Both referred to a resolution adopted by the islands' civic council and forwarded to the White House and to the Interior Department offering a home on the islands to self-supporting refugees from Europe's wars.

"Naturally," Ickes said, "the Virgin Islands couldn't take care of many refugees, but even a few lives saved from firing squads or concentration camps are worthwhile in these days—if only as an evidence of our good will and our willingness to do what we can in a tragic world situation."

Two 'Shine Stills Seized in Baldwin

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Dec. 12. Production of "moonshine" whisky in Baldwin county was dealt a severe blow yesterday when Sheriff W. L. Harrison and Deputy L. D. Stancill destroyed two 100-gallon capacity copper distilleries.
The stills had been in operation only a short time, the sheriff said. They were found in the Meriwether community.
The "stills" were built together, Mr. Harrison said, and were operated simultaneously. They were capable of producing an estimated 500 gallons of whisky a week. The raid saved the federal government approximately $1,400 per week in taxes if the "stills" had been operated on this basis, the sheriff said.

Miles of Shelves Built at Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 12.—(UP)—Harvard University must provide between two and three miles of new book shelves each year to keep pace with its rapidly growing collection, Librarian K. D. Metcalf reports.
He says the university will need four new buildings in the "immediate future" to accommodate the library, which is doubling in size about every 20 years.
The four new units would provide sufficient book shelving for 30 years, according to the plans.
In addition to a new rare book library now under construction, Metcalf says the university hopes to co-operate with other New England libraries in building a storage plant with an underground book-stack of 2,000,000 volumes in the southeast corner of Harvard yard. The underground stack would be connected with Widener Library by tunnels and endless belt conveyors.

Resolution in Congress Would Set Thanksgiving

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's power to designate a Thanksgiving day would be taken away under a resolution introduced today by Representative Patrick, Democrat, Alabama.
Patrick's resolution would officially designate the first Thursday after the third Sunday of November annually as Thanksgiving Day and request the President to proclaim it as such. It would not leave the designation to the President's discretion.
Had Patrick's resolution been effective this year, November 21, the "early Thanksgiving" date proclaimed by the President, would have been the statutory date also.

10 Opportunity Charities Aid 400 Families

had to come back asking for more aid! The Constitution is proud of the fact that so many Opportunity families became self-supporting with the help that Atlantans gave them when they needed it most.
Opportunity families are, in a way, selected families. They are chosen to be your Christmas Opportunities because their need for money is great—but also because they have problems other than lack of money which their own stamina and backbone can whip, if they try.
"Balance Wheel" Dollars.
You are asked to contribute the "balance wheel" dollars—the money that means they will be fed and housed while they endeavor to win out over the other problems. Without that money, sick mothers and fathers worry so much about how they are going to take care of their children that they cannot overcome illness, learn new trades, get jobs and earn the wages they must be to self-supporting.
See how much it means to these storm-tossed families to have your hand helping them over the worst spots? Last Christmas 40 families were "adopted" for a year to give them a chance. So many won out and no longer needed help that a total of 82 families were aided during the year!
Over the years, it has taken an average of $230 a year for each family. Some families needed only a few dollars. Some needed as high as $900. The needs vary according to the size of the families and the kind of life the families have been used to in the past before they needed your assistance.
If a man who has been earning $6,000 a year finds himself bowled over and needing help to get back on his feet, you can't put him and his family in a $10-a-month house and expect him to have the confidence and appearance to win himself a new job comparable to his old one. He must be helped in a way that will let him hold his chin up!
New Lease on Life.
Last year just such a man was "adopted" for $900 by an Atlantan. That Opportunity man immediately took a new lease on life. He hadn't been able to get any kind of job. But when he felt secure and encouraged, he went right out and got a position paying a good salary. He needed help for only a few months!
The money that had been given for him then went to help other families during the year.
The Ten Opportunity fund is always busy. When one family doesn't need it, another is substituted, and on and on in that way. That is why, when you "adopt" a family for a year, your contribution is likely to help two, three, possibly four families in 12 months.
It has in the past and it will in the future. Won't you send a Christmas gift to the Opportunity families this year? It's worthwhile because it helps make self-supporting, self-respecting citizens out of people who might become just names on the permanent relief rolls.
Hurry a donation, no matter how big or small, to Hugh H. Trotter, vice president and business manager of The Constitution, who is treasurer of the Ten Opportunity fund. Every cent counts!

His report, covering the fiscal year ending last July 1, said there had been satisfactory improvement during this period "in numbers and efficiency of the Marine Corps Reserve."

English Club Hears Talk by Ralph Jones

Edward McNair, of Commercial High, Is Elected President.

Edward McNair, of Commercial High school, has been elected president of the Atlanta English Club for the ensuing year.

Ralph Jones, associate editor of

The Atlanta Constitution, spoke to the club on his experiences in England during the days preceding and following the declaration of war and told of the zigzag return trip across the Atlantic. After a week in blacked-out London and a trans-Atlantic voyage on a blacked-out liner, he said the highway lights he saw along Long Island as the ship approached New York looked more beautiful than any calendar of events for 1941 was announced and includes regular meetings on February 11, April 8, October 14 and December 9.

Biggest event of 1941, however, will be the national convention of the National Council of Teachers of English, which will be held in Atlanta during the Thanksgiving season next fall. Members of the Atlanta English Club, under the leadership of Paul Farmer, of Boys' High school, retiring president, were instrumental in bringing the convention here, and will play a major role in planning the program and making arrangements.

Other officers elected by the English Club are Mrs. F. E. Garnett, Bass Junior High school, first vice president; Mrs. Claudius Taylor, Girls' High school, second vice president; Maribel Richardson, Murphy Junior High school, third vice president; Elsie Gibbs, Joe Brown Junior High school, recording secretary; Virginia Smith, West Fulton High school, corresponding secretary, and Dice Anderson Jr., Georgia Tech, treasurer.

AZALEA TRAIL LENGTHENED.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 12.—(UP)

Mobile's famed 17-mile Azalea trail is being enhanced by addition of a two-and-one-half-mile Parkway, costing $27,000, which will contain 2,700 five-year-old azalea plants.

SPEAKER—James Scott Kemper, of Chicago, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who will speak at the annual meeting of the Associated Industries of Georgia at 7 o'clock, December 16, at the Piedmont Driving Club.

A new method for removing about 85 per cent of the static on a radio receiver is described as especially effective on short wave bands.

Kemper, Head Of U. S. C. of C., To Speak Here

300 Industrial Leaders of State Will Hear Address Monday.

James Scott Kemper, of Chicago, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will be the guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Associated Industries of Georgia at 7 o'clock December 16 at the Piedmont Driving Club.

The membership of the organization consists of nearly 300 industrial leaders from all parts of the state, headed by C. S. Broome, of Atlanta, and formed to effect co-operation among the industries and trade associations of the state with respect to the general welfare of Georgia.

Other aims and objects of the association are: to promote better understanding between management, labor and government of the problems confronting industry due to increasing taxes and bureaucratic regulations; to act as a clearing house with respect to matters affecting other trade associations; modification of governmental regulations; to study proposed legislation concerning industry, and to promote development and conservation of the state's natural resources.

Election Planned.

A meeting of the members will be held at 12:30 o'clock, December 16, at the Biltmore hotel and new officers will be elected. They will be presented at the banquet to be given for members and their wives and dates.

Retiring officers, who will act as hosts at the banquet with Broome, are: W. B. Elcock, of Rockmart and Atlanta; M. E. Dyess, of Augusta; T. L. Anderson, of Savannah; and J. T. Phillips, of Albany, vice presidents; Norman E. Elasa, of Atlanta, treasurer, and Slater E. Marshall, executive secretary. Directors include: W. H. Wright, of Atlanta; Don Hancock, of Marietta; H. M. McCulloch, of Rossville; E. R. Paris, of Atlanta; H. L. Litchfield, of Tate; Henry Estes, of Gainesville; Landon Thomas, of Augusta; C. S. Castelleberry, of Augusta; Philip Morgan, of Savannah; M. E. Cody, of Savannah; M. L. Rue, of Brunswick; Walter A. Richards, of Columbus; E. F. Cook, of West Point; R. P. Shapard Jr., of Griffin, and William Eager, of Valdosta.

Shop H. J. Mikell will offer the invitational President Broome will act as toastmaster. Musical entertainment will be furnished by a stringed instrumental quartet, under the direction of Bill Clark.

Subject of Speech.

Kemper will speak on "Facing 1941." He is a well-known insurance man, starting in business 33 years ago in Indiana and Ohio as a special agent. Within a few years' time he was made an executive in his company, the Central Manufacturers Insurance Company, and in 1921 organized the James S. Kemper & Company, of which he is president.

He is a trustee of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, a director of the Olivet Institute, the Y. M. C. A., in Chicago, and the Northwestern University Associates. He is on the Advisory Board of the Chicago Safety Council, and is a member of the executive committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

The association will plan its activities for the coming year at the luncheon meeting, making an effort to create confidence in industry and private enterprise to make jobs for men and women now carried on relief rolls. The removal of obstacles to create better living conditions is one of the main aims of the organization.

ECONOMIC UPSET FOUND BY KEMPER

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—James A. Kemper, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said today that entrance of the United States into the European war might so dislocate the American social and economic system as to fasten upon the country some permanent "form of closely regulated Socialistic economy."

In a speech prepared for a luncheon meeting of the Merchants Association of New York, Kemper said he believed Britain already had endangered its system of free enterprise.

He said that war, for this country, could bring a federal debt alone of more than the assessed valuation of all the real property in the country and added:

"If the mortgage of public debt were to reach the point where it approximated the total savings of all the people of the future would be dark indeed."

Electric Power Seen as Nazis' Achilles Heel

British Science Journal Thinks RAF May Cause Shortage.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE, Associated Press Science Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Nature, Britain's official science journal, says Germany's electric power plants may be her Achilles heel.

It will have been noticed, Nature says, that electrical power stations in Germany frequently are the targets of royal air force bombers.

There is a special reason—the fact that Germany more than any other European nation relies on electric power.

Nature thinks that Germany's war progress has been intimately tied up with increase in electric power.

Nazi economy started in 1933 with about 25,000 million kilowatt hours of electric power. In 1938 this had risen to 55,000 million, or more than double in five years.

Figures Unavailable.

No German figures have been available since 1938, but Nature calculates that with the "Ersatz" program, which is perhaps more than ever needed under war conditions, Germany will require about 100,000 million kilowatts by 1943 to keep up her program.

Nature asserts that Germany has been unable to meet increased demands in the last two years for electrical power needed in Germany's increased production of synthetic materials. These are declared to require disproportionately large amounts of electricity, compared with natural products of the same sort.

Germany's great war machine is riding on synthetic rubber. To make a ton of this rubber, Nature says, require 40,000 kilowatt hours of electric power.

Synthetic gasoline, from coal, under the German process, is good enough to fly even military planes, but one ton of this fuel takes 3,000 kilowatt hours of electricity.

Four War Materials.

Four war materials alone took two-fifths of Germany's electric power of two years ago. These were synthetic rubber, synthetic gasoline, magnesium and aluminum.

"This indicates," Nature concludes, "to what extent German war production relies on electricity, and how a shortage or an interruption of electricity production is bound to hamper output."

It takes five years, this science journal estimates, to build a large scale electric power plant in Germany. Another hampering fact is that five-sixths of Germany's electricity relies on coal; that is, coal-fired steam boilers.

Germany before the war was importing from Britain 20 million tons of coal annually. The Germans have large coal supplies available, but their needs seem to be jumping. Nature declares that Germany now is using lower grades of ore in her iron industry, and that this fact alone will soon require a 30 per cent increase in coal consumption for the iron furnaces.

The Chinese name for the disease we know as malaria is chang-chi, meaning "malicious air"—not unlike our name malaria, which comes from the Italian for "bad air."

Indian 'Sacrifice Rock' Found in Pennsylvania
FINLEYVILLE, Pa., Dec. 12.—(UP)—An Indian "sacrifice rock," pocked with holes apparently used as containers for blood, has been discovered near Sellersburg, along the Kiskiminetas river, by Chief George S. Fisher, of Union Valley, member of the Pennsylvania Indian Research.

Chief Fisher said the rock measured eight feet across by 12 inches in thickness and has 76 holes, each of them capable of holding about a quart of blood.

He reported also finding in the same vicinity a huge mortar weighing about 60 pounds.

The Pennsylvania Indian Research has planned a pilgrimage to the site of the find, and will take a cast of the rock.

Nativity Tableaux Unveiled in Dublin

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. DUBLIN, Ga., Dec. 12.—The most elaborate display ever set up here was unveiled at exercises this afternoon, revealing a replica of the Bethlehem scene on the court house square as part of this year's Christmas observance.

The scene, with life-size figures of the Christ child and Madonna, the wise men from the East, their camels and the beasts of the manger, is overtopped by the star of Bethlehem suspended from the court house tower. It was constructed at a cost of approximately $1,500.

At the exercises, Christmas lights surrounding the square and throughout the business area were turned on to usher in the holiday season. The activity scene was illuminated by the huge five-foot neon star and thousands of varicolored lights strung in aluminum-coated pines about the square.

REPAIRING TOYS. CORDELE, Ga., Dec. 12.—Members of the Cordele fire department again are repairing and repainting toys this year as a part of the annual Empty Stocking program for Crisp county.

Any Nazi Deal Poor Gamble, Swing Asserts

Appeaser Sentiment in U. S. Based on Mistake, He Says.

Any sentiment in this country for appeasing Hitler arises from mistaken premises. Moreover, the present German rulers have not demonstrated any practical ability to deal with normal economic problems—their internal "cure" has been to end unemployment by a national armaments and military program conducted within a highly policed state. Both morally and intellectually, to deal with the Nazis is a poor gamble.

These were among the views expressed here yesterday by Raymond Gram Swing, commentator on world affairs, whose more than 20 years abroad as an active newspaperman gave him daily, immediate opportunity to judge Hitler's group both before and after they came to power.

Bid for Power.
"Those who try to sell us the Nazi revolution as a revolution have made their choice," he declared. "They are bidding to share Hitler's power. And when they imply it is the inevitable good, they are trying to sap men's minds with the worst of all social positions, inaction."
"There is one completely effective answer to them: That the rest of us choose freedom, not only the freedom which we now enjoy, even if we have not used it wisely, but the freedom to grow more wise and more free."

Of the appeasers' proposals he said:
"It is not true that we can secure our freedom by getting along with Hitler, and then, as naively suggested, by improving democracy within our boundaries. If an 80-ton tank is bearing down on one's house, one doesn't defend it by hanging better curtains in the living room window or by giving the domestic help a box-spring bed. One defends it with antitank guns."

Speaks at Spelman.
Swing delivered the third annual John Hope lecture in Sisters Chapel at Spelman College, and returned immediately to New York.

He strongly assailed talk of "inevitability" by which, he said, individuals are persuaded to believe they can do nothing to affect the course of great world currents.

"This is defeat before the expenditure of any effort," he said. "It is defeat before sacrifice."

He called the belief a superstition and likened it to the early "elaborate system of gods and devils by which the individual was mortgaged" because of fears to test his powers.

Marietta Party Planned For Needy Children

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. MARIETTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—The annual Christmas tree for Marietta's needy children will be held Christmas Eve at Brumby Recreation Center with the American Legion Auxiliary as sponsors.

Nine hundred children were entertained at last year's party and each was given a well-filled basket to take home for Christmas. Local citizens and merchants contribute to the Auxiliary fund to assure a successful occasion.

Colonel Marks Birthday By Giving, Not Receiving

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Dec. 12. Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Muldrow, former administrative official of Georgia Military College here, who is at Camp Jackson, S. C., on active duty with the Army, celebrated his birthday this week. Following his annual custom, Colonel Muldrow sent all members of his family presents on the occasion.

8,500 LIGHTS ON CHRISTMAS TREE—Christmas comes but once a year, and when Matthew F. Ruane, florist of Newton, Mass., gets his electric light bill, he'll probably be glad it doesn't come more often. As Christmas decorations in front of his home and greenhouses, Ruane has illuminated trees with 8,500 colored lights. Trees are so full of lights they look like the leaves are aflame. The lights made their debut last night, staging a glowing ironic premiere heralding "Peace on Earth" for 1940.

Stiffer Medical Exams Urged For Draftees

Inductees Have Been Turned Down at Reception Centers.

Medical advisors to local draft boards in Georgia were told yesterday to exercise more caution in giving preliminary physical examinations to registrants in order to reduce the number of inductees who are later turned down at reception centers because of disabilities.

The order was included in selective service headquarters statements, with these reports:

1. Two new antitank companies will be recruited Sunday afternoon at the new army on Confederate avenue. A recruiting station will be set up and the units will be assigned to the streamlined 179th Field Artillery. Enlistments will be for one year.

2. The names of several "suspected" draft dodgers have been given federal authorities for prosecution. Local boards were asked to continue in their vigilance in furnishing state headquarters with information leading to the location of registrants who fail to answer draft summonses.

3. Lieutenant Colonel Percival S. Moses reported that more than 10 Georgia firms had expressed to him their desire to co-operate with the selective service law. Colonel Moses is an advisor on industrial deferments, and pointed out that some firms are planning to pay drafted employees the difference between their ordinary salaries and Army pay.

In a letter to all medical examiners sent yesterday, it was urged that doctors pay more attention to the minimum army standards, and particularly to minimum height and weight rules. Dental minimum standards for the army are very low, and the letter said doctors should pay careful attention to teeth.

Medical examiners to local boards and medical advisors to appeal boards serve without pay. Each registrant placed in Class 1 must be examined before being sent to army posts. These examinations are made without fees by appointed medical examiners.

Meanwhile, Fourth Corps Area headquarters prepared to announce the area draft quota for January, and the Georgia call for the same month. It is expected, officials said, that about 1,200 white registrants and 300 Negro registrants will be accepted for training next month.

In regard to dodgers, Lieutenant Colonel Cliff Hatcher, judge advocate of Georgia, and assistant director of selective service, stated that headquarters was doing "everything reasonable" to protect registrants who do not observe the law because of ignorance or honest carelessness.

"However," he said, "we are asking the courts to prosecute those men who are deliberately violating the draft law by giving false addresses, failing to show up when called and in other ways refusing to co-operate."

Indo-China, Thailand War Spreads to Interior

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Undeclared border warfare between French Indo-China and Thailand was reported to have spread to the interior of both territories with raids and counter-raids by rival air forces.

Officials here said that aircraft raided Saravani, in the center of this French colony, yesterday and that a retaliatory attack was made immediately on Udon and Sakonkorn airports, some 35 miles inside Thailand.

Atlanta 'Blob Of Light' From Stars' Plane

about 1,300 feet. By 9 o'clock the ceiling had dropped to 300 feet, and after circling the field, with Captain Dolson constantly in touch with the airport by radio, we were ordered to the alternate airport, Augusta.

The attempts at landing by instruments had failed, and so had the aim of a transcontinental flight.

There had been very little talk between the 20th Century Romeo and Juliet—Mr. and Mrs. Olivier—until the tense moments over Atlanta.

With weather in El Paso and Fort Worth, Texas, interminably detaining the stars, and lengthening a 16-hour trip into 28 hours by the time they reached Nashville, even the director and actors, who take a lot of physical punishment, admitted that they were dog-tired and settled down to rest on the final lap of the flight.

Mr. Olivier buried himself in a book and Vivien went to sleep, but not before telling us that she wanted to read the book, that it was hers, but he grabbed it first.

Attempt To Land.

After one try to get into the Atlanta airport everyone began talking at once. Stewardess Perkins said the landing would be attempted again, but Miss Leigh had already begun worrying about the quickest way home.

"If we can just go back to Nashville, we could make better connections to Los Angeles tonight. Could we possibly send the Atlanta branch of the British War Relief Society a message by radio telling them how disappointed we were in not being able to appear?" she asked.

Mr. Olivier closed his book and remarked on the beauty of the airport lights through the thick fog, and—if Director Alfred Hitchcock had anything to say during the attempted landings, his mumbles were inaudible.

No one showed the faintest sign of fear, but everybody, including the inaudible Mr. Hitchcock, were so excited that Stewardess Perkins was dizzy from trying to answer all questions.

Before giving up the attempt to land, we were trying to see if we could catch a glimpse of ground, loudly naming our preferences of cities if we failed to get in at Atlanta.

The choice was made, of course, by the airways traffic control, and we landed in Augusta on a field where the runway is being paved.

Runway Is Rough.

The temporary runway was slightly rough, but Dolson brought us down without a scratch.

The stars had wanted to return to Nashville, but Captain Dolson explained that after we left, the ceiling dropped too low for us to return, and Macon, which was the next alternate stop, was also closed due to weather conditions.

Before leaving Nashville the captain had said he filled the eight-passenger ship with gasoline, because we might even have to go to Jacksonville, once we were in the air.

The Oliviers, who are still newlyweds—they married August 30—have been working in Alexander Korda's "Lady Hamilton," and engagements in Hollywood permitted them only two days for the Atlanta trip.

They are over-anxious to get home as quickly as possible. Their party spent tonight in Augusta, and hope to be back in California, fickle weather permitting, at least by early Saturday morning.

Ex-Bunco Chief Named in New U.S. Indictment

Floyd Woodward Is Charged With Six Specific Cases of Fraud.

Floyd P. Woodward, one-time chief of a million dollar Atlanta "bunco" ring who is in Fulton Tower awaiting trial on a 20-year-old mail fraud charge growing out of activities of the "ring," yesterday was named in a new federal grand jury indictment.

It charges six specific cases of alleged fraud—all of them more than 20 years ago.

Woodward was recently arrested in California after being a fugitive for nearly 20 years during which time H. N. Graham, postal inspector, trailed him back and forth across the country.

Until yesterday, only one federal mail fraud indictment was pending against Woodward. All of the others had been nolle prossed because witnesses were not available.

The new indictment lists the following victims and times of the alleged frauds:

B. F. Keys, October 14, 1919; J. A. Tutton, December 13, 1919;

George M. Wiley, April 12, 1920; R. A. Williams, December 27, 1919; R. W. Gillespie, June 1, 1920, and Noah L. Davis, November 13, 1920.

The alleged offenses, according to the indictment, occurred on these dates when Woodward mailed cashier checks and other papers to various banks throughout the country.

The long indictment explains the methods of "scheme" by which the victims are alleged to have been defrauded.

It listed Woodward's headquarters at that time as San Souci hotel, 59 1-2 Cone street, 45 Carnegie way, 45 1-2 Auburn avenue and 25 1-4 West Peachtree street.

"One place," the indictment points out, "was known as the United Turf Exchange and another as the International Stock Exchange to which victims would be lured and which 'exchange' would be rigged up, set up and made to appear as a broker's office."

Reynolds Heiress, 10, Given $25,000 a Year

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12.—(AP)—A yearly allowance of $25,000 for 10-year-old Anne Cannon Reynolds, II, for maintenance, education and support was granted in an orphan's court order today.

The court granted $5,000 yearly allowance for the seven-year period after the death of her father, Zachary Smith Reynolds, tobacco estate heir who died in 1932, and $25,000 yearly for the period beginning last fall.

Georgia Banks Mobilized for Defense Loans

Plan for Assigning Contracts Outlined at Meeting Here.

Georgia's banking resources were mobilized yesterday for full participation in the national defense lending program.

Called, at the instance of the American Bankers' Association, to a meeting sponsored by the Atlanta Clearing House Association, the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, and the Georgia Bankers' Association, the state's outstanding bankers heard from R. Clyde Williams, vice president of the First National Bank, how the defense lending program in Georgia and surrounding states will be organized.

Plan Outlined.

Williams outlined the procedure in the assignment to banks, trust companies and other financing institutions of contracts involving payment of money due or to become due from the federal government or any of its agencies.

For the first time in history the assignment of such contracts has become legal, under the assignment claims act of 1940. The unprecedented step was taken, Williams said, because of the desire of the national government to have the greatest possible number of defense loans supplied from private sources.

Support Pledged.

Support of the program by the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta was pledged by Vice President Malcolm M. Bryan.

Chairmen whose duty it will be to impart technical details to bankers and businessmen of their sections in regional conferences were named by Charles R. Bradford, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association. They are:

Athens: James White Jr., president, National Bank of Athens.

Dalton: George L. Rice, president, Hardwick Bank & Trust Company.

Elberton: Harry G. Thornton, president, First National Bank.

Augusta: Sherman Drawdy, vice president, Georgia Railroad Bank & Trust Company.

Brunswick: C. Holmes Sheldon, president, National Bank of Brunswick.

Macon: J. K. Hogan, vice president, First National Bank & Trust Company.

Valdosta: William L. Goodloe, executive vice president, First National Bank.

Atlanta: Mr. Williams.

Savannah: Albert C. Kline, cashier, Citizens & Southern National Bank.

Guests at Luncheon.

The bankers were guests of the Federal Reserve Bank at a luncheon. In addition to those named above, they included:

W. N. Shadden, Cartersville; Herbert Huckabee, Fort Valley;

C. R. Bradford, Monroe; R. J. Kennedy, Statesboro; Willis Johnson, West Point; D. J. Arnold, Griffin; W. Y. Atkinson, Newnan, and F. W. Blalock, Mills B. Lane Jr., Haynes McFadden, Freeman Strickland, W. S. Woods, H. Lane Young, William C. Curry, Frank H. Neely, and J. A. McCrory, all of Atlanta.

Gate City Guard Holds 'Final' Dress Affair

Members Elect Captain Emile Blum as New Commander.

Members of the Gate City Guard have strutted in their full dress uniforms for the last time, in 12 months at least, and climaxed that colorful occasion Wednesday night with the annual election of officers.

The Gate City organization is composed only of officers of 179th Field Artillery, Georgia National Guard, and that branch of the military service will begin a year of active training during the latter part of February.

The new club officers are Captain Emile Blum, commander; Major Edward Green, vice commander; Captain Ray Nixon, secretary; Lieutenant Colonel Leckie Mattox, Major Frank Kopf and Captain Dick Endicott were named to the board of trustees.

A resolution was passed at the meeting giving all officers of the 179th admission into membership in the Gate City Guard. Heretofore, officers were elected into the social club.

U. S. Shipyards Are Now Doing Capacity Work

Program Started Three Years Ago May Help Britain.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—A shipbuilding program begun in 1938 after Joseph P. Kennedy dynamited the facts out of the American merchant marine situation may enable America to respond to Great Britain's appeal for ships.

The ten-year, 500-ship program that was developed after Kennedy told congress and the nation what he thought of the state of the merchant marine sent a throb of new activity pulsing through the shipyards. It helped to ready them, partially, for the vastly expanded naval building program that was to follow.

And in the wake of this has come new demands for private commercial craft.

Great Burst.
It all adds up to the greatest burst of shipbuilding activity the nation has experienced since those frantic days of the World War, when it set out to bridge the Atlantic with ships—and after the war tucked the bridge away in harbors and isolated inlets to rot.

The whole picture is not to be gathered either by a study of Maritime Commission figures or by scanning the effervescent accounts of contracts that bubble through the pages of marine trade magazines. But, combined, the two give a sort of idea of what America has in stock and on order.

The Maritime Commission lists 24 active shipyards that are building ocean-going vessels. This is exclusive of Great Lakes shipyards and small yards building yachts, tugs, barges and small craft. Trade magazines list 109 such yards as getting contracts last month. Nor does the commission figure include the government's navy yards, busy on fighting craft as, for that matter, are quite a few of the private yards.

335 Ships Building.
Trade magazines say there were 335 commercial ships with a total tonnage of 1,500,000 under construction October 1. Of these, 183 with a tonnage of 1,500,000 were sea-going craft.

But with the single historical exception of Hog Island, ships have never been turned out on an assembly line. They take time in the building.

The Maritime Commission expected to build at the rate of 50 ships a year for ten years. It has stepped up that program contractually. In less than three years it has contracted for 179 ships. But in the same period it has got only 82 ships launched, and only 54 of these are commissioned, out on the seas doing their jobs.

All of these ships are built to specifications that have been worked over by the Navy. They are easily convertible to naval uses, so easily, in fact, that some of the private operators have complained that naval uses were better provided for in the plans than were the commercial purposes.

Tankers Taken Over.
Take tankers, for instance. Several have been built for the Standard Oil Company, and some of these have already been taken over by the Navy. By specification, they were twin-screw, 12,000-ton, 150,000-barrel, 13,500-horsepower, 18-knotters. They were the fastest, biggest, most powerful commercial tankers afloat. They had more speed, size and power than a commercial ship needed. But they fitted nicely into the growing United States Navy.

A combination cargo and passenger type ship takes 15 months to build. This time is cut to twelve months for a plain cargo ship. It can be cut to six months, if the lines of supply are wide open for the flow of materials, machinery and equipment. Or, in the fabulous days of Hog Island, when materials were pre-fabricated, the ships were pushed off the assembly lines into the water at the rate of one every 23 1/2 hours.

But Hog Island, first a swamp and now an airport, was converted not into a shipyard, but into a vast assembly plant. In a year, 250 buildings, 18 miles of road and 80 miles of railroad track were built to pour materials into the 50 shipways that laced its two miles of waterfront near Philadelphia. Behind the lines, 88 steel plants turned out plates for Hog Island hulls, and manufacturers ground out machinery and gear. The ships were smacked together as fast as the railroads could pour this pre-fabricated material into the yards. Many of the ships still afloat belong to that homely brood of 122 chicks hatched out at Hog Island in such a super-heated hurry.

Counting the Hog Islanders, the Shipping Board wound up the World War with 2,316 ships. It has been trying ever since to get rid of them, just now is beginning to scrape the bottom of the barrel. About 2,000 had been sold, scrapped, lost at sea or written off the rolls in one way or another by the time the board became the Maritime Commission.

When the war broke out in Europe last year the commission still had 107 cargo, six passenger and five refrigerator cargo ships left out of this aging batch. They had been gathering barnacles for almost 20 years in the harbors and inlets around Baltimore, New Orleans, the James and Patuxent rivers, and Bremerton, Wash. Fifty of these have been sold since the war started, nine since the first of November. The commission has just 68 left.

The same furious drive that pushed these off the ways has not yet touched the American shipbuilding industry, though yards are working at capacity and production is being stepped up. But some of them remember the painful sag which struck them after the World War boom. Some of the veterans eye the expansion with dread.

Supply Bottleneck.
However, experts say that whatever bottleneck may be slowing ship construction lies not in the yards themselves, but in the lines of supply back of the yards, chiefly in the production of engines, machinery and gears.

Considerable streamlining of the building process has been done. Experts speak of standardizing some of the equipment. The Maritime Commission has produced four types of specifications which save plan-drawing time and lop $100,000 to $250,000 off the cost in that way.

For shipbuilding in the past has generally been a tailoring to order process. The whims of the individual buyer were taken into consideration. The Maritime Commission specifications, though variable to meet different needs, yet provide something of a standard design.

Nothing like Hog Island has grown up yet, however, though a mild approach is being made by the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation in its plant at Pascagoula, Miss. It is not a shipyard in the ordinary sense. Much of the material that goes into the Pascagoula ships comes into the plant ready made from Birmingham steel and fabricating mills. What Pascagoula has is something of an assembly plant for ships.

Atlanta 'Black Magic' Fought By Magicians

Amateurs Want Honest Tricks; Not Corrupt Voodooism.

By DEEZY SCOTT.

Voodooism came to Atlanta with the Negroes from Africa, about 100 years ago, but it still flourishes among the colored population. From time to time the policemen find Negroes practicing voodooism, a form of witchcraft.

The tricksters in Atlanta, who practice harmless "white" magic, for entertainment, would like to remove the blight of the "black" side of their art. Among the survivors of ancient witchcraft daily practiced here are the sales of dream books for interpretation; fortune tellers peddling the correct "number" to play in the lotteries, and Negro charm makers who offer amulets to bring luck in love or ill luck to enemies.

The charms are made from herbs, goat's hair, toe-nails, bugs caught in cemeteries, and hundreds of other items. Anthony G. DeVaughn, past president of the Atlanta Society of Magicians and member of the Society of American Magicians and the International Brotherhood of Magicians, recently found an advertisement on his doorstep, circulated by a "black" magic worker.

... how to overcome your enemies—how to overcome bad luck of all kinds... gives you actual facts and immediate results, not just promises... how you can win the love of the one you desire... the exact days you will be lucky... were all offered for a quarter!

Defines "White" Magic.

Mr. DeVaughn, who neatly summed up the activities of magicians of both "white" and "black" tricks before the last meeting of the Atlanta Historical Society, also traced the coming of magic makers to Atlanta.

He defined "black" magic as "a claim to supernatural power, usually practiced with evil intent," and "white" magic as "the presentation of scientific phenomena in the form of illusions to surprise the senses, and solely for the purpose of entertainment and amusement."

The organization of the "white" magical fraternity here was begun 16 years ago, but as far back as 1887 famous magicians from the Orient, South America, and this country were making stage appearances here exhibiting the old art of "second sight" and working "magical wonders."

Trick With Eggs.

It was in 1867 that the famous Robert Houdini, not satisfied with his triumphs in the theater here, stopped an old Negro woman who was peddling boiled eggs.

"How do you sell your eggs, Auntie," he asked.

"Them eggs are a picayune apiece," she answered.

"Well, I'll try one," Houdini said, and breaking the egg he produced a new 25 cent piece from the yolk. After several repeat performances the old darkie refused to sell the great magician any more of her eggs, even for a dime.

And from time to time magicians appeared here during the last part of the nineteenth century exhibiting supposedly great supernatural powers and mind reading feats.

But it's the amateurs who have placed magic in the realm of honest entertainment in Atlanta. In the 1880's many young men paid hundreds of dollars cash to learn the secrets of such tricks as the mysterious cups and balls or the three-card monte. And not until 1907, with the arrival of Dr. Francis E. Van der Veer did magic become organized and honest here. While practicing medicine in New York he became personally acquainted with most of the outstanding professional and amateur magicians there, and on moving to Atlanta he had an extremely broad knowledge of the art of magic as well as a library of rare books on the subject.

Organized in 1924.

It was from Dr. Van der Veer and Julian Boehm, widely known amateur magician, that Atlanta became interested in magic as a hobby. Combining the city in search of others interested in the art, they found Sherwood B. Blodgett, Allan C. Gottschaldt, J. Edgar Hunnicut and Kenneth S. Keyes. These six men founded the Atlanta Society of Magicians in 1924.

lanta Society of Magicians in 1924.

The purpose of the society is to "foster and develop magic as an art; to make a study of the history of the art; and to stimulate originality." And the society has put Atlanta on the map of the magic world.

Sherwood Blodgett is known as the inventor of ingenious devices to aid magicians in producing illusions. Homer R. Hulse, president of the society, has invented more than 40 widely used stage illusions, including the vanishing phonograph, a magical growth of flowers, the wishing rod, the vanishing telephone, and the "comedy of errors." Mr. Hulse has also written books for magicians.

Mr. Van der Veer, who was known as the dean of southern magicians, developed many interesting magical experiments and mastered two of the most difficult and most ancient of all white magical effects—the cup and balls, and the Chinese linking rings.

Card From Roosevelt.

Julian Boehm, known to thousands of Atlantans for his benefit performances, prefers sleight of hand type of magic. In his library hangs a playing card bearing the signature of President Roosevelt. Mr. Boehm produced a card, chosen by the President and replaced in the deck, which was then thoroughly shuffled, from a nook on the other side of the room.

"Is this the card you selected?" Mr. Boehm asked.

"Right!" said President Roosevelt.

"That's good, 'cause I'd rather be right than president," the Atlantian replied.

In 1927, Asa Candler Jr. began a collection of magical apparatus which became the largest private collection in the world. He visited builders of magical illusions in a private car, and many of his secrets of operations were taught him by the well-known Howard Thurston, state magician, and Thayer, of Los Angeles. In Mr. Candler's collection were gruesome effects of decapitation, disembodiment, and burning alive. Several years before his death, Houdini presented Mr. Candler with an interesting illusion which he had used as the feature of his show for a number of years.

Rollare Eggleston, a past president of the Atlanta society, created a spirit cloak that bears his name, and other members who have made their contribution to magic are Dr. Cecil Stoddard and Lindsey Hopkins Jr. The membership is limited to 14 residents and several nonresidents of Atlanta. The two last initiates are a physician and a professor at Georgia Tech, who were given the mystic ritual last month.

Their names are withheld, but their magical names are "Gesma" and "Compeer," which, although they mean nothing to you, mean a great deal to those whose hobby is the magic art.

About 800 Delegates Expected for Three-Day Convention.

Georgia Baptists will hold their annual three-day convention in Atlanta next year, beginning November 11.

The Rev. J. W. Merritt, state secretary, announced the convention's executive committee selected Atlanta at its annual meeting here. Date of the convention previously had been decided on.

Merritt said about 800 delegates representing 2,500 Baptist churches in Georgia with a membership of approximately 500,000 would attend the session, at which various phases of the church's missionary, educational, and benevolent work in Georgia would be considered.

Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta, is convention president. Besides naming the 1941 convention city, the executive committee also adopted a $50,000 state missionary budget.

Peace Justice A Specialist In Matrimony

He'll Marry Couples Any Time of Day or Night.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.

In a remote corner of Fulton county, a section formerly known as Campbell county, lives a man who has more faith in the state of matrimony than almost any person in Georgia.

He lives in a little house, thrown up temporarily while his home, which burned last year, is being rebuilt. This home of his is no sanctum for wedding ceremonies. It isn't a luring place with signs similar to those in our neighboring states, which read something like, "Marriage licenses and ceremonies while you wait."

No. This is just a simple little farm house, sitting atop a small hill above a swamp, about a mile and a half from the pavement, some 20 miles from Atlanta.

But Miles W. Barge, the owner, is a justice of the peace, who specializes in marriages and he'll marry any couple, any time of the day or night, for any small amount—sometimes it costs him the three cents to mail the certificates back to the ordinary.

He'll marry anyone at any time—just to see them happy.

Mr. Barge knows about matrimony. He vouches for its good points. And who should know better than he? He has been married twice, is the father of six living children, and has four grandchildren. He was married by a preacher; but, naturally thinks high of J. P. marriages.

Forty years ago he was first elected justice of the peace. He has served off and on ever since. At one time he married more persons than did any three preachers in his county. That was during the time when Atlantans on runaway-marriage sprees frequented his home. Some still come today; but his work mostly is with neighboring farm folk.

When you drive into his yard at night—this is true of daytime, too, the hour which we chose—a long-legged spotted dog with a ferocious look on his face runs to greet you, or to plant his teeth in your shins. Barge claims that Sonny-boy won't harm any person; but when he lunged for our legs—well, we weren't so sure.

ENVOY—Admiral William O. Leahy, the United States' new ambassador to France, has no illusions about modern diplomacy. He doesn't believe too much in treaties as protection for any nation.

Admiral Leahy Holds Treaties 'No Protection'

New Envoy to France Has No Illusions About Diplomacy.

By REG INGRAHAM.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Admiral Daniel Leahy, the man chosen by President Roosevelt as this country's ambassador to what's left of France, has no illusions about modern diplomacy.

The doughty, retired sea-fighter made that plain on several occasions while holding down the navy's top-ranking post as chief of naval operations.

"To expect that modern diplomacy will safeguard the property of a nation is to expect too much," he said on one occasion. "To believe in the efficiency of pacts and treaties to protect us against international brigandage is a dream of visionaries."

On the other hand, officers who served with him both at sea and ashore are quick to attribute to him many qualities which they assert make him eminently fitted for the difficult task of guiding the United States' relations with aged Marshal Petain's French government at Vichy.

A "cold logician," they call him, who is well-rounded outside his profession, particularly in the field of world economics, and with a faculty for grasping details.

No Coincidence.

It was no mere coincidence, his friends insist, that President Roosevelt picked Leahy for the Vichy assignment after General John J. Pershing's physician forbade him to risk accepting it. When Leahy went to Puerto Rico as Governor in June, 1939—a couple of months before his retirement ended a 46-year career in the navy—it was in something of the role of a "trouble-shooter" and informed sources assert that the way the international picture is shaping up, he may be called upon to play the same role at Vichy.

Leahy was known in the fleet as one of the navy's ablest executives and also as one of its strictest disciplinarians. Officers who served under him, however, insist there was nothing of the martinet about him.

There's a story in naval circles, for instance, of an exasperated gun-punter aboard the Battleship New Mexico who had reason to appreciate Leahy's tolerance.

During gunnery practice, so the story goes, the crew in one of the turrets near the quarter deck had been greatly bothered by officers and men walking in front of the gun-sight at crucial moments.

Finally, when another obstruction blocked the sight, the gun pointer bellowed:

"Get the hell away from that sight."

The "obstruction" was Captain Leahy, the battleship's commanding officer. After the customary naval apologies had been extended by the officer in charge of the gun, together with a diplomatic foreword of the crew's earlier troubles, Leahy dismissed the incident with a gruff "Don't let it happen again." There is no record, though, that he ever blocked another gun-sight.

Many Decorations.

Beetle-browed and balding at 65, Leahy's face still stamps him as a sea-dog and his decorations are a chronicle of his country's wars, major and minor, since he entered the naval academy as a somewhat reluctant cadet back in 1893.

Born in Hampton, Iowa, May 6, 1875, Leahy as a boy had an abiding interest in the military history of the Civil War as a result of his grandfather's participation in it. Early in his life he wanted an army career and after being graduated from high school at Ashland, Wis., he sought an appointment to the United States Military Academy. His congressman informed him, however, that he had no appointments open at West Point but would be happy to nominate him to the naval academy.

Leahy admits now he's glad things turned out that way—especially since he climaxed his naval career by reaching the Navy's highest office.

From the peace-loving middle west, young Leahy was catapulted into war immediately after his graduation from Annapolis, being assigned to the battleship Oregon in the Pacific. He is one of the few living men who made the historic dash around the horn in that warship to participate in the battle of Santiago de Cuba in the Spanish-American War.

"Quite a Ship."

To this day he refutes disparaging comparisons of the Oregon with the Navy's battlewagons of today.

"She was quite a ship in those days," he insists.

When the United States first entered the World War, Leahy was in command of the despatch gunboat Dolphin which cruised the waters of the West Indies—not far from his present post as governor of Puerto Rico—in search of German supply vessels. The following year he supervised the commissioning and assumed command of a converted German passenger liner, the Princess Alice of the North German Lloyd, which was rechristened the U. S. S. Princess Matoika and was employed to transport and convoy troops to France.

His services in that capacity won him the Navy Cross with the citation that it was for "distinguished service" in the "exacting and hazardous duty of transporting and escorting troops and supplies to European ports through waters infested with enemy submarines and mines."

Between the Spanish-American and World Wars, Leahy saw service in the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer rebellion and the American occupation of Nicaragua. At the latter time, he was chief of staff of the Naval forces in Nicaragua.

U. S. Officers May Help Train Mexican Army

Would Seek To Make Unified Action by Nations Practicable.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 12.—(UP)—The United States may send a military mission to Mexico early in 1941 to co-operate in the training and equipping of the Mexican army if plans under discussion at present are carried out, reliable sources reported tonight.

The military mission, which may be composed of three officers representing the air corps, field artillery, and infantry, will have as its specific objective "synchronization" of the Mexican and United States armed forces so they may become one of the major factors in intercontinental defense, it was learned.

Should the plan materialize, it will be the first time in Mexican-American relations that an American military mission will have been sent to Mexico.

ECUADOR TO GET TWO MISSIONS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—United States naval and military aviation missions will go to Ecuador under an agreement signed today, the State Department announced.

The two missions, requested by the government of Ecuador, will act in advisory capacities to the Ecuadorian navy and air force, the announcement said.

Fuller Heads National Unit of Manufacturers

Industrial Firms Pledge Co-operation in U. S. Defense.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Walter D. Fuller, president of Curtiss Publishing Company, Philadelphia, was elected president of the National Association of Manufacturers today.

As president, Fuller will be chief executive for the coming year of an organization of 7,600 industrial firms which cover the entire United States.

He succeeds in office H. W. Prentiss Jr., president of Armstrong Cork Company, who held office during the last year.

Fuller has been chairman of the important resolutions committee which today presented a program pledging the complete co-operation of industry with government in national defense.

Prentiss will serve next year as chairman of the association's board of directors.

Sleuth Traps Criminals With Laundry Marks

Bank Robber, Suicide and Slaying Solved by Expert.

By ED WALLACE.
MINNEOLA, N. Y., Dec. 12.—(AP)—Hastily, the diner gulped his coffee, snatched his hat and what he thought was his coat, and rushed out of the restaurant.

A few hours later his doorbell rang. "Here's your coat," said the caller. "You left it in the restaurant."

"My coat?" exclaimed the householder. "But you're mistaken, I've got mine."

But it wasn't the stranger who made the mistake—it was the coffee gulper. He had taken the wrong coat—a detective's, at that.

A special kind of a detective, though, who needed to look only in the sleeves of the coat to find out who owned it. For in the sleeve were the marks of the company that had cleaned it.

The detective's name is Andrew Yulch—lieutenant at his pals on the Nassau county police force. Short, stocky and energetic, Yulch has been dubbed the "Laundry Mark Detective," or the "Sleuth of the Cleaners' Marks."

He went out to solve a bank messenger robbery four years ago and found himself establishing a new kind of scientific crime detection. The hieroglyphics of the coat sleeves—shirt collars, pants bands and hat bands, too—have given him clues of many a criminal.

In the spring of 1936, a Farmingdale bank messenger was robbed of several thousand dollars. Three days later, the abandoned car of the bandits was found in a woods. The car was stolen and a careful job of fingerprint elimination had been done.

But, left behind was an old coat the bandits had used to cover the money. Cleaner's marks were found in the coat, but first efforts to trace them failed.

Yulch was ordered by his superior to take up the task. He learned the name of a man who once owned the coat, with the result that one robber now is in prison and two others—the identity known—are being sought.

Since that time Yulch has obtained, classified and filed some 80,000 marks used by cleaners and laundries in half the states on the eastern seaboard. His system of filing—which he keeps secret—is responsible for his success, Yulch says. Anyone, he explains, can discover the source of a mark by the laborious, lengthy process of elimination. But through his method, Yulch says he can discover the launderer or dry cleaner "in a moment."

New York and New Jersey police were baffled a year ago when the body of a man, charred beyond recognition, was discovered atop the Hudson River Palisades.

His clothing had been saturated with gasoline and set afire. A remnant of sleeve lining remained. Yulch placed it under a microscope and copied the faint outlines of cleaners' marks. A check of his files showed four possible sources.

His first stop was an Armenian's tailor shop in lower Westchester county. The tailor glanced at the mark.

"That was on my father's coat," he cried. "And he's disappeared." It was true. Police decided the despondent, aging man had made a funeral pyre of his own body. A murderer bashed in the head of his victim and buried the body in the mud of Long Island Sound, near Long Beach. He wiped his hands on towels from his own home. Those towels, found on the beach, yanked him into prison for 20 years, convicted by a laundry mark.

Even invisible markings which many laundries and cleaners have figures tripped up a thief who stole a coat, its pockets stuffed with bonds, from a Pullman berth. He left his own coat behind, its pockets emptied. But the coat had been cleaned.

Spies have used this method of carrying messages, written on their shirtfronts, Yulch said.

Britain Seeking Early Defeat Of Italians, Stirling Declares

Victory for Greeks Seen; Invasion Said Imminent.

By REAR ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING JR.

(Copyright, 1940, by United Press) NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Great Britain's increased activity in the Mediterranean points to considerable re-enforcements of naval and air forces in that area.

The blockade of the Dodecanese islands; the air help to Greece in throwing back the Italian invasion of that country; the containing of the Italian fleet in its naval bases; the blockade of the Italian lines of communication across the Adriatic, and across the Mediterranean with Libya, thus cutting off the Libyan forces from needed supplies and re-enforcements, are cases in point. This latter blockade was largely responsible for the recent success of British troops at Sidi Barrani.

In general Britain's naval offensive in the closed sea points to a determination to end the war against Italy as soon as possible, even if meanwhile the defense of England must suffer.

Italy has a large air force, large enough, it was thought, actually to overwhelm British air forces in the Mediterranean, yet the RAF seems not only to be holding its own, but taking the initiative against the enemy.

The most unusual thing in this war is the activity and success of the Royal Air Force. It is claimed that Germany has double or even greater the number of planes, leaving out Italy, which brings several thousand more; yet the RAF has enough planes to settle with the Italian air forces in the Mediterranean; to bomb the Italian forces in Africa; to fight the German air force over England, although this force has been sadly curtailed; to bomb German cities at night; and to raid the captured seaports of Europe from Norway to France. The exploits of the RAF are the highlights of the entire war. The RAF meantime is guarding British merchant ships about England coming and going on the empire's service.

Britain undoubtedly is concentrating upon putting Italy out of the war. There are rumors that the Italian people are none too satisfied, and that there is a growing coldness between Hitler and Mussolini. On the other hand, can Italy make a separate peace? If such a thing were even contemplated, Hitler then might have somewhere to send his idle troops into Italy, and that country also would become a conquered nation.

Japan May Help. It seems that Hitler will be forced before long to make his eastern drive. This is one reason for England's efforts to knock Italy out of the war before that drive commences.

Help for the Axis in the Mediterranean might possibly come from an unexpected source if Japan decides to enter the war and sends her fleet there.

Data on Italy's Hangars Given U. S. by Builder

Expert Warns U. S. To Rush Subterranean Construction.

By DEVON FRANCIS.

Associated Press Aviation Editor. NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The army can start construction of underground airplane hangars, fuel storage reservoirs and other bomb-proof structures of modern warfare, if it likes, with Italy's vast subterranean system as a pattern.

It has all the details. Carlo G. Flebus, consulting engineer employed by the city of New York and for three years a design and construction engineer for the government of Premier Mussolini, has given official Washington data not only on the Fascist air raid protection system but on the systems of Germany and England as well.

Huge hangars, some of them holding as many as 800 stored planes and others 350 planes ready to roll onto adjacent airports, have been built under Mussolini's direction.

Underground caverns hide manufacturing plants and oil fuel reservoirs.

Elevators, air conditioning equipment and, in some instances, camouflaged entrances and exits characterize the holes in the earth occupied by soldiers, workers and civilians driven underground by the warplane.

Pledged to Secrecy. When Flebus returned to the United States 11 months ago, the Fascist government placed on him a prohibition on him—as a possessor of military secrets vital to Italian defense, he must not disclose the whereabouts of the various shelters he helped build.

He was emphatic in expressing his belief in the invulnerability of industrial and military Italy to air attack.

The War Department called him to Washington last August for consultation on preparation of underground structures to save airplanes, fuel reservoirs and important industrial plants from damage by bombs if war ever came again.

"Europe used Spain for a laboratory during the civil war," Flebus said.

"It was found that regardless of the character of the construction, surface structures would not resist bombs and artillery."

"France and England directed the construction of fortifications at Santander. Germany and Italy reduced those structures with bombs and artillery."

The effect of vibration led to interesting alterations in all of Europe's hiding places. Constant concussion produced fissures in the walls of good, solid buildings. That was met by enclosing buildings within a shell, with an air space in between. That cushioned the shock.

"The British are suffering today," said Flebus, "because all their structures are units, without enclosing shells to absorb the vibration."

He credited the Germans with setting the "final standards" for bombproof structures after close study of the Spanish War.

Europe's underground hangars, with adjoining air fields, are cleverly camouflaged, he said. Italy used green wood shavings, embedded in concrete runways, to hide airfields from prying eyes of enemy airmen.

Nitrogen gas, inert and safe around explosive liquids, is in common use in Europe to force fuel from underground tanks, said Flebus, enabling the warring countries to store huge quantities of gasoline without danger of deterioration.

"As yet," he said, "we do not use it in the United States. Instead, we use water, which carries many dangers and disadvantages."

Warnings of Needs. He warned that world conditions made it imperative for this country to start construction of subterranean structures immediately to protect army and navy equipment and stores, industrial plants and civilians.

"It takes at least six months to study and design the structures," he said, "and a year after that to build them."

"I shudder every time I look at all those oil storage tanks on the top of the ground on the New Jersey side of the Hudson river."

Of underground hangars, Flebus wrote in the study submitted to the War Department:

"Airports are the main objects of attack by an enemy force; consequently they are the main object of defense."

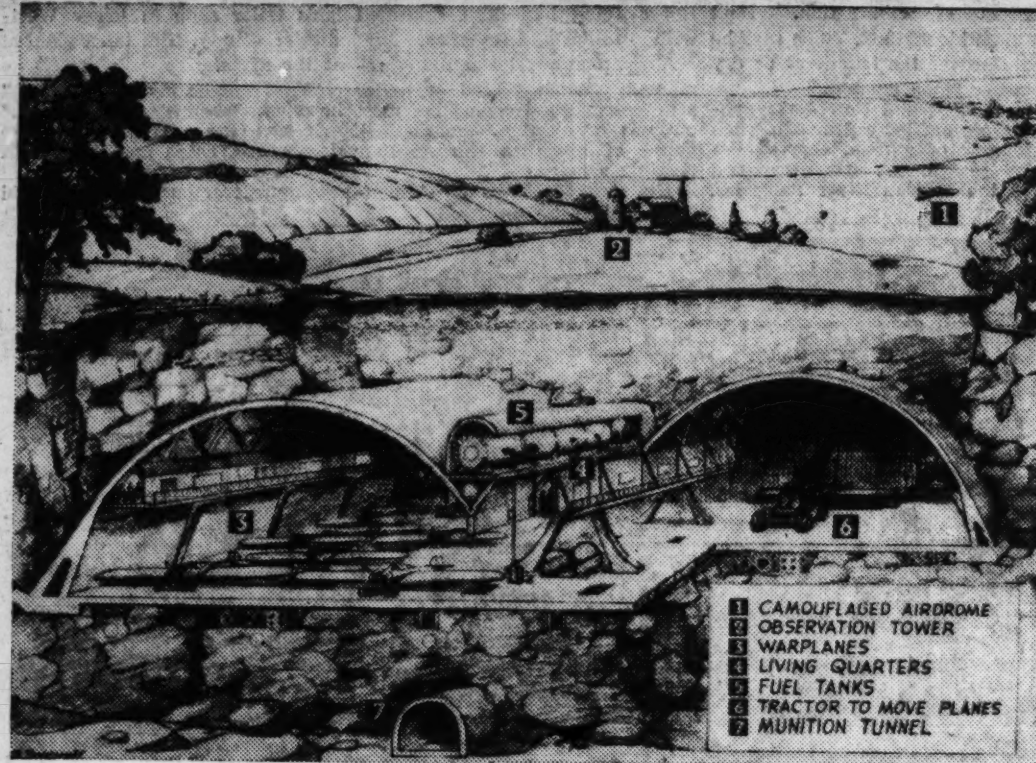

"The English and the Italians, favored by the natural conformation of the hills bordering their shores, took advantage of all the natural grottoes. Enlarged and lined with inexpensive structural work, entrances and runways camouflaged, they obtained strategic and magnificent hangars to store craft."

"The French and Germans, hampered by the geological and topographical conformation of their soil, were obliged to build more elaborate structures to hide their planes. Gas chambers for the protection of the personnel were, in general, provided in all designs."

"Tractors, air conditioning, air purifying equipment, elevators, catapults, water lines, fuel lines, ammunition service tunnels, repair shop, power plant, quarters, etc., were common features included in the design."

Flebus said such big airway terminals as those in New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Los Angeles could be protected against landings by enemy warplanes by the system used in Europe.

Telescopically spring poles supporting high tension wires are placed at the sides of runways. When an alarm is sounded, the poles are raised and the wires become barriers across the runways.

PEACEFUL LANDSCAPE, BUT—Specifications on types of European underground warplane hangars, fuel storage reservoirs and civilian air-raid shelters have been submitted to the federal government by Carlo G. Flebus, consulting engineer, who helped design and build Premier Mussolini's system of structures in Italy. The drawing of the above hangar was adapted from one typical of the construction in Italy.

2 Norwegians Rowed Across Sea to Britain

Tiny Nation Adds Naval Unit to Air Force in Canada.

By GARNETT D. HORNER.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Two young Norwegian aviators decided they wanted another crack at the Germans when their nation's little army was forced to surrender to the Nazi invaders last June. So they bought a small rowboat for $5 and for five days and nights they rowed across the North sea to Britain.

Today they are typical members of a "little Norway" encampment on the outskirts of Toronto, Ont., where 400 of their compatriots are being trained and organized into efficient air fighting squadrons that early next year will begin moving in a steady stream across the Atlantic to take up the battle again.

This is only a part of Norway's continued war effort as an active ally of Great Britain, a spokesman at the Norwegian legation here explained. Somewhere on Canada's eastern coast a Norwegian marine detachment is being made ready to play what may be an important role in the naval warfare, but official secrecy surrounds this and some other activities for the time being.

New Volunteers. The legation disclosed, however, that the number of pilots in training at the Toronto base will soon be boosted to about 1,000, with new volunteers filling the ranks as "graduates" move on into combat service.

The Norwegian squadrons will be equipped with planes ordered by Norway from the United States before the German invasion. They will be self-contained fighting units and operate as such in co-operation with the British high command.

Norwegian fliers who escaped capture by the Germans form the nucleus of these units, which include volunteers from all parts of the world who now are being trained as pilots and mechanics. Only Norwegian citizens are being accepted for the service, except for a few Danes.

Built Own Barracks. The training program in Canada was begun soon after the Germans overran Norway. As the group of earnest Norwegians gathered in Toronto, they built their own barracks just outside the city and now have there what a legation spokesman here described as a veritable "little Norway," complete with hospital staffed by Norwegian doctors and nurses. The base was dedicated November 17.

The winter climate in Canada is no obstacle to the Norwegian training program, as they are used to snow and cold and expect to experience much the same sort of weather conditions in late winter flying operations in which they expect to participate over England and Germany.

Special schools have been set up at the Toronto base for air mechanics, radio operators and other specialists, as well as classes in English. Training is with both land and sea planes—a lake adjoins the Toronto encampment. The two branches of the service are known as the Royal Norwegian Army Air Force and the Royal Norwegian Navy Air Force. The "royal" identification is emphasized to stress the difference between loyal and "Quisling" Norwegians who were Nazified.

Norwegians in the United States are rallying to support and encourage the volunteers training in Canada. Christmas gifts for them already are being collected, with a box in the vestibule of the legation here full of such things as pipes, tobacco, sweaters and scarfs.

The training program in Canada is under the general direction of General William Steffens, who represents the Norwegian ministry of defense at Ottawa. In command at the Toronto base are Captain Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, of the naval air force, and Major Bjarne Ooen, leader of the army unit. Captain Riiser-Larsen, former naval attaché at the legation here, is a veteran of numerous antarctic expeditions and was a member of the Lincoln Ellsworth-Amundsen trans-north pole flight.

CHRISTMAS OPERETTA. CARROLLTON, Ga., Dec. 12.—

Jail To Provide Drunks Ice Water

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ROCHELLE, Ga., Dec. 12.—Rochelle's city bastille, will be at least attractive if not entirely comfortable for those who choose (or are forcibly "invited") to enter during the Christmas holidays. Appropriate season's decorations have been installed over the small brick jail building by Police Chief Vance Turner, and what's more, some prankster has scribbled on its door: "Whosoever will may enter."

The crowning touch of all, though, is the placing of containers of ice water in each of the three cells for the special benefit of drunks. Rochelle law reads: "Eight hours at least before being released."

Workers' Yule Savings To Exceed $50,000

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. BARNESVILLE, Ga., Dec. 12.—More than $50,000 will go into circulation in Barnesville for holiday shoppers when employees of four industrial plants release Christmas savings funds.

The 340 employees of one plant tomorrow will collect $22,000 which they have allowed to be deducted from their pay checks during the year. At another mill the Christmas savings fund will amount to another $22,000, and 279 employees will receive their fund Monday. One hundred workers at a furniture factory have prepared for Christmas with regular savings which will total between $5,000 and $6,000. This will be released Thursday, December 19. Another mill's Christmas fund will be turned back to workers Friday, December 20. About 14 of the employees have built up a fund of between $2,500 and $3,000.

A Gift She Will Adore

IN THE SEATS OF THE STARS—The British War Relief Society's breakfast to raise money for English Tommies went on as scheduled yesterday at the Capital City Club despite the non-attendance of the guests of honor,

Miss Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier, and Alfred Hitchcock who were grounded in El Paso. "Miss Anniversary," in the person of Louella Stone, who was born in Hollywood, pinch hit for "Scarlett" and her men. From left to right, Jesse Draper, Miss Stone, Mayor Hartsfield, Mrs. Albert E. Thornton, Baxter Maddox, Margaret Mitchell, Katherine Brown and W. R. Ferguson. Everybody seemed satisfied with the substitutions.

Spanish Gypsy Dancers Win Acclaim in U.S.

Rosario and Antonio Score Hit in New York; Like America.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Lovers of the dance who feel that it takes more than George Raft hair to do the "bolero" ought to take in the art of a couple of Spanish Gypsy youngsters as an antidote to overdoes of the hair-grease school of Spanish jiggling. They are Rosario and Antonio, who were billed as "Los Chavallillos Sevillanos" until their entrepreneur, Marcel Ventura, advised them that Americans can't say that without grave danger of losing their upper plates. The kids have been dancing ever since Realito, dancing master of the Sevilla Academy, saw the six-year-old Antonio prance about waving a red flannel rag in imitation of a toreador. Antonio was teamed with his cousin, Rosario, daughter of a dealer in bull-fight trappings, and in the 12 years since then they have traveled over much of Europe and most of the Western Hemisphere.

American tourists who saw them in Mexico City emerged with delirious reports, which eventually brought them to New York. On their opening at the Waldorf-Astoria, a sedate audience, which had been coolly anticipating just some more rose-in-teeth corn from Spain got instead such a tangy serving of Spanish sass that it bombarded the youngsters with flowers plucked from corsages and table decorations. This was nothing new to "Los Chavallillos." At their farewell performances in Santiago and Lima doves were released in the theater, a traditional gesture, which previously has been reserved for such as Eleanor Duse and Enrico Caruso.

Rosario and Antonio dance insolently. Rosario's eyes are an invitation and a challenge. Antonio's grace involves humorous gyrations, which prove that a sultry, measured slink is not an essential of Spanish dancing. At the moment they are fascinated by American swing and football, but everything American interests them. "Americans rush about so," Antonio explained. "They leave nothing for manana."

"American men," Ventura interpreted. "They are so very natural and so naive. They are so full of spirits and good intentions. It is perfectly safe for a girl to go out with them without a duenna. ROBBED BY MOTORISTS. CARROLLTON, Ga., Dec. 12.—Troy Rush wasn't even trying to hitch hike when two motorists picked him up near Temple and a few moments later, he told authorities here, he was slugged over the head with a wrench and relieved of $66 and his driver's license. Officers said a car found near here and stolen at Tallapoosa evidently had been used by the bandits.

'Miss Anniversary' Substitutes For Leigh at Relief Breakfast

Plane Carrying Hollywood Celebrities Grounded in Texas, But After a Few Martinis No One Seemed To Mind.

By LEE ROGERS.

Airplanes were still giving the British the devil yesterday—and right in Atlanta.

Weather and a "grounded" plane blitzkrieged the British War Relief Society's breakfast which was to have honored Vivien Leigh and a couple of other British film greats.

But there is something about this heralded luck of the plodding English. Atlanta's own little starlet, Louella Stone, picked yesterday as "Miss Anniversary" to share honors with Miss Leigh, stepped in and assumed the responsibility on her little thin shoulders. The breakfast went on as scheduled; Miss Anniversary cut the anniversary cake and presented the first slice to Margaret Mitchell and posed for the pictures Miss Leigh would have, and the British Tommy got his promised $2.50 from every plate served to some several hundred mink-coated relief workers.

The movie people proclaimed the nonappearance of the stars—Miss Leigh, Laurence Olivier and Alfred Hitchcock—an "act of God." Some of the British Relief socialites had another name for it. They thought the stars could have started sooner to their breakfast. The movie people tried to explain all the principals were working on pictures and couldn't afford to lose much time. After hardly a thought to the

But the weather couldn't be planned for Hollywood or the British War Relief.

The breakfast was a success. After a few Martinis no one seemed to miss the appearance of Miss Leigh, Olivier and Hitchcock. They were very pleased at the substitute, "Miss Anniversary," who flattered them with a nice little speech about her pleasure at being with them. She entered the Mirador room of the Capital City Club on the arm of Mayor Hartsfield, the arm that was to have escorted Vivien Leigh, "Scarlett O'Hara." At the round table in the center with all the big shots, "Miss Anniversary" sat between Jesse Draper and the mayor.

Sticking in the grapefruit there on the table before them were two dainty little flags—a Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes. Both made in Japan. (The Axis saboteurs had been at work.)

That was just another of those little queer things that always pop up at occasions like this.

E. B. Coleman, the M-G-M representative who is directing the anniversary premiere of "Gone With the Wind," nearly missed his breakfast. He didn't get a ticket and the waiter wouldn't serve him breakfast. A cash deposit got the plate.

After hardly a thought to the breakfast of ham and eggs the stars were eating in a little El Paso airport cafe, the several hundred guests ate their noonday breakfast of Martinis, grapefruit, squash, potatoes, mushrooms, ice cream and coffee.

Chairman of Occasion.

Baxter Maddox, the chairman of the occasion, introduced Mayor Hartsfield, and the mayor presented "Miss Anniversary." Around the table the introductions went until W. R. Ferguson, executive director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Susan Myrick, accent coach for "Scarlett O'Hara"; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Kurtz, technicians for the film; Margaret Mitchell, the author; Lowell Calvert, of Selznick International; E. B. Coleman, of M-G-M; Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mrs. Albert E. Thornton, Mrs. James L. Dickey and Mrs. Ben MacDougald, representing the British Relief Society, had all been recognized. Kay Brown, producer, David O. Selznick's personal representative, read a message from Miss Leigh, Olivier and Hitchcock expressing regret their plane delay had forced them to miss the breakfast.

Then Louella Stone, "Miss Anniversary," took the spotlight which had been held for Miss Leigh. She cut the big anniversary cake as photographers' lights flashed on her and Mayor Hartsfield. Then she passed the first slice to Miss Mitchell and the flashes started all over again.

And that was all—except for a last-minute flash that the stars' plane was in the air and should arrive in time for the premiere appearance.

But what did the British Tommies care?

Lightning Too Confusing It's Town Talk Topic

RAWLINS, Wyo., Dec. 12.—(UP)—Townfolk are discussing a bolt of lightning that "lit up the town in general" and caused double trouble for firemen.

Witnesses said the lightning struck a dog, which ran inside his master's house, knocking a telephone from a desk. The telephone operator—believing the flash had struck the house—informed the fire department.

Firemen responded, but found no blaze. A moment later they heard a fire siren at a railroad shop and again answered the call. This time an investigation showed that the bolt struck a line running into the shop and set off a buzzer which in turn sounded the railroad's warning.

Radio Music Copyright War In Deadlock

Orchestra Leaders See Threat in BMI Control Plan.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Orchestra leaders who have been trying to get the ASCAP-BMI war out of the trenches by Christmas has confessed defeat as peacemakers with a charge that the BMI plan would permit "radio interests" to exploit and regulate music "regardless of the musical taste of the American public."

Thus the worried band leaders, tied to radio as a source of income and publicity, aligned themselves substantially with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP), though Fred Waring, chairman of the peace committee, qualified the alignment with an informal assertion that members agreed there were "weaknesses on both sides."

After January 1, and possibly by December 23, according to reports, the band leaders will be permitted to play on the networks only music controlled by Broadcast Music, Inc. (BMI), or no longer protected by copyright. This would eliminate ASCAP-controlled music—songs by composers like Victor Herbert, Sigmund Romberg, Irving Berlin, Cole Porter and such—from radio. BMI has developed some popular composers of its own recently and has access to some foreign music.

Maze of Bookkeeping. BIM was organized by radio to replace ASCAP, which acts as agent for song writers, after refusal of ASCAP to collect for composers on a "per-program" basis, which Waring said would create a "madhouse of bookkeeping." It would be necessary, he explained, to set a different price "every time a song is used" since a song played at 8 p. m. would be more valuable than the same one used at 7 a. m.

The band leaders' committee report, adopted unanimously, asserted that Neville Miller, representing the National Association of Broadcasters, had ignored a promise to band leaders and refused to attend a joint conference they had arranged with ASCAP representatives.

putants together would be futile, "since it seems obvious that the spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters has definitely determined to prevent such meeting taking place," though ASCAP agreed "to negotiate on a friendly basis."

Networks in Control.

Observing that, in addition to commercial use of air waves, "the networks control and direct the activities of the two largest American phonograph recording companies" and employ talent employment bureaus, the report said:

"With control of America's active music copyrights, as well as the various channels through which they are presently popularized by professional presentation, the radio interests, with the licensing powers granted the copyright owner by the federal government, would be able to direct the commercial and cultural future of the nation's music."

"Through these agencies the continued presentation of countless thousands of America's favorite standard compositions could be suppressed, while the activity of the future creations of American composers could be controlled and the public performance of their music could be exploited, restrained or regulated regardless of the musical taste of the American public or the desires of the radio advertisers."

Competition Urged. "They could likewise stifle or stimulate the professional popularity of American musicians and music interpreters at will."

"We believe the cultural welfare of the American public can be best protected . . . only through a free, open competitive market for the creative works of our composers and authors and with no restraint placed upon the interpretive artist in the selection of his material for public entertainment."

The report concluded that "solution of this most perplexing problem will depend solely on radio listeners at large."

France Names Dictator for Vichy Colonies

Admiral Robert Also Has Powers To Negotiate With U. S.

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Admiral Robert, high commissioner for the French West Indies, has been granted virtual dictatorial powers over all French possessions in the Western Hemisphere by the Vichy government, according to a decree published in the official Journal.

He also was granted plenipotentiary powers to negotiate with the United States and other American nations under conditions dictated by the Vichy government.

The decree, in effect, extended to the French West Indies the political changes introduced into France under the regime of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain by concentrating all authority in the hands of Admiral Robert.

Solely Responsible.
A communication from Admiral Platon, secretary of state for colonies, which formed the basis for the decree made Admiral Robert solely responsible for the defense of the West Indies, French Guiana, and St. Pierre and Miquelon, the preservation of internal order and the economic development of these territories.

The decree confers upon Admiral Robert the sole right to communicate with the French government concerning political matters and grants him the exclusive right of negotiating with the United States and other American states under conditions and limits fixed by instructions transmitted October 22, 1940.

Admiral Robert's far-reaching administrative powers were not extended to St. Pierre and Miquelon, French islands off the Canadian coast, although he is charged with their defense.

Governors Informed.
The high commissioner is charged with enforcing all laws issued by the Vichy government and in liaison with the local governors will establish budgets and foreign trade relations. Local governors may communicate with the secretary of state for colonies on administrative matters.

Admiral Robert has informed all local governors by wireless of his new powers. He told them, however, that he did not envisage any important change in the present state of military forces.

LEADS BRITISH "BLITZKRIEG"—Credit for the British campaign in Egypt which has resulted in the capture of the main Italian base at Sidi Barrani was given to Lieutenant General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, commander-in-chief of the troops in Egypt. ## Reich's Interest In Italy's War Fortunes Wane

Duce Attacked Greece To Impress Hitler, Pertinax Says.

By PERTINAX.

For North American Newspaper Alliance.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—To all outward appearances the German government behaves as though the defeats suffered by the Italian troops in Albania were of little concern to itself. According to diplomatic reports the interest it takes in the military vicissitudes of its weak partner is on the wane. Its representatives in various capitals don't hesitate to declare that General Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, when he met Marshal Pietro Badoglio last October, told him straight away the preparations made for the offensive in Greece were grossly inadequate. The Italian general staff thought it knew better. So much the worse for it. Such is Germany's attitude.

It can be easily understood. There no longer is any doubt that Premier Mussolini hardly gave previous notice to Adolf Hitler of what he intended to do in Greece. He knew that Hitler had begun to negotiate with Pierre Laval to enlist the co-operation of the Vichy government against England and that the contemplated bargain involved a drastic cutting down of all Italian claims upon France.

Humble Spoils.
Rome, if Hitler had his way, would have to be content with humble spoils, the transformation of Tunis into a Franco-Italian condominium, whereas last June before the armistice the Italian share, according to German promise, was to include in addition to full sovereignty over Tunis and a part of the department of Algiers, Nice, most of Savoy and Corsica.

The Italian expedition against Greece was planned to ruin all the arrangements in progress between Berlin and Vichy. Having proved her ability to wage a blitzkrieg, having created or enlarged vassal states of her own to win a great Croatia and a great Albania, the latter extending to Salonika, Italy would not have to put up with German-made law any more, but by the side of Germany on a footing of equality she would contribute to the making of the new European structure. Such was Mussolini's bold calculation.

That set of facts explains why today, however hard-pressed he may be and perhaps on the brink of disaster, Mussolini is reluctant to ask for the assistance of the Fuehrer. It has been said that his own prestige might be fatally impaired among his Italian subjects if he begged Keitel to rescue his army, and that remark was certainly a valid one two weeks ago, but today it has ceased to account satisfactorily for Mussolini's conduct.

Italy's military position has become so precarious that the Duce must feel compelled to incur risks of that kind and even more serious ones. True reason of Mussolini's obstinate resolve not to turn for relief toward the German military power is that such a step would leave him no choice but to fall in line with the Franco-German negotiations.

But the plight of the Italian armies, if it continues, will not be attended with very different consequences. Hitler is bound to intervene in his own way whenever he believes that his grandiose scheme of European hegemony is likely to be jeopardized by Fascist failure. Somehow the Fascist dictatorship will have to toe the line.

No wonder then that Hitler and his advisers follow the development of the great Greek-Italian war with considerable detachment, at least for the present. At the same time German diplomacy is hard put to it to persuade the Yugoslav government to join the totalitarian system, that is, to sign the three-power pact of September 27, in the wake of Hungary, Rumania and Slovakia.

To get that result Hitler is ready to guarantee the territorial domain of Yugoslavia and to pledge himself to see to it that Italy shall never approach Salonika to safeguard what Prince Paul and his ministers consider a vital interest committed to their care.

Probable Outcome.

As the outcome of an understanding reached with Yugoslavia on the above lines Hitler would hold, so to speak, the Fascist peninsula in the hollow of his hand and at the cost of very little exertion. He would be at liberty to go to Laval with a firm offer (the offer he made to him last October could be only of a tentative nature since its endorsement by Italy had to be reserved).

Even men like General Maximilian Weyand, who has undertaken to protect France's North African empire against all comers, nevertheless feels apprehensive of what a British victory eventually will bring in its train. For some rehabilitation of French democracy would perhaps be won.

But assuming that the Yugoslav government sticks to its more determined attitude and rejects German suggestion, a probable contingency, assuming that Laval does not succeed in capturing a minimum of support in France for his pro-German schemes, or that after all no firm offer can be submitted to him from the German side, Hitler, whether likes it or not, will have to keep the onerous Italian connection for lack of a substitute. They are bad assets, which are not so easily written off.

CHURCH PAGEANT.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Dec. 12.—The annual pageant of the Presbyterian church will be presented Sunday, December 22, in celebration of the arrival of the Christmas season, according to the Rev. J. Walton Stewart, pastor. The pageant will be entitled "The Spirit of Christmas" and characters will all be members of the church.

Babe's Friend Mae Tenders Sympathy

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Big Babe, a Sumatra elephant with an injured expression and a skinned knee, was back in her quarters in the luxurious elephant house at Fleishacker zoo today, safe and reasonably sound after a fall into a 12-foot moat.

Babe tumbled into the moat yesterday as she and others of the herd were stretching for peanuts held out by spectators.

There she spurned all attempts to rescue. When quiet descended in the middle of the night, Head Keeper Fred Chatten, step by step, led her up a ramp built of boards on bales of hay.

During Babe's ordeal she was consoled by Mae, a Ceylon elephant. Mae hovered around the rim of the moat, and sometimes knelt down and wrapped trunks with Babe in a gesture of elephantine sympathy.

Morton Execution Ordered Set Aside

WAYCROSS, Ga., Dec. 12.—(AP)—Federal court action intervened yesterday to set aside the scheduled execution tomorrow of Leroy Morton, condemned for the slaying in 1939 of Deputy Sheriff Louis Hubbard of Jefferson county.

Federal Judge W. H. Barrett, after a hearing on a petition by defense counsel, granted a 10-day period for opposing counsel to file briefs in the case. Morton was ordered held in the custody of a United States marshal pending conclusion of the case.

Defense attorneys, petitioning for release of Morton, contended the sentence violated the 14th amendment because the defendant's counsel was not present when the death verdict was read. The prosecution said failure to cite this objection at the time a motion for a new trial was carried to the supreme court, constituted a waiver.

Morton's attorneys were reminded by Judge Barrett that granting of the habeas corpus writ would constitute absolute release of the defendant as far as prosecution in this case is concerned.

British Bomb Mannheim and Invasion Ports

High Explosives Sprayed on Important Nazi Inland City.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—British fliers sprayed high explosive and incendiary bombs last night on Mannheim, important German inland port and chemical manufacturing center, the air ministry reported today, and attacked French "invasion ports" and German airdromes.

Listing results of the raids, the ministry's news service said a power station at Mannheim was hit, that fires broke out in the city and heavy explosions were heard as the planes turned homeward.

Mannheim's docks on the Rhine river and her railroad yards likewise were bombed. The city is a shipping center for southwest Germany with a heavy trade in grain, coal and petroleum.

Bombs were loosed on docks at Calais and Boulogne, French channel ports and the much smaller wharves at Etaples, the air ministry said, adding that those ports were "badly knocked out" in the night.

Other German airdromes in French occupied territory were attacked along with additional power stations, inland docks, and railway yards in western Germany, it was said.

One raiding plane was lost, the ministry acknowledged. Meanwhile, German bombers, guided to their targets by incendiaries, inflicted damage and a number of casualties last night in raids on east Midlands and north-eastern industrial areas which hitherto had escaped bombings.

(The Germans reported that Sheffield, world's largest steel producing center, was singled out for the night's heaviest raid.)

British fighter planes went up to challenge the waves of Nazi craft which poured across the east coast and spread out to raid scattered areas.

Additional waves came over the southeast coast, and the Midlands again appeared to be getting it hard.

Fierce antiaircraft barrages followed the path of high-flying raiders.

London's night time alert was followed by hours of intermittent gunfire.

During the day, it was disclosed that parts of famous Eton school had been damaged in recent air-raids; also the Bristol Guild Hall and Assize Court and Dembley stadium, in outer London.

STARLESS STAR-GAZERS—Twenty-five hundred people pushed, shoved and trod upon each other's toes in front of Loew's Grand theater last night, waiting for a glimpse of lovely Vivien Leigh, the "Scarlett" of "Gone With the Wind," to arrive with her entourage. She never came, for her plane couldn't land at Candler field. If she had arrived those milling about would never have seen her, for G. W. T. W.'s officials had ordered that she be slipped quietly into the theater by a back door.

Request of Union Rejected by Ford

DETROIT, Dec. 12.—(UP)—The Ford Motor Company today rejected a request of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) for a consent National Labor Relations Board election.

I. A. Capizzi, counsel for Ford, charged in a statement that the union's attempt to organize 100,000 Ford employees was motivated by the "greed of these (union) leaders to take over $1,000,000 a year in dues from Ford workers."

"The union has waged a relentless campaign of vilification, intimidation and falsification to create dissatisfaction and discontent among Ford workers," Capizzi said. "Ford workers have never solicited, requested or demanded the services of the union in handling their affairs. These same workers, however, are being bludgeoned into joining the union by every kind of tactics known to the realm of propaganda and fear."

Two Ships Collide Near N. Y. Harbor

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Mackay Radio said the colliers Berkshire and Charles L. O'Connor had grazed each other 25 miles outside New York harbor late today but were proceeding on their way.

The 4,621-ton Berkshire was coming from Boston. The 2,351-ton Charles L. O'Connor left here two hours before the mishap for Norfolk, Va.

Marietta Girl, Wed 3 Times, Seeks Divorce

Heiress Not Disillusioned, Has No. 4 Already Lined Up.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Black-haired Virginia Hill, 23-year-old Marietta, Ga., oil heiress, averred today that three husbands, and the prospect of a fourth, had not "disillusioned" her about marriage.

"I haven't," she said, "lived long enough with any one man to know what it's all about."

Miss Hill, small but lovely, declared her faith in matrimony while Supreme Court Referee Daniel F. Cohalan was reserving decision on her request for a divorce from husband No. 3—Carlos Gonzales, Mexican dancer.

She indicated that, if Cohalan decided right, she had husband No. 4 already lined up. Her first two marriages, she said, were quickly terminated in Georgia by annulment.

She said she and two actress friends caught Gonzales, to whom she was married last January 25, with a blond in his apartment here last July 14.

Miss Hill had words, harsh words, with the blond, it was testified, and the interloper fled, accompanied by Gonzales.

The Georgian was not too specific about her future matrimonial plans.

"I am," she said, however, "looking forward to my divorce."

Murchison Predicts Record Cotton Use

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.—(AP) Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, predicted here today that consumption of cotton in this country during the year would reach an all-time high of 8,750,000 bales.

Dr. Murchison spoke at the quarterly meeting of the cotton consumption council, a co-ordinating agency between cotton interests and the distributive trades.

"The only sound and permanent solution of the cotton problem," he said, "is increased domestic consumption."

January 15. Approximately $25,000, it is said, will be spent in remodeling the double unit into a modern shoe store.

Butler's Inc., operate some 40 shoe stores throughout the south, from Richmond to Miami, but this will be its first store for this city. It will open here between February 15 and March 1. Executive offices are already established here, with David L. Slann in charge.

10-Year Lease To Shoe Firm Is Announced

Rental of $120,000 Plus Percentage of Sales Involved.

The property leased is at 164-166 Peachtree street, taken over by Butler's Inc., operators of a chain of shoe stores, the lessor being Richardson Realty Company. The lease becomes effective

'Miss Anniversary' Becomes Heroine of 'G. W. T. W.' Celebration

Louella Stone Takes Over For the Stars

Eats Three Breakfasts, Talks Twice Over Radio.

By JACK SPALDING.

With the charm of half a dozen Duchesses of Windsor and the poise of an accredited Old Testament prophet in a painting of "The Last Judgment," Miss Louella Stone yesterday emerged the heroine of "Gone With the Wind" anniversary premiere.

Chosen "Miss Anniversary" and selected to play third or fourth fiddle to Selznick International's expensive Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier, and Alfred Hitchcock, Miss Stone shone as a full-fledged celebrity in her own right when the plane bearing three of Hollywood's finest was grounded in Texas by bad weather.

Three breakfasts. She ate three breakfasts and relished them all. She went on the radio twice with never a sign of "mike" fright. She met the mink-bearing British War Relief Society on its own grounds, the Mirador on its own grounds, the Mirador room of the Capital City Club, and vanquished it with plain southern charm.

She cut anniversary cakes, rehearsed cutting anniversary cakes, and ate pieces of anniversary cake. She wore orchids and carried surplus corsages in her hand. She rode behind a police escort, while sirens screamed. Next to making some kind of dent in the movie world, her ambition has been to ride behind a police escort.

Never Stumbled. She bore the full glare of the limelight for a full 12 hours and never stumbled. She didn't miscue, and while she insisted the day was the most exciting of her life, there was no stream of overdone superlatives in an attempt to prove it.

Selected after more than two weeks of tests against stiff competition, the 18-year-old Miss Stone awoke yesterday morning in the Georgian Terrace's most elegant suite, one that was set aside for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor when the word went around they might attend the anniversary premiere.

Her first breakfast was started and then forgotten when a look at her watch told her she was due for her first radio engagement. She took it like a veteran.

Back to the hotel and another breakfast, coffee, toast and scrambled eggs. After that came a relatively free hour, interrupted only by 14 phone calls and the arrival of several boxes of flowers.

Then came a soul-satisfying trip behind two motorcycle policemen, to the Capital City Club, where she was to have shared the spotlight with Leigh and Olivier at yet another breakfast, this one sponsored by the British War Relief Society. Seated between Jesse Draper and Atlanta's premiere bringing Mayor Hartsfield, she toyed with a tid-bit, played with a mushroom, looked only once at the potatoes julienne and disappeared for half an hour to appear as Celebrity of the Week over another radio station.

Arrived Twice. She arrived twice at the last breakfast. Officials of the British Relief Society weren't there for the first and most spectacular arrival so she was driven around the block a couple of times until all was ready.

After the radio engagement, she slipped in again and was seated within easy olive pit range of Margaret Mitchell Marsh, Katherine Brown, of Selznick, and other dignitaries when she was introduced by Mayor Hartsfield.

"I'm just too happy and thrilled. I can't find words. But I want you to know I'm with you in every phase of your work," she told the British relievers.

Then as flash bulbs exploded she cut a slice of anniversary cake number one and gave it to Peggy Mitchell, who brought a delighted roar of approval from the audience.

A SLICE FOR LUCK—"Miss Anniversary," Louella Stone, cuts the anniversary cake for the "Gone With the Wind" birthday party as Mayor Hartsfield looks on. It was an honor to have been accorded Vivien Leigh, "Scarlett" of the film, but taken over by the Atlanta beauty for the day.

Triplets Named Gone, With, Wind

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 12. (AP)—A Negro mother who gave birth to triplets—two boys and a girl—today at the University hospital here, named the infants "Gone," "With" and "Wind." She told attendants she had not decided which of the three names she would give the daughter.

ed in on Miss Anniversary. More flowers, and then a teddy bear, promptly named Miss Anni.

The powers that be announced that Miss Leigh's personal appearance, if any, would be during intermission. The Grand laid in a supply of hot coffee and sandwiches for the Hollywood party.

They had been in the air 24 hours by then, and somebody decided they would probably be hungry when and if they got here.

Shifting all the pretty speeches to intermission was bad, but it couldn't be helped. Last scene in the first half of the movie shows Miss Leigh, her hands dirty with Tara's soil, dramatically silhouetted against the sky and screaming: "As God is my witness I'll never go hungry again."

The Rehearsal. "Ow!" exclaimed Katherine Brown, of Selznick, when she thought of Miss Leigh, then stepping out on the Grand stage and daintily slicing herself a piece of birthday cake. But it couldn't be helped.

"Oh, Lordy, what a mourning," hummed Sue Myrick, of the Macon Telegraph and Gone With the Wind's technical advisor.

Rehearsal was one of those things. Miss Anniversary and the 10 runners-up sat around the stage. One of the girls took off her shoes. Another stuck lighted matches in her mouth. Voices shouted orders in the vacant theater.

After an hour and a half, things were settled to somebody's satisfaction, nobody knew whose, and Miss Stone and her friends were whisked out to the Georgian Terrace for dinner. Then came the all-important matter of getting into the right kind of clothes and to the theater.

Climax Inevitable. Before "Gone With the Wind" flashed on the screen, Robert F. Maddox read a telegram from Nashville announcing that the weather had cleared, the stars had left and should be at the theater by intermission.

Came intermission. Maddox introduced Mayor Hartsfield, who announced that the plane had circled Atlanta, was unable to land and flew on to Augusta.

The news was the worst disappointment he had had since the city election, the mayor said.

The climax was as inevitable as that of a Greek tragedy. There was no avoiding it. The events of the day had provided a perfect build-up.

Coleman said it was "an act of God."

And Miss Stone, still smiling, cut yet another cake.

The extension will give sewage disposal facilities to residents of Lockwood terrace, Sycamore drive, Faulkner drive, Ridgland avenue and Fairview avenue.

W. H. Weaver, Decatur city engineer, in charge of the construction project, indicated yesterday it would be completed within three months.

At the same time contractors were completing the razing of Negro tenement dwellings in the Decatur section, to make way for a $750,000 resettlement project with living units for 200 families. The Decatur Housing Authority expects to open the project within 12 months.

2 Still at Large In Jail Break

County officers continued the hunt last night for two prisoners still at large from the jailbreak at Fulton Tower which liberated three early Tuesday morning.

One, J. H. Jordan, who was in jail awaiting trial on a burglary charge, was captured late Wednesday night at a Rawson street rooming house by Chief Jailer A. B. "Bud" Foster and Deputy Sheriff W. M. Eason. Foster had searched throughout the previous night for the fugitives.

George Huff, under a four-year sentence for larceny, who led the break—his second try for freedom —and John Crisp, awaiting trial for burglary, were still at large.

Albany May Limit Its Fire Protection

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ALBANY, Ga., Dec. 12.—Service of the Albany fire department will be limited to residents of the municipality and only those suburbanites who are prepared to pay for it, if an ordinance which City Commissioner R. F. Armstrong has served notice of his intention to introduce is passed. He stated at a meeting Tuesday night that he favored such ordinance, and other members of the commission, including Mayor W. B. Haley, expressed themselves as favorable to the plan. Fire Chief D. W. Brosnan spoke in favor of making such charge, stating that it should be at least $100 for each call answered, as it costs the city that much to answer a suburban call. He told the commission that he answers an average of 20 suburban calls a year and that the taxpayers of the city proper are paying $2,000 to protect property on which the city collects no tax whatever.

Change Made In Selecting Marine Heads

Choice of Price as Major General Ends Controversy.

By JAY G. HAYDEN
For North American Newspaper Alliance.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Selection of Charles F. B. Price for a major generalship last week, less than two weeks after he had qualified as a brigadier general, marked the denouement of a controversy which has kept the United States Marine Corps in a ferment for more than two years. Also, this appointment signaled a fundamental change in the system of selecting general officers for the Marine Corps.
For several years members of congress had been hearing complaints respecting the selections of high ranking Marine officers but, as always has happened in like circumstances, it required an outstanding personality to focus the issue. This element was supplied when Colonel Price was passed over by the 1939 Brigadier General Board while the universal praise of his service as commandant of the American unit at Shanghai, during the Chinese-Japanese fighting there, was still ringing.
Secret Investigation.
Last spring a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, under the chairmanship of Senator Guy M. Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, conducted an investigation. This proceeding was secret and produced no formal report to the senate, but its effectiveness became apparent when the 1940 board for selection of brigadier generals was announced. Whereas, this board previously had been composed of six Marine generals, this time it was made up of six Navy admirals and three Marine generals.
The result was that Colonel Price not only was placed at the head of the 1940 list of brigadier generals designate, but Colonel Julian C. Smith, another man passed over in 1939, was selected.
Then came the meeting on November 15, of a board of nine admirals for selection of major generals for the Marine Corps. Price's appointment as a brigadier general was confirmed by the senate on that very day and he was not sworn in until November 18, but when the four selectees for major general were announced on December 1 his name was among them. It is doubtful whether any other Marine Corps officer ever has been hoisted to top rank so rapidly.
Sort of Stepchild.
The point of the matter is that the Marine Corps in earlier years had figured as a sort of "stepchild" of the merit system for selection of high-ranking officers, primarily designed for the Navy. Naval boards for selection of rear admirals and captains always have consisted of nine admirals and nobody has the slightest idea who their members will be until they are announced by the secretary of the Navy.
Because the Marine Corps did not have enough eligible officers to compose a board of nine, its board was limited to six. In fact, there are only 12 Marine Corps generals all told and, because of a provision of law forbidding any one to sit on two successive annual boards, there were exactly six officers available for selection board duty each year.
The questionable working of this system is illustrated in the case of General Price. He was several numbers down the list of colonels in 1938, but there was a widespread belief in the Marine Corps that his outstanding record in China would cause his selection for brigadier general that year.
There was an inevitable tendency to compare his record with the men who were chosen.
Prejudice Feared.
In 1939 Price's name, then second from the top of the list of colonels, went before a board composed in majority of brigadier generals selected over him a year earlier.
And, if he had faced a purely Marine Corps board this year, it would have been composed almost entirely of his previous competitors.
It was the opinion of the senatorial investigators that "prejudice" under these circumstances was inevitable. More than that, a second passing-over of Colonels Price and Smith meant that they would be forced to retire entirely from the service.
The senators were unable to see why officers physically fit and with entirely meritorious records should be shifted to a retired status with three-quarters pay for life, when they were still capable and eager to continue on active duty.
Just how the senators made their feelings known is not disclosed, but the upshot of their effort is plain. The nine-man board, predominantly composed of rear admirals, not only placed Price and Smith at the head of their selections for brigadier generals, but Price was forthwith boosted by the senior selection board, composed exclusively of rear admirals, to a major general.

Price served as executive officer under each of these and was commended equally by all of them. In addition to the coveted distinguished service medal, he received the Nicaraguan presidential medal of merit. He also holds the World War victory medal, the Marine Corps expeditionary medal, the Mexican campaign medal, the Cuban pacification medal and second Nicaraguan campaign medal.
It is doubtful whether any other officer of the Marine Corps has been equally honored. Further, General Price is a graduate of all the Marine Corps schools and of the Army command and general staff schools. He served as instructor of tactics at the Marine Corps school and as director of the school for field officers. There is scarcely a command in the corps, for which his rank made him eligible, that he has not filled with distinction.

Italian People Grumble Over Unpopular War

Mussolini Made 'Bad Gamble,' Expecting Quick Victory.

By EVERETT R. HOLLES,
United Press Cable Editor.

Indications of increasing war-weariness and grumbling among the Italian people, who never had had any enthusiasm for this war, seeped through Mussolini's censorship last night while the Fascist armies were being swept back on both the Albanian and Egyptian battlefronts.

Mussolini, many observers believe, knew six months ago when he went to war that it was an unpopular venture among his people but he gambled on Adolf Hitler's assurances that a Nazi victory already was in sight and that Italy merely had to jump into the "mop-up" and share the spoils.

All Is Not Well.
There have been reports and rumors of outbreaks of trouble in Florence, Milan and other Italian centers indicating the state of Italian morale, but these must be treated with suspicion, coming as they have from enemy quarters.

Nevertheless, the statements of the Fascist press yesterday made it seem apparent that all is not well in Italy since the Fascist reverses at the hands of the Greeks in Albania, Mussolini's shakeup of his high command and, finally, the admitted defeats in Egypt's western desert.

The Fascist newspapers spoke of "our open and hidden enemies" and intimated that some sort of an "internal settlement" is due among the Italian people.

Showing perhaps that the chief source of trouble is among the Italian working people, already heavy sufferers because of the war, the chief Italian labor organ Lavora Fascista said that "an accounting" is nearing and that "this goes also for those Italians who are fatter than Greek money and double bastards."

Unrest Increasing.
There is a growing suspicion among foreign observers that the unrest among the Italian people has been increasing steadily for some time and was crystallized when it came to a showdown between Fascist party and the nation's military leaders—a showdown which the Fascist politicians evidently won.

For years the rank-and-file of the Italian people have been antagonistic toward the Fascist party. Last spring an Italian white-collar worker, a devout believer in Mussolini, told this writer in Rome in discussing the pro-German policies of certain party leaders:

"Oh, but that is the Fascisti, not Mussolini."

The Italian press Thursday, almost in chorus, exhorted the Italian people to keep their confidence in a final victory regardless of what is happening on the Albanian and Egyptian fronts.

At the same time it was significant that stress was placed by such informed Fascist spokesmen as Virginio Gayda on the fact that for Italy the war has now reached a decisive stage and that "the resistance of the people will be tested."

"Caporetto" Used.
For the first time the word "caporetto"—a word which has been almost treasonable in Italy—was used by Gayda to point out to the Italian people that during the World War the Austrians invaded Italy as far south as Udine before the Italians crushed the Austrians at Vittorio Veneto.

One of the looming questions last night was:

What will Adolf Hitler do about the batterings which his ally is taking? Berlin had nothing to say on the matter. In fact, the German press is maintaining a complete and perhaps ominous calm, leading some pro-British observers to believe that the Fuehrer has found his Latin brother-in-arms to be more of a liability than an asset and would just as soon forget him and try winning the war alone.

A United Press dispatch from Berlin two days ago said the Germans know that things are going badly for Italy, "but they don't care much."

Attitude Mutual.
This attitude seems to be mutual among the German and Italian people.

Behind whatever grumbling the Fascist military reverses have caused among the Italian people lie acute economic difficulties—many of them due to Mussolini's reported "bad gamble" on a short war.

Italy was virtually unaffected during the first 10 months of the war because, as a non-belligerent, she could maintain communications with overseas countries, including the Americas. But when Italy entered the war six months ago, Britain promptly clamped shut her blockade of the Mediterranean and, as result, Italy's economy has been upset far more than her military operations.

In peacetime Italy received about 64 per cent of her imports by sea, such as cotton, wool, rubber, grain, coffee, meats and cereals. As a result of the blockade Italy is under severe rationing and high prices have followed—at least a 30 per cent increase for most necessities—and the government has failed in attempts to control these price increases.

Companion Device For Cotton Picker

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 12.—(AP) Invention of a companion machine to their mechanical picker capable of cleaning cotton so well that a grade of middling or better can be maintained, was announced today by the Rust brothers, John and Mack.

John Rust said the new machine, designed to remove trash which previously had caused mechanically-picked staple to be classed one grade below that hand picked, was the long-sought solution to the major fault in their robot pickers.

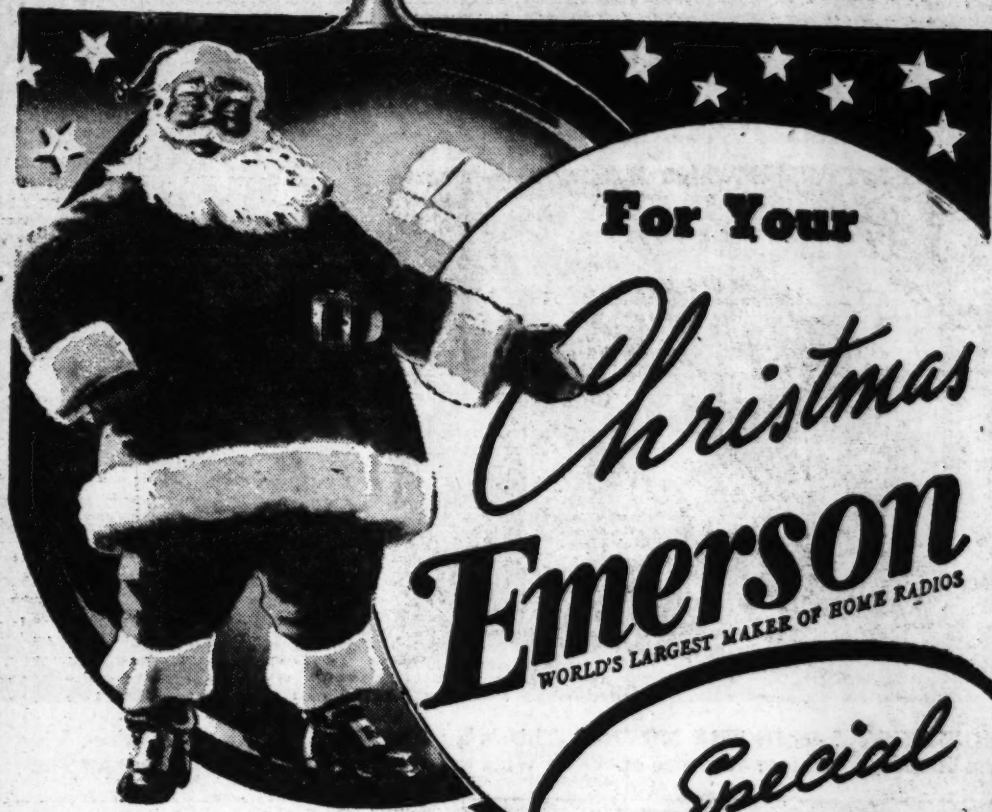

Through this invention, Rust said, the per bale value of machine-picked cotton will be raised $6 if short staple and $10 if long staple.

French Liner Compiegne Sails From Portugal

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 12.—(AP) The 9,986-ton French liner Compiegne sailed silently today, ostensibly bound for Casa Blanca, and dock workers started a pool as to whether she would actually reach there, go to Gibraltar or become a target for Axis sea warfare. Shipping circles emphasized that it was the British control that facilitated the supplying of the Compiegne with enough fuel for a long voyage.

Youth Killed As Auto Hits Defense Pact By Argentina, Uruguay Seen

Edward Marion Johnson, of Egan Park, Dies; Another Hurt.

An Egan Park youth was killed and another severely injured last night when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a large truck parked near the intersection of Sherman and South Central avenue, Hapeville.

Edward Marion Johnson, 21, a passenger in the automobile, was dead upon arrival at Grady hospital. The driver of the car was Johnny Attaway Jolly, 23, also of Egan Park, according to police. Hapeville Patrolmen Thomas D. Clonts and E. T. Camp reported their investigation and revealed that the automobile failed to see the truck. Robert Boyd, of Jacksonville, was operator of the truck, the officers reported.

The car in which the two young men were riding was demolished, while the truck was only slightly damaged. Johnson's body was removed to the Brandon-Camp Funeral home. Jolly was admitted to Grady hospital. Extent of his injuries was undetermined.

Stork Wins Race With Automobile

The stork won another race last night, overtaking the automobile in which Hansell C. Collins, of Palm drive, East Point, was rushing Mrs. Collins to Grady hospital. "We must hurry," Mrs. Collins said to her husband as they left their East Point home.

As they entered the driveway at Grady hospital, Mrs. Collins presented her husband with a boy, their second child. Mrs. Collins and her young son were immediately admitted to the hospital, where they are "doing well."

Defense Pact By Argentina, Uruguay Seen

Joint Protection of River Plate Expected To Be Undertaken.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 12.—(UP)—An Argentine-Uruguayan agreement for joint defense of the River Plate will be signed tomorrow by Foreign Minister Julio A. Roca, of Argentina, and Foreign Minister Alberto Guani, of Uruguay, reliable sources said tonight.

Direct contact is expected to be established between the Argentine and Uruguayan fighting forces to co-ordinate joint action against foreign aggression. Such co-operation would include use of all bases by both countries for mutual necessities without conflicting with the continental defense scheme.

During the second fortnight in January, it was said, the two countries will negotiate a new commercial treaty for intensification of their trade relations.

Envoy Post Offer To Duke Reported

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 12.—(UP)—The Miami Herald tonight said it had learned "the Duke of Windsor will be given the opportunity of accepting or declining appointment as British ambassador to the United States before the post is offered anyone else."

"His Royal Highness may fly to President Roosevelt for a conference today (Friday) on general matters, in which the ambassadorship would be bound to be a topic, it was learned," the newspaper said. Official sources close to the Duke had "no information whatsoever" regarding the report. Pan American Airways, whose plane the Herald said "it was reported the Duke would use," for a flight to see the President, said no plane had been chartered for such a private flight.

Rib-Tickling Patrolman Keeps 'GWTW' Crowds Under Control

Patrolman R. C. McGill is a quick-thinking man. Guarding a cleared pathway through the whooping crowd which watched outside Loew's Grand as the ticket-holders passed through, he was sorely troubled by a group of young girls who kept surging against the ropes to see better.

Patrolman McGill would tell them to get back and they would jeer him amiably and say "Yannh." Patrolman McGill would push them gently by the shoulders and they would push McGill's ample girth. Finally, Patrolman McGill had an idea. With a large, blunt forefinger he went down the line, yelling and tickling the young ladies in the ribs. That worked.

Mrs. Rachel Moore, of 1319 North View avenue, a twinkled-eyed little lady who weighs about 90 pounds, and her husky son, Joe, 21, who goes to Tech, do not know yet how they ended up as anchor men on the end of a police crowd-control rope. They were just standing there, waiting for the stars to come by, when an officer thrust the end of a rope at them and said, "Hold this." They held it and the officer didn't come back. They held it about an hour and a half, with the crowd up the line pushing against it for all it was worth. There were several times, when the pressure was strong, that Mrs. Moore would like to have turned loose. But she's Irish and determined, and she clung on.

Edmund Lowik, 15, of 168 Harris street, and Douglas Alexander, 15, of 358 Venable street, wouldn't walk around the corner to see Greta Garbo, but they are shrewd little businessmen and they know the suffering other folks will endure to catch a glimpse of Hollywood stars. They bought themselves 20 cone-shaped bean baskets for a nickel each. They sold them to people for a quarter, as seats and perches to stand on. They sold them all. Then when it was over they gathered them up and sold them back to the bean man for 3 cents apiece. Total profit to the bean man, 40 cents. Total profit to the boys, $4.60.

Talk about the Japanese saving their "face." The little brown men, could take lessons from the Atlanta police.

At 9:20 o'clock last night officers decided that all the dignitaries were in the theater and they could afford to lower the ropes and turn the crowd loose to press up close to the box office.

But by that time the crowd, restless and boisterous, was surging against the ropes and giving the officers a lot of trouble. Clearly, to take down the ropes then would indicate the police had been overpowered and were giving in.

So for the next 40 minutes, 40 officers pushed, shoved and shouted some 2,000 people into a semblance of order. Then they took the ropes down and turned them loose.

Oliver Lodge Letters To Remain Unopened

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Sealed letters left behind by Sir Oliver Lodge, British scientist and spiritualist, hoping that the contents would be revealed psychically to establish the reality of life after death, will remain unopened indefinitely.

The letters were referred to in Sir Oliver's will which was made public today. It would defeat his purpose if they were to be opened now, said W. H. Salter, secretary of the Society of Physical Research.

The letters were entrusted to the society by Sir Oliver, who died last August 22 at the age of 89.

Paper, Publisher Fined a Cent Each

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 12.—(UP)—United States District Judge Leslie Darr today fined the Chattanooga News-Free Press, publisher Roy McDonald, and Treasurer Everett Allen 1 cent each after the newspaper and the two executives were found guilty by a jury of conspiring to restrain interstate commerce.

Darr imposed the sentence after denying a motion for a new trial. Maximum sentence would have been imprisonment for a year and a $5,000 fine.

"The defendants are not guilty of a moral wrong. The court does not condone the act—but they did not intend to violate the law. It was a zeal after business that caused the defendants to overstep," said Judge Darr while imposing the fines.

Darr said "it is perfectly obvious to me that the advertising contracts did not cause the demise of the Evening Tribune," a paper published by George Fort Milton, complaining witness in the case against the News-Free Press.

Chicago News Editorial Is a la Uncle Remus

Likens Italy and Greece to Wolf, Ram; Brer Fox Hitler, He Laugh.

In the authentic form and flavor of Uncle Remus, a whimsical editorial in the Chicago Daily News recently finds a close parallel between a certain aspect of the international situation and the time that Brer Fox badgered Brer Wolf into making a felonious assault upon the person of one Mr. Benjermun Ram.

The editorial, entitled "The Wolf Breed" follows:

Material Shortage Curbs Plane Work

FARMINGDALE, N. Y., Dec. 12. (AP)—The Republic Aircraft Corporation, manufacturers of pursuit and fighter-bomber planes for the Army and Great Britain, has dropped 50 workmen because of a "temporary shortage of materials."

A spokesman for the company, successor to the Seversky Aircraft Corporation, said the men were given liberty to look for other employment even though they would be given the opportunity to return to Republic in the near future. What materials were involved he declined to state.

A $8,000,000 plant addition which has been planned for several months has not yet been started. The company holds about $60,000,000 in government contracts.

Youth's Steer Starts Him on Farm Career

4-H Boy of 11 in 1934
Now Cares for His Father's Interests.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
LAFAYETTE, Ga., Dec. 12.—In 1934, Frank Shattuck Jr., then an 11-year-old Walker county 4-H Club member, embarked on a livestock career, with one steer. The animal won grand championship at the Southeastern fair, and brought a nice prize. With the profits and prize money from his steer, Frank bought his first purebred Hereford heifer. He fed out a second steer in 1936, and three steers in 1937. Each time his profits and prize money were invested.

Frank now has nine high-class registered Herefords in his herd, which C. W. Wheeler, county agent of Walker county, estimates are worth $1,300. He has sold four bull calves for a total of $260.

Frank has graduated from high school and is operating his father's farm. He is increasing his pasture and improving it with the use of phosphate and lime. He uses limestone and phosphate liberally on his pasture and puts most of his cultivated land in hay crops. He grows hay and grain and feeds them to livestock for his main cash crop.

Already Frank has 35 acres in improved pasture and intends to use an additional 35 acres for more improved pasture. On his fertilized pasture he is now getting close to eight months "good grazing."

Italian Prisoners Arrive So Fast British Can't Feed Them

Sidi Barrani Battlefield Being Cleared

RAF'S Constant Attacks Keep Enemy Planes on Ground.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Italian prisoners of war were declared tonight by a British spokesman to be falling so rapidly by thousands into British hands that the problem of feeding and eventually moving them out of the desert is becoming troublesome. The day's operations were two-fold: Around Sidi Barrani, the Italian base that fell yesterday, the British were occupied with clearing up a battlefield which had extended over 200 square miles.

Those Fascists who had escaped the British encirclement and their number was said here to be small—were being pursued westward toward Italian Libya, harassed by the Royal Air Force and the Navy as well as the land forces. Spokesmen at British headquarters said the official estimate of at least 20,000 Italians already captured could not yet be extended because of the difficulty of keeping in touch with the continuing successes of British troops. In addition to attacking the retreating Italians, the Royal Air Force was declared to have kept up a constant series of raids upon all Fascist advanced airbases in Libya, preventing aircraft from taking off in many instances and destroying planes on the ground. The Italian campaign is declared to have cost Italy five generals.

Desert Expert Slain. One General Lustracci, was captured in Libya within a few days after Italy's declaration of war. Three others were taken prisoner near Sidi Barrani yesterday. A fifth, General Pietro Maletti, was killed on the first day of the British action. He was considered second only to Marshal Rodolfo Graziani as an expert in desert warfare. Edward Kennedy, Associated Press correspondent with the British forces, reported today in a delayed dispatch that the British fell upon the Italians with such suddenness Monday that many Fascist soldiers were surrounded at breakfast. Kennedy said that so intensive had been British air action that up to some time Tuesday not a single Italian plane had been observed over the desert camp where he is quartered.

SANTA VISITS POST OFFICE. VALDOSTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—Santa Claus already has made his visit to Postmaster Cam Young Sr. and the Valdosta post office. A modern cancelling machine has arrived and been installed with a capacity of more than 400 pieces of mail a minute.

ITALIANS CAUGHT IN NOOSE. Admiralty reports last night said British ships near (1) had bombarded focal points of retreating Italians at Salum and Bardia (small arrows), while large forces of Italian troops were trapped in the "Libyan noose." This "noose" was effected by sudden British attacks (arrows) from the desert (2) through Sidi Barrani (3) against the front south of Sidi Barrani, where Italians are resisting, and (4) a thrust at the Italian flank which swept around northward to the coast of Buqbuq. Shading indicates Italian Libya and Italian troops in Egypt.

British Tighten Noose Around Hapless Foe

Our Anxieties Are Now Removed, Churchill Tells Commons.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The British have driven the Italian invaders from virtually all of the Egyptian coastline, seized more than 20,000 prisoners—probably thousands more—and the Royal Navy and Air Force are pouring fire and steel upon the last exits from the area of Fascist disaster, it was officially declared today. This outline of the first big British offensive of the war—called by Winston Churchill a victory "of the first order" after days of official reserve—was drawn by the Prime Minister himself. Churchill declared that in the rough noose now being drawn by British armored units "it would not be surprising if at least the best part of three Italian divisions, including numerous blackshirt formations, had been either destroyed or captured." He made no effort to put this hapless force in terms of numbers of men, but an Italian division usually runs from 14,600 to 17,000.

Lord Lothian Was Atlantan's Close Friend

Saw Bobby Jones Play Exhibition Match on Visit Here.

Lord Lothian, the British ambassador to the United States, who died in Washington yesterday morning, was a visitor to Atlanta in January, 1939. While here he was guest of E. Warren Moore, Atlanta banker and attorney, a close friend. The ambassador first visited Atlanta about 10 years ago, and said one of the highlights of his trip to the United States was watching Bobby Jones play an exhibition golf match here. Moore recalled, in discussing his death, "Playing golf was Lord Lothian's favorite diversion," Moore said. "When he visited here for the first time, Bobby Jones' father took him to play golf at the East Lake Club. "I remember that I asked him if he would like to go dove shooting, but he said he had much rather play golf." The two first met when Moore was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, and Lord Lothian was administrator of the Rhodes trust. Moore is secretary of the Rhodes scholarship committee for the south. "I consider the spirit of the law very plain," Morgenthau said. "It is very clear, irrespective of any interpretation any lawyer might give. Furthermore, nobody has asked me for a loan." Regarding rearmament, Landon said it was up to all sections of the American populace to make sacrifices and that, while he opposed antitrust legislation, labor has "got to temporarily forego the right to strike."

Scientists Seek Metals Vital to War Materials

U. S. Group En Route to Cuba, Bolivia, Brazil for Explorations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The newest effort to make countries of the western hemisphere independent of foreign sources of war materials was announced today by Secretary Ickes. In a statement released at his press conference, he declared that six scientists of the United States Geological Survey are now en route to Bolivia, Cuba and Brazil to explore areas which may furnish tin, tungsten, manganese, chrome and antimony, as well as some other metals essential in the western hemisphere defense program. All of these are listed as either "necessary" or "critical" materials in the production of steel and aircraft construction, and most of them have in the past been imported from Far Eastern and European countries. These supplies have either been curtailed or cut off entirely in the present wars. Secretary Ickes declared that the explorations being undertaken are planned, with the co-operation of the countries concerned, to develop the economic and military defense of the western hemisphere.

3 Children Slain; Mother in Hospital

FRESNO, Cal., Dec. 12.—(AP)—Three small children were found slain in their beds today. Their mother, Mrs. Lillian Edwards, her arm slashed with a butcher knife, was placed under observation in County hospital. Police Chief Raymond T. Wallace said Mrs. Edwards attempted suicide. The children were Susan, 11; Donald, 6, and Veryl Ann, 9. Dan Lung, captain of detectives, said a medical examination was necessary to determine whether they were poisoned or strangled. A policeman found three bottles of poison spray on their bedroom floor. Lung said sheets were wrapped around the children's necks.

Anthony Eden Discussed as New Envoy

Successor to Lothian Will Have Hard Job on Hands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—There was much interest in government and diplomatic circles today as to the British government's choice of a new envoy to replace Lord Lothian who died this morning. Some suggested unofficially that Anthony Eden, war minister, who visited the United States two years ago, might be a popular selection. (A reliable source said that in the event the choice falls on someone holding ambassadorial status, the likely selection would be Sir Ronald Campbell, former British ambassador to France. He recently was named envoy to Portugal.)

Whoever is appointed will find a job requiring long hours because of heavy wartime work. Lothian had been active in obtaining a large-scale division of American war goods with the British empire. Only a few weeks ago he visited London, and on his return raised the question of American financial aid by stating that his country needed "planes, munitions, ships and finance." Lord Lothian, a bulky, six-foot man who retained the informality of his years as a journalist, had been ill since Sunday, but his condition had not been considered serious until last night. Luther P. Cudworth, of Boston, C. S. B. (bachelor of Christian Science) attended the diplomat. A Washington physician also was called in and notified the coroner of the death. (The coroner made the announcement of Lothian's death after 7 a. m. (Atlanta time).)

Tribute From Hull

In commenting on Lothian's death, Secretary Hull referred to the diplomat as a true interpreter to us of his country at a time when it was exceptionally important that both nations should have a knowledge and understanding of their mutual problems and interests. Other comment: Secretary Ickes—"He knew America as few Europeans do. He was thoroughly democratic, knew our American habits and psychology and was very popular here. His death is a very severe loss." James V. Forrestal, Acting Secretary of the Navy—"The death of Lord Lothian deprives us of a friend, one whose broad knowledge of world affairs will be greatly missed, and whose energetic personality brought closer the ties of the empire he represented and the United States." Former President Herbert Hoover—"Lord Lothian was one of the most distinguished Englishmen of his time. His great experience through the last war, the peace conference and in high position since equipped him as few men to represent his country in the United States. He was a gentle and an effective mind. He was a man of courage and devoted to his country."

Solomon Charges CIO Trying To Wreck Defense

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—A charge by Representative Leland M. Ford, Republican, California, that the CIO was doing all possible to "destroy" the national defense program brought from Representative Voorhis, Democrat, California, today the reply that such "wild statements" endangered national unity. The exchange climaxed a house debate which was touched off when Representative Taber, Republican, New York, asserted that the defense program was not progressing as fast as it should because workmen were being assessed "exorbitant fees" in order to obtain jobs. The "most important thing" President Roosevelt could do, Taber declared, would be to "put the government's house in order" by giving more authority to the Defense Commission.

Georgia Soldier Admits He's 15, Made Children's Society Ward

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—One of Uncle Sam's new soldiers—uniform and all—became a ward of the Children's Society today. Hanging his head, Howard L. Oliver, of LaGrange, Ga., admitted to General Sessions Judge Jonah J. Goldstein that he was 15 years old—not the 18 he claimed when he enlisted in the 16th Infantry at Fort Jay. The boy had pleaded guilty to a charge of assault in the third degree in connection with the theft of $35 from a seaman in a barroom last November. Involved with him were a 24-year-old woman and a youth, 18, who also pleaded guilty.

Nazis Advise Duke Gets Rest U. S. To Help And Privacy as In 'New Order'

Wife's Hospitalization Gives Him Excuse To Refuse Invitations.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 12.—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor is taking advantage of a week's visit to the United States for the sort of rest and privacy rarely permitted to one in his position. Now that the Duchess is well on the way to recovery from a serious dental operation, he is occupying his time with reading, short motor trips around Miami Beach and Miami, and a bit of unostentatious shopping in stores away from the principal business districts. Because of his wife's hospitalization, the Duke has the perfect excuse for a polite no to the scores of invitations he received for one sort of function or another.

Germany Has Nothing Against Americans—Von Ribbentrop.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—(UP)—A Nazi warning, presumably inspired by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, today advised the United States to co-operate with Germany "before it is too late" because Great Britain already is on the verge of collapse. The statement, which said that "Germany has nothing against the American people," appeared in the Magazine "Lin-Rome-Tokyo" and was signed with three stars, generally understood to mean that it was written under the auspices of Ribbentrop. The article appeared two days after Hitler's speech to German workers, in which he linked the United States and Britain together in accusations of capitalistic slavery and said that, with Nazi work substituted for gold, Germany, under his leadership, "can beat any other power in the world." "Staggering Great Britain takes blows, looking fixedly toward America, whose (British Prime Minister Winston) Churchill not only expects the delivery of war materials, but participation in the war that already is decided," said the magazine. "It is absolutely astonishing with what degree of stupidity, forgetfulness and irresponsibility the British leaders believe they can count on the American people. America, they think, should enter the war for England against the New World order from which the United States can have more advantages than even a victorious England could ever offer them." "Nothing Against Americans." The article blamed the demands for greater American aid to Britain on "England's Wall Street friends" and to "Jewish bankers." "Germany has nothing against the American people, who, we know, have nothing against Germany," it was stated. "Germany always has recognized the wisdom of the Monroe Doctrine and therefore demands the same for itself and its friends as a basis for continental relations tomorrow." "The fanfares of reconstruction already are mingling with the death throes of the Britain of yesterday. Europe is creating itself anew." "Clearly audible from afar, young peoples and their friends have sent out a call to co-operate. Their march is the law of the coming century, the idea of tomorrow, which must be recognized or denied."

3 More Cabinet Members Quit In Uruguay

Protest Policy of Consulting With U. S. on Defense Bases.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Three more members of President Alfredo Baldomir's cabinet resigned today, in protest against the President's policy of consulting on conversations with the United States on the construction of naval and air bases for hemisphere defense. This made five ministers who have broken with the President in two days. FARM BUREAU FAVORS AID FOR LATIN-AMERICA. BALTIMORE, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The American Farm Bureau Federation went on record today in favor of "financial assistance" to Latin-American countries for storing and controlling crop surpluses "as well as for other purposes." "It should not be the policy of the United States," said a resolution adopted by the farm convention, "to crowd these countries out of their customary markets."

HULL DESCRIBES PARLEY AS DEFENSE DEVELOPMENT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Secretary Hull described a conference between the Argentine and Uruguayan foreign ministers expected to open today at Colonia Pan-American co-operation in as a phase of the development of hemisphere defense as outlined at the Havana Conference of American Republics. The secretary's statement was in response to a press conference request for comment on the meeting of Alberto Guani, foreign minister of Uruguay, and Julio Roca, Argentine foreign minister.

No time of the year furnishes better opportunities for a study of the heavens—the stars, constellations and planetary bodies that shine and move majestically in the vault above us. ## Legislators Hit Social Security Administration

Rees Calls Welfare Department 'Rottenest Thing in State.'

Criticism of the administration of social security funds by the state and county departments of public welfare continued yesterday as senators and representatives from the third and sixth districts assembled in Atlanta for a legislative conference with Governor-elect Talmadge.

Representative Cleveland Rees, of Webster county, described this department as "the rottenest thing in the state of Georgia."

Senator Homer Edfield, of the fourth district, said a welfare official told him last year that "of every dollar that goes through the Atlanta office for social security payments, 26.8 per cent is for administration."

He added he had investigated the distribution of funds in his county of Camden and found that for every $531 spent, $150 was consumed for administration.

More Practical Solution. Before the conference Talmadge said he had concluded that the elimination of many employees in county offices was a "more practical solution" than the setting up of district offices.

A few legislators defended the welfare setup by declaring the funds were properly and efficiently distributed in their counties.

Representative Herschel Lovett, of Laurens, described the welfare, education and revenue departments as "top-heavy" and recommended reorganization.

Pointing out that there was "lots of extravagance" in the administration of the school system, he advocated that the governor-elect call in the executives of the department and require them to give an "honest statement" on operating expenses.

He expressed the opinion there was no necessity for three members of the Highway Board on a full-time basis. He recommended that the chairman have a full-time salary, but that the other two commissioners should be paid on a per diem basis.

Expressions of Legislators. It appeared from the expressions of legislators there would be no move to abolish the county unit system at the next session.

Representative Edward Wohlwend, of Muscogee county, said he was "one of the city boys who believe in the county unit system."

This drew comment from Talmadge, who said it seemed the smaller counties were getting along better than some of the large ones.

In speaking on the proposal for an annual session of the legislature, Representative Marion Ennis, of Baldwin, said he was in favor of a yearly session meeting for an indefinite period, with a flat salary for members.

Talmadge did not advocate the homestead exemption law be abolished, but said:

"If some of you boys have the courage to advocate doing away with this exemption and urge me on, then maybe I'll get up a little more courage."

Passed in 1937. This law, which was approved by the legislature and placed in the constitution in 1937, exempts homesteads up to $2,000 from taxation, although under the law this could be reduced to $1,250. Numerous counties have complained that it wiped out their principal source of revenue.

Referring to the State Highway Patrol in his address to the senators and representatives, Talmadge said it was "a dangerous thing to put two men together in somebody else's car with somebody else's gasoline and a pistol fastened to their belts."

He expressed the opinion that if patrolmen are to travel together, "You should put the oldest with the youngest, and then they'll be too ashamed to cut up much before each other."

The announcement stipulated that all applicants must file by noon, December 21. Following are the posts to be filled: City mechanical engineer to head the newly established smoke abatement bureau, salary $3,600 a year; smoke inspector, salary range from $150 to $200 a month; ambulance driver, salary from $100 to $120 a month; truck driver, from $4 to $5 a day.

Resolutions and petitions for annexation of three city tracts were on file yesterday at the city hall. Offered by Councilman J. Frank Beck, of the fifth ward, are resolutions asking the Georgia legislature to place the Chevrolet Motor Company plant on McDonough road and the King Plow Works off Marietta street in the city limits.

In addition, about 20 property owners and residents are asking that about 90 acres of the Park View subdivision be included inside the city limits. There were reports that a concentrated effort to extend the city limits is being studied by the incoming Roy LeCraw administration.

Alderman Raleigh Drennon, of the sixth ward, yesterday was a grandfather for the third time, when a son, Patrick William Drennon, 7-1-2 pounds, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Luther Zahn Drennon, 850 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. ## Industry Hits All-Time High In November

Federal Reserve Board Estimates Output at 131 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The Federal Reserve Board estimated today that industry, spurred by defense orders, reached a new all-time peak in November.

The board's seasonally adjusted index of industrial production placed November output at 131 per cent of the 1935-39 average. The index had been 123 the preceding month, and 124 a year ago.

"Recent increases in activity have been widespread," the agency's monthly bulletin asserted. "Expanded output has occurred not only in industries directly engaged in production of war materials and in those making goods formerly supplied by European producers; war and defense developments have also increased civilian expenditures.

"In the aggregate these increases have much more than offset losses resulting from the closing of many foreign markets for American goods. Retail sales of automobiles have been exceptionally large this autumn, more new houses have been bought, and consumers' purchases of other products have increased substantially.

$56,000,000 MORE IN CIRCULATION.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Christmas shopping, pumping money out of banks, reduced excess reserves in the Federal Reserve member banks by $30,000,000 in the week ended December 11.

The Federal Reserve Board reported today the decrease left the level of these lendable reserves at $6,790,000,000. There was an increase of $56,000,000 in money in circulation, most of which could be credited to Christmas shopping.

Fulton National Raises Surplus To $1,000,000

Regular, Extra Dividends Voted; Employees Are Given Bonus.

An announcement made late yesterday afternoon by F. W. Blacklock, president of the Fulton National Bank, that the board of directors, at their regular meeting held yesterday, voted an increase in their surplus account of $150,000 from the earnings of the bank, raising the surplus account from $850,000 to $1,000,000.

The directors also declared the regular semi-annual dividend of $3.50 per share, payable $1.75 per share January 2, 1941, and a like amount, $1.75, per share payable April 1, 1941. In addition to this regular dividend, an extra dividend of $3 per share was declared, payable January 2, 1941.

The officers and employees were voted extra compensation in line with their length of service with the bank.

The Fulton National Bank now has a capital of $1,475,000, with surplus of $1,000,000, undivided profits and reserves of more than $600,000, with total resources in excess of $400,000.

Shiny Coins Begin Filling 'Mile of Dimes'

All That Stand Between Hundreds and Hunger on Christmas.

The first yawning round holes of the "Mile of Dimes" boards began to fill yesterday with shiny coins, but it was only the beginning.

Those dimes, and the others to follow from generous pockets, are all that stand between hundreds of hopeless men, women and children—friendless, often desperate human beings—and hunger on Christmas Day.

The boards were set up yesterday in the drive jointly sponsored by The Constitution and the Salvation Army, one at Five Points and the other at Peachtree and Ellis streets. A third will go into action today at Whitehall and Alabama streets.

The roving Christmas musicians of the Army visited the boards, and loyal workers stood on duty throughout the day and evening.

The Army IN GEORGIA

How a private in Uncle Sam's Army can rise to rank of an officer in a few years was demonstrated yesterday when Robert E. Ragan and William M. Oakes became second and first lieutenants in the Army's new armored division.

Lieutenant Ragan enlisted December, 1926, and Lieutenant Oakes enlisted in February, 1929. Both became sergeants during the past year, Ragan in August, and Oakes on December 1, only a few days before he was made a first lieutenant.

Ragan is 31, married, and a native of Greenville, Texas. He enlisted at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and rose progressively through each grade in his company, to assume his duties as lieutenant December 1. He left Fort Benning and is stationed at the Overseas Discharge and Replacement Depot at Fort Moultrie, South Carolina.

Lieutenant Oakes is from Burkburnett, Texas. He enlisted as a private in Company D, 8th Infantry, in 1929, served three years and was discharged a corporal. He then re-enlisted for service in China, spending two years with the "Can Do" Regiment in Tientsin, and returning to join the 2nd Tank Company at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Soon after he was transferred to Fort Benning with the cadre for this company. He will assume his new duties at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

FULL ARMORED DIVISION DASHES 90 MILES

ABBEVILLE, Ala., Dec. 12.—(AP) The United States Army put a full armored division into the field today, writing a new page in military history with what elated officers called the world's most powerful striking force.

Ten thousand men moved out of Fort Benning after a leisurely breakfast, roared ninety miles in parallel columns by lunchtime and settled down in bivouac areas at Blakely, Ga. and Abbeville, Ala.

The troops, made up of the Second Armored Division, travelled in 1,102 vehicles, tanks, combat cars, trucks, motorcycles and a few airplanes.

Commanded by Brigadier General George S. Patton Jr., the march of the Second Armored Division today set several records. It was the first time a full armored division moved across country in the western hemisphere.

On the ninety-mile run, only five tanks were stopped for repairs and four of these resumed the march before their organizations were settled in camp.

The 400 tanks were the largest concentration of this type of combat vehicles ever undertaken in the United States. Some of the equipment had been delivered only last week to the division at Fort Benning.

CREEK IS BRIDGED IN IN 20 MINUTES

FORT BENNING, Dec. 12.—The Second Battalion, 41st Infantry (Armored), Fort Benning, Georgia, Company C, 17th Engineer Battalion, and Battery A, 78th Field Artillery Battalion, has staged a demonstration of the crossing of an unfordable stream for a group of officers and non-commissioned officers of the Second Armored Division. Lieutenant Colonel C. S. Johnson, the Second Battalion commander, was in charge of the exercise and from a well-selected observation point explained the action as it unfolded.

The crossing took place on the Upatoi creek in the vicinity of the new post pumping plant. Under the protection of a smoke screen and artillery preparation laid down immediately after the crossing started, assault boats which had been carried to the stream's edge crossed bearing the covering force to the opposite bank.

The remainder of the battalion followed shortly, over floating footbridges flung across the obstacle by the engineers. Speed was the keynote of the demonstration, only 20 minutes being required for the entire operation.

General George S. Patton Jr., the division commander, expressed satisfaction with the energetic effort of all who participated.

50 GENERALS STUDY AT FORT BENNING

FORT BENNING, Dec. 12.—More general officers than at any time in its 20 years of its existence are now at Fort Benning Officers' Club and have been guests at several functions of Major General Lloyd R. Fredendall, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Brigadier General Courtney H. Hodges, commandant of the infantry school.

The 15 major generals and 35 brigadier generals are attending a two-week refresher course which started Monday. They inspected the motor section and the range and other technical installations of the school and saw three demonstrations, in which scouting and patrolling and direct laying of the Cal. 30 machinegun was emphasized.

SIXTH CAVALRY TO ADD 250 NEW RECRUITS

FORT OGLETHERPE, Ga., Dec. 12.—The War Department has authorized the Sixth Cavalry to recruit almost 250 additional men to bring the strength of the regiment to a total of 1,456 men, it was announced here.

The regiment now has a strength of 1,208 men. Recruiting for the new men will begin immediately at the post recruiting station. Specialists of all kinds are greatly needed here.

OGLETHERPE TO INSTALL NEW PHONE SWITCHBOARD

FORT OGLETHERPE, Ga., Dec. 12.—Lieutenant Carlisle Cobb, Staff Sergeant Jack Taylor, of the signal detachment, and four privates of the Sixth Cavalry left Tuesday for Fort Bragg, N. C., where they will transport a 400-drop telephone switchboard to the post here.

The additional telephone equipment is needed here because of the expansion of the post, Captain Anthony Kleitz, regimental adjutant, said today. The new switchboard is now the property of the signal corps.

It is all part of a refresher course to keep generals abreast of military developments.

National Guard Chiefs Study New Methods

Colonel Adler Says Army Doing Better Job Than in 1917.

FORT BENNING, Ga., Dec. 12.—(AP)—National Guard general officers who led troops with the American Expeditionary Forces in the World War made intensive study today of new methods for conducting warfare in a program of demonstrations continuing night and day.

"The army had nothing like it in 1917," said Colonel Julius Adler, commander of the 113th Infantry, who served as captain with the 306th Infantry in the AEF. "The army is doing a far better job now than then."

Colonel Adler, general manager of the New York Times and publisher of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, finished a gruelling grind requiring three expeditions into wooded areas around this huge army reservation, then declared: "Every army officer should take this course."

Covers Every Operation. The course is designed by the faculty of the infantry school to cover every phase of operation of a modern army. With a slight favoring of weary muscles, Colonel Adler asserted that as far as he himself was concerned, he "wouldn't have missed it despite the fast pace."

Almost the entire roster of general officers inducted into active service from the National Guard, including about 50 brigadier and station at Augusta, Ga., were incomplete and that there was no indication when construction would start on facilities for about 2,000 officers and men to be stationed there.

The Augusta station was one of 77 new Air Corps posts construction of which was assigned to the army engineers this week, and one of 24 at which building had not been started.

Officials said that until construction plans were more definite, no date would be fixed for movement of Air Corps units to Augusta. The units to be stationed there are the 22nd Pursuit Wing headquarters and headquarters squadron, the 61st Transport Group and the 22nd Airbase Group.

Originally, the Air Corps had planned to base the 53rd Pursuit Group at Augusta, effective December 20. The wing headquarters and transport units were substituted for that group, however, and the effective date of their assignment to the new station will be determined by the construction program.

In the Field Artillery, there is a vice president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, Brigadier General Edward C. Rose, commanding the 69th Field Artillery of the 44th Division at Camp Dix.

New Phase in Albania

A sharp slowing down of Greek advances in the northern Albanian sector is indicated in press dispatches, and it is not improbable that this condition will soon prove to be general along the front.

Reports of new troops in the battle lines and the arrival of units mobilized from Greeks resident in Turkey are part of this picture, indicating heavy losses in trained regiments and forced withdrawal of these units for rest and reconstruction. General Winter also is taking a hand in the situation after initially aiding the Greek stand and counter-invasion. Also to be taken into consideration is the loss of original impetus natural in such a situation. The factor of Italian reinforcements is also being felt, and the supply problem of the Greeks will grow more serious daily.

The first chapter of the invasion of Albania thus is coming to a close. The second chapter depends upon a number of factors which should be a matter of consideration to every free government left on earth, that of the United States no less than any other.

The Greek high command possibly will be able to keep the initiative and maintain a slow advance. This it must soon, if it does not now, accomplish with inadequately trained reserves. This will presuppose higher loss ratio and hasten the disintegration of the armed forces which at most will muster 600,000 troops. The Italians can oppose these soldiers with men drawn from a reservoir of millions to the full extent of Italian morale. Counter-attacks lately reported would indicate this is not yet in utter collapse, although it undoubtedly has been near that point several times in the retreat from Greece. The Greeks must also maintain supply lines extended more and more and taxed by inadequate highways and lack of motorized transport.

Several factors may overbalance these points in favor of the Grecian forces. A sufficient number of British bombing planes may make the supply of the Italian forces extremely difficult and shove the Roman legions-in-reverse into a Dunkerque withdrawal action even though the Greek troops do not push them into the sea. It may be also that Greek losses have not been as heavy as experience would indicate and that shock troops again will take up the attack after a period of rest.

But probably the brightest hope for the Greeks lies in the British offensive in Egypt, which, if successful, will free large numbers of troops and vast quantities of supplies for action against the Italians in conjunction with the Greek allies. Such a victory might even preclude German counter-action through the Balkans by stiffening the attitude of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. If these lands can be saved from German domination, Russia and Turkey may prove more than passive neutrals. Egypt then would stand in the enviable position worthy of the love and respect of all peoples forever as the scene of the turning point in the careers of two dictators, Napoleon and Hitler.

It would appear that time is the essence from which victory in the Mediterranean basin may be possible. In so far as this country is concerned, the problem should be approached from that standpoint and extreme sacrifices made to send planes and supplies to the Near East and Greece. It would be a stroke of rare statesmanship for this country to use American shipping to take these necessary items by way of Cape of Good Hope to Aden or some other transshipment point from which British ships could speed them to Egypt and Greece. It might prove the turning point in the war. But have we the imagination and the foresight necessary?

Peace, as depicted in the cartoons, is a case for the lonely hearts editor. Though young and considered pretty, she's nobody's baby now.

Now it's the Briton's turn to rumor a "secret weapon," to be dropped on the foe. Possibly a Christmas pudding of the heavy, demolition type.

What did they decide about the Rumanian earthquake? Some thought that nature, tired of man's deadly foolishness, was trying a hand at sabotage.

Taxing U. S. Securities

The announcement by Secretary Morgenthau of the first wholly taxable securities issue in the history of the United States Treasury, emphasizes the fact that, within the near future, this nation will have to levy a far heavier tax burden upon its citizens than ever before. Defense cannot be paid for out of thin air, its cost must be met by taxation, either of this generation or by deferment to another.

It has been argued that much private capital that should have been financing industry and new business during the depression years has been withheld and invested in tax-free government securities. Undoubtedly this is true, though whether the fact they were tax free was the chief motivating cause, may be doubted. Any such financial advantage is usually offset by natural market conditions. The purchaser of tax-free issues generally pays more for them than he would if they had been taxable, or the interest rate is lower, thus offsetting the advantage. In any event the final outcome, nine times out of ten, is that the investor nets about the same earning for his money whether the securities are taxable or not.

However, by making such securities taxable the government removes a cause of criticism. It has been frequently said that it was unfair to exempt the rich man's investments while taxing the earnings of the workers. Even though demagogic, this argument will no longer hold water.

And, as stated, the making of these obligations of the federal government taxable provides a needed emphasis on the inescapable fact that all of us, capitalists and wage earners alike, are facing much heavier taxation than we have ever known, in the not distant future.

What ever became of the Roman, in the old-time knockabout sketch, Greco-Roman wrestling?

Rarity Makes News

It is the unusual that makes an event into news. Thus the recent accident to a Southern Railway train just outside Atlanta was of heightened news value because of the relative rarity of accidents in modern railway operation.

Few accidents have demonstrated, so forcefully, the great advance in safety of operation and equipment achieved by the railroads in recent years. Here was an instance where a number of passenger coaches were turned over into a ditch, yet only 12 persons were injured and, according to latest hospital reports, none of these are so hurt they will not recover.

Merely a decade or two ago such an accident would inevitably have resulted in many times the injured and in considerable fatalities. Modern steel coaches mean all the difference in life protection, compared to the old-style coaches made largely of wood, now happily almost entirely replaced.

That President E. E. Norris, chief executive of the Southern, should be injured is deeply regretted by all Atlantans. The city's sympathy, too, goes out to all those hurt, as well as to their families and friends. But there is deep satisfaction that the incident was not more serious, that help came so quickly and that all the injured have been well taken care of and given every possible attention.

Modern railroad operation is marred by few accidents and, even those that do, unavoidably, occur, involve far less peril to passengers than those of a few years ago.

What Dora thinks is that the Duce under-estimated the Greeks.

Editorial Symposium

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

Declaring the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway "should have been completed years ago," the DETROIT FREE PRESS likens the northern waterway to the Panama Canal, "which, too, was fought for years by short-sighted 'interests.'" And, to the WORCESTER GAZETTE, the linking of the seaway to the defense program by the President should make "many of the arguments against the undertaking . . . appear less impressive in the face of the war peril which confronts us," and although "New York city and the eastern railroad interests will renew their objections to the plan . . . the proposal has merits."

THE NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE points out that while "the President terms the scheme a 'vital necessity' . . . the original seaway treaty contained one absolutely fatal defect: In effect it surrendered to Canada power of life or death over the lakes-to-gulf unit of the Mississippi valley's inland waterway system," explaining "it did that by 'freezing,' at a maximum dangerously small, the volume of water diversion from Lake Michigan to maintain navigable depths in the lakes-to-gulf channel, and by vesting in Canada absolute power to veto any proposed increase of that diversion to meet national needs."

The "contention that the seaway is needed as a haven to build ships for our navy is absurd," says Albany's KNICKERBOCKER NEWS, which adds: "If it takes four years to build the seaway and four more (the President's own figure) to create a battleship, what use can such warcraft be to a war that 1941 possibly will decide?" And the WASHINGTON POST declares that "Long-term and short-term defense needs . . . are strangely confused in President Roosevelt's message to the Great Lakes Seaway and Power Conference," feeling, however, that "this point is well taken" when he declared, "Shipyards on the Great Lakes, with access to the ocean, yet close to the sources of supply of labor, raw and finished materials, further removed from possible attack may be a vital factor in successful defense . . ."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

"WHO WON THE ELECTION, ANYWAY?" WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—As yet no one can say for certain how the President means to handle his third term—whether he will try to carry matters with a high hand, or will walk delicately, adjusting his methods and policies to avoid unnecessary conflicts. There are signs pointing both ways. A depressing sign suggesting he still prefers the tactic of the high hand is the report that he hankers to appoint a legislative agent to represent him on Capitol Hill.

During the middle period of the New Deal, the President had such a legislative agent, in the person of former Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West. West, who used the speaker's office on the house side as his headquarters, was the President's eyes, ears and mouthpiece on the Hill. At least as far as the house was concerned, he acted as the main channel of communication between the President and the leaders. The leaders' direct contacts with the President became exceedingly rare.

PLAN WAS FAILURE The system worked badly, since the seeming slight from the President, infatuated at being asked to take orders from a White House underling. Friction eventually became so acute that West had to go. After West's retirement, which was accelerated by the enmity of his official chief, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, the President tried briefly to use his son James to do part of West's work. This changed but hardly improved the situation, and at length, at the suggestion of Speaker Sam Rayburn, then majority leader, the present system of Monday morning leaders' meetings at the White House was instituted.

The President is anxious to name a new legislative agent, according to the above-mentioned report, because he would like to cut down the time he now gives to conferences with his congressional chieftains. If he gets his way, some member of the White House staff will be assigned the duties once performed by West. And the instant that happens, the old pattern will repeat itself, for the mere appointment of such a man to such a post is an implied slight to Congress. It is certain to be bitterly resented by members of all factions.

WON'T GET WAY The chances are the President will not get his way, for Speaker Sam Rayburn and all the other friends of the White House on the Hill have strenuously resisted the proposal so far. Nevertheless, it is ominous enough that the proposal has been made. It indicates the strength of the attitude expressed in a slogan popular in the more extreme New Deal circles—"Who won the election, anyway?"

This slogan said to have originated in a quiet remark, "I sometimes wonder if we really won," which Mr. Roosevelt dropped after a voluble amateur adviser had urged the President to offer concessions to his opponents all along the line. The rueful little joke has been transmuted into a rallying cry for renewed New Deal aggressiveness of the old familiar sort.

Unfortunately, when the more ardent New Dealers take the President's re-election as the final test of strength, they leave out of their calculation several important facts. For one thing, congress was in full rebellion against the White House only a little more than a year ago, and may well rebel again at any moment. For another, the President's really crucial policies—in the fields of foreign affairs and national defense—are if anything more strongly opposed now than they were before November 5. For example, two great states, Indiana and Illinois, whose senators formerly gave unquestioning allegiance to the White House, are now represented in the senate by bitter-ender anti-New Dealers and isolationists, Raymond Willis and Curly Brooks.

AN OMINOUS MEETING It ought to mean something to the President that a state the size of Illinois chose for senator a man who has the name of being the faithful disciple of Colonel Robert R. McCormick, as Brooks has. There are also post-election straws in the wind he would do well to watch. For instance, the friends of Wendell L. Willkie are deeply alarmed by a Chicago meeting of 12 midwestern Republican state chairmen, called for this weekend by the Illinois chairman, Ben L. Berve. The meeting is ostensibly a mere rally of Republican bigwigs in the midwestern area, but the Willkieites feel it is the start of a movement to return the party to extreme isolationism and unyielding conservatism. If such a movement should succeed, the President's task with congress will be even more difficult than at present.

Fortunately there are also signs suggesting that the President's hankering to name a legislative agent does not represent his basic intentions towards congress. It is understood, for instance, that he plans to use Vice President Henry A. Wallace as a good will ambassador to South America, repeating the Mexican experiment elsewhere in the hemisphere. This means that the senate's regular presiding officer will be the president pro tem. The President is stated to have had a hand in arranging that Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, be chosen president pro tem, in which case he has gone far to repair the damage done when he flouted Harrison and his powerful following to force Alben W. Barkley's selection as majority leader. Harrison's elevation, moreover, is looked upon as a step in a general reorganization of the senate leadership—a project as wise and useful as the naming of a presidential legislative agent would be ineffectual and ill-judged.

By RALPH T. JONES.

Women for Heavy Work.

That women are frequently better at the really heavy jobs of work than are men is the rather surprising report that came, this week, out of war-torn England. Even as navies, it is said, women can lift a heavier daily load than men, when the individual's own weight is considered.

The reasons for this surprising discovery, it is said, are two. In the first place women possess relatively better control of their nervous systems than do men. They can, thus, make their muscles respond better with the result that size for size, a woman's muscles lift a trifle more than a man's.

In the second place, women work more steadily than men. Men are apt to work in spurts, carry a few really heavy loads to show what they can do, and then pause for a rest. Whereas women keep steadily at it and, although the individual load they carry may be smaller, in the course of a day their total achievement for the day is often larger than that of a stronger man.

25 Tons

In Ten Hours.

Some examples are given. For instance, there is a woman navy in a Glasgow chemical factory shoveling crude borite. She lifts each shovelful to a height of 2 1/2 feet and, working from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. with two hours off for meals, lifts 25 tons a day.

In the British army the standard for shovelling is to lift one cubic foot of loose earth per minute for an eight-hour day. This totals about 17 tons.

Women brickworkers in England are doing terrifically heavy labor. The younger girls fill and empty the brick ovens. They carry a load slightly over 100 pounds in weight for a distance of 70 yards, when filling the ovens. They carry the bricks in a semi-spiral on the right arm, locking the left hand under the bottom brick. They have no carrying apparatus. The older women make the bricks by filling moulds with wet clay. If bakers call handling flour dough heavy work, which they do, handling wet clay for bricks must be heavier.

In many industries the size of the load carried by women is left entirely to each woman's discretion. But it is not unusual, it is stated, to find women carrying loads amounting to 93 per cent of their own body weight.

In both the tile and tin-plate industries, women lift what totals 10 tons daily for each worker, on an average.

Say, you married men, it isn't so shameful to be afraid when the little woman raises her admonitory fist, is it?

Let's start calling the men the weaker sex, shall we?

Competent President Officer.

Legare Davis, presiding over the annual meeting of the Atlanta Better Business Bureau, pulled a line that might be copied by most presiding officers, in like situation.

It was the occasion for annual election of officers and directors. The report of the nominating committee had been received. Said Legare:

"With childlike faith that no one will throw a monkey wrench in the machinery, the bylaws provide that I shall now ask if there are any nominations from the floor."

There were none.

Now it is said that the Vichy government is having some sign boards painted in Greek. They are for erection on the Franco-Italian border, facing into Italy. They will read something like this:

"Notice to the Greeks! This is the French border. Please come no further."

Three young men who exploded a bomb outside the house of a German truck driver in Melbourne, Australia, were lectured on fair play by the judge who presided at their trial. They testified they were angry when Heinrich Reinann, unaturalized German, was given a job driving a truck formerly driven by a man who enlisted in the army. "We hope Australians in Germany receive decent treatment," said Judge Magennis, "but even if they don't, do not let us imitate German methods."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Should Snap Spell NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The Germans took full advantage of the quadrennial madness of the stupid Americans, but though we lost precious time and our resolution wobbled, Hitler has now said the words which should snap the spell. From the German point of view they were much better left unsaid. To us they should be a kick in the pants.

It has often been observed that the reason why the patriotic German is so brutal, treacherous and selfish is to be found in his inability to imagine that any other nation has any right which conflicts with any interest of Germany. That has been demonstrated in the attacks on the little nations whose military menace was so puny that when Hitler struck they were obliterated in, so to speak, a day. The moral rotteness of the German national spirit gained much in these actions, but the expression of that vice unwittingly given in Hitler's speech to his robots will show how itself.

In that address Hitler was unable to imagine that the people of the United States might be capable of patriotic effort or that their lethargy could be due to anything but that which he would call civic degeneracy and fear of Hitler. He certainly must have been advised that, from a state of alarm last spring, the Americans had spun off into a domestic spat over the presidency which monopolized their interest to the almost total neglect of the menace of Adolf Hitler. The election over, the Americans still dawdled in the throes of an awful political hangover. A comparative few young men went off to military camps, some of which were unprepared to house them decently; the two big labor organizations met in rival conventions to exchange execrations, the rearmament program bogged down and the President of the United States now found conditions so relaxed that he could crank up a warship and go off on a cruise.

Nice To Forget

A more favorable condition, from Hitler's standpoint, it would be impossible to imagine, for it is not denied that this nation must be Britain's arsenal, shipyard and farm, not some time, but now. Hitler realized this better than the Americans, who had begun to mumble again about Britain's old sins against Ireland and the Boers, forgetting that Hitler was the enemy of the United States. It was nice to forget, to excuse neglect, laziness and greed on the ground that Britain had called this country Uncle Shylock—on the ground that, anyway, European wars were an old story and the Atlantic 3,000 miles wide.

Charles Lindbergh had said that we could live on friendly terms with Hitler victorious, and there were those who clutched at that hope, too. So, altogether, but for the innate evil of a predatory breed whose historic brutality is so widely packaged in the character of one man, this nation might have snoozed on. The time surely was ripe to let the Americans drowse, but Hitler, fortunately, took this hour to declare that, contrary to his past preaching, this was a war against capitalism, a war between two worlds, two philosophies, his and ours, naming the United States.

So the struggle against Jewish Bolshevism, that shrieking fraud, becomes openly at last a war of German Bolshevism against the only system under which freedom exists. And from Hitler comes the admission that any means, even that Bolshevism which he reviled for years, is legitimate to serve the brutal aspirations of a killer nation.

Rights of Germans Only

The right to live, of which he spoke, is a right of Germans only, of Czechs or Belgians, Danes, Norwegians, or Poles, and any wrong done in the name of Germany is right, because the super-race of chosen people alone of all the world have rights.

Every foul and stealthy attribute formerly imputed to that useful old goblin, world Jewry, is discovered now as the worst in the name of Germany. Germanism. Americans are put on notice that the American world, the American philosophy, must go, because they interfere with the German right. This warning has been sounded before, but never so openly by Hitler, who obviously must feel that by now the American nation is too far gone in sloth, corruption and internal rancor to be capable of resistance.

This wasn't mere recklessness on Hitler's part. It was the spirit of the German nation expressing again its determination to rule a world of sub-human slaves.

On the lintels of the age, beauty writes here in the newborn south. After the scorch of the sand and Peace's For the hush of the cannon's mouth: And here ablaze is the fount of praise. And the fantastic waters sing. The minstrel of the marble that resounds with the warlike bristlers of spring.

They first turn blue, then a soft gray hue Of purple takes the stage. Then a red of the fire tips off the lyre—Then follows the swift green's rage; Then an amber spreads on the pinkish heads That splash from the troubled foam That thumps to the roll of the jittering crowd. That calls all the spurring home.

The laurel tree let a soft warm breeze Through gaps of autumn haze, And the brown of the leaf lifts high its sheaf. To the Indian-summer days, And Love walks through the sod and the dew. ## ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

WELFARE AGAIN Mr. Charles Brown, new county commissioner, is soon to become the head of the new commission committee on welfare.

Mr. Brown, no doubt, is receiving the condolences of those who recognize the position as one not generally comfortable for one politically ambitious.

Mr. Brown can, by looking into his job thoroughly, provide for himself and his conscience a great deal of satisfaction and at the same time do a job for humanity which will gain him the respect and admiration of a great many of his fellow men.

The welfare committee deals with hunger, cold, and sickness. And with the helpless.

Which is another way of saying it deals in human misery. It deals with persons who are not important politically. They are, almost entirely, unemployables who will never be anything but a financial drain on the county; who will never carry a ward or a precinct; who will never do anything but go ahead and live a miserable, ill-fed, comfortless existence. Those are the facts.

Mr. Brown is to have a thankless job. Because it is a job which involves taxes he will have many pressures brought against him. These pressures all will come from one side. There will be no pressure, unless he went to see them, from those who are on the lists. They can't exert any pressure. It not generally is recognized that this welfare committee deals almost entirely with unemployables. Theirs is not the most pleasant job of rehabilitation. It is one job of prolonged misery. And of no progress.

NOT IN POLITICS These people long have been a political load. They have caused more talk and other group in our political history.

Just now there is a cheerful little proposal which would make it illegal to give them more than two and a quarter mills instead of two and three-quarters.

The ironic fact is that two and three-quarters mills are not enough. Last month had one rather cold period. There was not enough coal to give to those who didn't have it. They managed to provide coal only for those who were the sickest.

Yesterday there were appeals from families where there was nothing at all in the house for them to eat. Loss of living quarters is a daily event.

These things go on. They are true things. They are not at all isolated events. It is an uncomfortable fact. It is a curious thing, but because it is such a hopeless, futile task many persons get angry about it. Instead of pity the lot of these hopelessly defeated and lost people excites resentment and impatience.

There are lashings out at the workers, at the administration, at most everything except the problem itself. One can sympathize with Mr. Charles Brown. One can wonder, too, what the Fulton county delegation will do when the legislature meets and the proposal is made to reduce the inadequate amount of money already available.

But one also may sympathize with the people who are on direct relief. What about the problem itself? It lacks the appeal of relief for England. The problem is made up of a lot of sick, half-starved, incompetent, defeated persons. There is nothing dramatic about them. They aren't heroic or noble. They are just sure, miserable and entirely a liability.

But, I am sure, not something to become angry about.

SWIFT'S PLAN Jonathan Swift, the Irish satirist, once encountered a somewhat similar condition in Ireland. The Irish were in a condition of famine and old people and children were starving.

He proposed, in perhaps his greatest article, the eating of these babies. He offered recipes for stewing, broiling and baking.

It was an article which shocked an empire. Many persons, missing entirely Swift's bitter satire, denounced him for proposing such a horrible thing—and did something to relieve the suffering.

Others, who saw the satire, also became active in relief. Almost the same thing might be said of these people who are concerned with the highly important factor of two and three-quarter mills, which aren't enough, or with two and one-quarter mills, which is much less than the not enough already provided.

It would be much more economical and much more merciful to build a stockade and put them there and let them starve or freeze within a few days, rather than to extend it over a few months or two or three years.

If one views it from the practical side, one must admit they produce nothing, contribute nothing except a crop of children too often mentally deficient or crippled. Perhaps it were better to machinegun them all or to get rid of them in some quick method so that we will not be bothered with this question of mills and so our politicians will not be embarrassed by pressures and angers. With but few exceptions, they are entirely valueless to the county; entirely a burden. They are just sick, hungry, hopeless, miserable, and very helpless persons.

It will be interesting to see what help Mr. Brown gets from the public, the county officials and from pressure groups. It also will be interesting to watch our legislative delegation.

What ought we to do? Or rather, what can we do?

A Simplified Review of the Course That Brought Us Here

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

A few individuals plan their lives, after a fashion, but seldom in history has a whole race planned its future. People follow custom and fashion, but otherwise do whatever seems necessary or profitable, and so pursue their destiny without other guidance than the law of cause and effect.

That law is universal, of course, but its workings are seldom so plain as in our case. The invention of power-driven machinery and the beginning of the machine age coincided with the development of freedom and democracy; and as the acorn develops into the oak, so these factors developed our present civilization.

With machines to increase production and lower costs, factory owners began to accumulate great reserves of capital. Possession of money gave industrialists both social and political power.

Since the system of capitalism requires continual expansion by investment of profits, and since machines produced more than could consumed by the home folks who were able to buy, it became necessary to find foreign markets. These were found in backward lands—that is, lands without machinery. But since all great nations were using machines to produce surplus goods and competing for foreign markets, it was necessary to conquer and annex the backward lands to obtain a monopoly of their buying power.

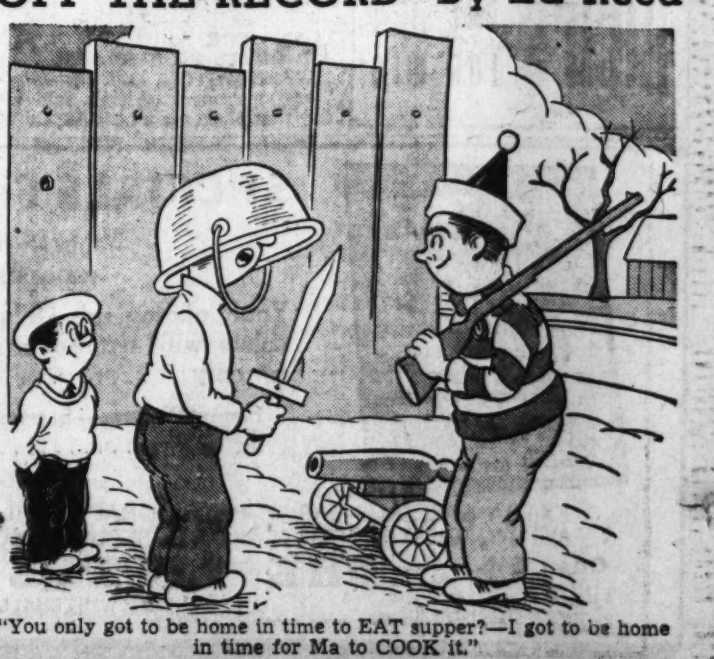

Industrial nations also needed raw materials not found on their own soil; and to insure the necessary supply, they adopted the method that had given them a monopoly of markets. They took the lands that produced the raw materials.

Meanwhile, the workers, no longer in close touch with their employers but serving impersonal corporations, demanded a greater share of the world's new wealth and organized unions to get it. Thus began the long conflict that resulted in the legal right of collective bargaining, class consciousness and abuse of power.

When the depression gave politicians the power of dictators, the change was more apparent than real. Nations still competed for markets and raw materials, but now the competition was the work of governments instead of capitalists, and when governments compete they use guns.

The next step is mercifully hidden from us; but those who know the destructiveness of a long war, the methods of demagogues and the way of desperate people can easily guess what it will be.

Invents New Game But It Can't Be Played at Home

Few mornings ago I invented a new game. Fellow who played it with me said it was not only interesting but educational. Both of us regretted we couldn't copyright it and sell it, what with Christmas coming on and other troubles. But you can't buy it in a department store and you can't play it at home when the conversation flags and your guests just won't leave because they don't have to get up in the morning as you do.

I'll bet I've got you all worked up and jittery already. But I'm gradually getting round to my subject. Just let me tell it in my own way—and put that darn dog out. I know he has fleas, but he needsn't scratch 'em right here. And thump his knee—or elbow—on the floor. Every time I try to get a word in edgewise he starts scratching and thumping.

This game I've invented is entitled "Where Are We At." Yes, I know the "at" is superfluous and frowned upon by grammarians. But I like it. And if a man can't like a plain, simple little two-letter word which doesn't take up much space and is easy to spell.

If I were given to scattering words like "valetudinarian" and "hypothetical" all over my copy, the boss might have a legitimate kick about the cost of running the composing room. But little teeny-weeny two-letter words! I think he ought to be reasonable.

Be that as it may, my game of "Where Are We At" must be played on a trackless trolley during a rush hour. It presents certain necessary discomforts because you have to stand up.

Guessing Game?

It happened like this: I climbed aboard a town-bound trackless trolley near Buckhead. With me was a stranger, a fellow who seemed into an intimate friend. It was a late trolley and jammed with Christmas shoppers. So we had to wend our way back and stand up.

A six-footer, standing up, can see nothing outside the windows but the street and the curb and perhaps a bit of sidewalk. All as green as a spring lawn. Because the top windows are of green glass.

After a while this companion asked: "Where are we at?" And into my brain flashed an idea—thus distinguishing a genius from the run-of-the-mine crowd.

"Let's guess," I returned. "Best—or better—guesser gets a cup of coffee when we get off. The loser pays."

Then and there our game was invented.

You may think you know your town, particularly the streets you traverse twice a day on foot, by automobile or public service conveyance. You'll be surprised to learn you don't.

We agreed it was not fair to duck and look at buildings or street signs. We must do our guessing, or thinking, by the appearance of the curb.

My acquaintance—and I never did ask his name—picked Peachtree creek by the water pipes on the side of the bridge. He was up on me until we hit the curve at Peachtree station and I spoke first.

We had an argument about whether we'd passed the Biltmore and I lost that. But when we glimpsed a cop bossing traffic at a sharp intersection, I cried: "Baker street," and thus ended the score.

I can't report the box score on the game because this chap cheated on me. I was two points ahead when he slipped out, at Peachtree and Ellis, the scoundrel, and I didn't get that cup of coffee.

Happy Colonel

The Buzzard Mountain social correspondent contributes to the Dahlonega Nugget a suggestion worthy of consideration by the unwedded womenfolk:

"The Troy Town gin is running day and night trying to accommodate the people. We were talking to Colonel the other day and he said while he was winning it was the only time that his mind and soul had any rest, for there wasn't any time to think when the poor farmer came with a smile on his face, thinking now we can pay for our guano bill. Isn't God wonderful to make such a change in Colonel? Maybe if he would change him just a little more we would have one of the best preachers. We surely need one like (Peter) of old, for blessed be the tie that binds us. Now girls, why don't you wake up. Ralph is a boy we should 'set our caps' for."

For typists only: Did you ever tackle carbon paper in 25-yard rolls, 55 inches wide—which is more than four feet?

Well, the Chatworth Times runs a full-page ad of that kind of carbon paper. How come, sez you, if you're careless about grammar.

It's used for tracing bedspread patterns. And making bedspreads is the leading industry up that away.

Quoting Maurice Friedman in the Sandersville Progress: "Hollywood announces it is filming 'Tobacco Road' but is leaving out the sex and profanity. The finished picture, we presume, will last about as long as a secret at a sewing party."

Fireman to Engineer:

"You've Lost the Train"

VENTURA, Cal., Dec. 12.—(UP)—Said the fireman to the engineer, "Don't look right now, but we've lost the rest of our train." Said the engineer, "By George, we have!"

Just as shocked as the fireman and engineer were motorists on the highway near here when they saw the huge streamlined engine and tender of the Southern Pacific's Noon Daylight streak past them on the way to San Francisco from Los Angeles—minus the passenger coaches.

Slowly the large engine stopped and chugged back a mile to pick up the wandering cars, which had apparently broken away from the tender after leaving Ventura. Fortunately for the passengers, the freak accident happened on level tracks and the string of cars came to a stop.

Judge Nods Agreement

Over Speeder's Alibi

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 12.—(UP)—Because the judge had experienced similar trouble, John Green, 18, escaped conviction in police court.

He appeared to answer charges of speeding and failing to stop at an arterial highway.

Green said he thought his father's car had developed serious trouble and was running to a garage to save his father a tow bill. "That same thing happened to me," said Judge Frank Yuse. "I drove from Pasco to Walla Walla not knowing what was wrong."

"Not guilty on both charges."

Skilled Men From Australia Helping British

Thousands Being Trained for Technical Work in the War.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 12.—(Australian Associated Press).—One phase of Australia's war effort is the provision of thousands of skilled tradesmen for the army, air force, munitions and aircraft factories. The air force needs fitters, electricians, radiomen, and instrument makers; the army needs auto mechanics and other tradesmen; and the munitions and aircraft factories need precision toolmakers and machinists.

The states, which exclusively control education, have unreservedly placed their resources at the disposal of the Commonwealth. In nine months 8,000 men have undertaken full-time courses of training varying from 12 to 24 weeks. Four thousand have completed courses, including 1,500 in the last month.

The men, who must be at least 21 years old, receive a basic wage while training varying from three pounds seventeen shillings to four pounds five shillings a week (about $12 to $14) and six pounds a week (about $20) on completion. While these figures appear small in terms of American currency they are equivalent to $20 to $25 and $30 a week.

Trainees undertake to serve the Commonwealth for the duration of the war under a penalty not exceeding $300 for breach of agreement.

To put the training period to best advantage it is spent doing factory jobs, and producing tools and gauges. This wartime training scheme is superimposed on the normal needs of more than 100,000 day and night technical students, including apprentices.

The schools are able to meet the situation only by using their workshops and laboratories 24 hours a day. Technical school teachers, engineers, trades union officials, and employers are all cooperating enthusiastically. Engineers and union tradesmen are providing additional teaching strength, and have devised special textbooks to expedite training. Draftsmen have provided the necessary drawings. All these services have been given gratuitously.

The unions have agreed to place unskilled workmen over 21 in skilled work, instead of requiring them to serve apprenticeships. This concession has been granted on condition that these men will be the first to be displaced if it becomes necessary after the war. Employers are serving on the committees selecting the men for training.

While this scheme is a vital part of the war effort, it will be immensely valuable after the war in providing a vast body of skilled labor, facilitating great industrial development. Another benefit will be the tremendous improvement in the technical education system necessary, especially in the provision of equipment and buildings which have long been urgently needed.

For this purpose the Commonwealth government has provided $1,300,000. Much of the equipment needed is coming from the United States. Where new buildings are erected it will be as part of a plan to increase peace-time facilities.

U. S. Public Is Ready To Swap War Debts for Islands--Gallup

Overwhelming Majority Votes in Favor of Accepting Territory Near Panama Canal in Lieu of Payments British Are Unable To Make.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 12.—The American public would be satisfied to write off the British World War debt in exchange for islands or territory in the area of the Panama Canal. This fact emerges from a nation-wide study of public opinion just completed by the Institute.

The majority take the attitude that the debt will probably never be paid and hence "we might as well get something for our money." In fact, the idea of exchanging debts for islands has gained greatly in the last year.

When a bill was introduced in congress a little more than a year ago to provide for such an exchange, a sizable majority of voters favored the idea. Today the number is overwhelming.

In all the different areas of the country people of voting age were asked to give their views on the following question:

"If England offers to pay its World War debt to the United States by giving us islands or land near the Panama Canal, would you approve our accepting this offer?"

Those expressing an opinion voted as follows:

Yes 88%
No 12%

One voter in every 10 (10 per cent) was undecided or without an opinion.

In November, 1939, the Institute conducted a survey on the same issue, with the following result:

"Would you be willing to see the United States trade the war debts which the English owe us for some islands near the Panama Canal?"

No 34%

One person in seven (15 per cent) had no opinion at that time. The question whether British possessions in the Caribbean area—Jamaica, Trinidad, British Honduras, the Bahamas and other places—would be actually worth the more than $4,000,000,000 of British World War debt is a question which only experts could decide. What today's study indicates is simply that the public would accept the principle of settling the British war debt in this manner.

Curiously enough, virtually no one in the survey brought up the objection to the proposal which some Britishers have advanced—that it would be undemocratic and bad policy to "sell" like pawns the populations of the British possessions.

The chief objections raised by American voters are that the war debts should be paid in cash alone, and second, that the United States has enough territory now to defend.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

CACTUS AND COCKLEBUR.

"Good morning, Mr. Cactus. Wonderful day, isn't it? How is Mr. Cocklebur?"

"Good morning, Mr. Harrison. Chollie's doing 'bout ez well ez we could 'spect, I reckon. Here's the list Miss Sally wanted me ter fetch 'long fer yer, Mr. Harrison. Sed yer wuld understan'. What 'bout ther guds I orde'd, Mr. Harrison?"

"They are coming up on the truck today, Mr. Cactus. By the way, my boss sent you his regards. Said tell you that he had never forgot what Mr. Cocklebur told him about you—that he regarded you the best salesman in Georgia. He told me I might take some lessons from you, if I was half as wise as I thought I was. That's about as fine compliment, Mr. Cactus, as I have ever heard the boss pay any man."

Things went well that day at the store. The two clerks were kept busy, and Cas felt happy that he would be able to report good sales when he went by to see Chollie that night. Miss Sally was home from school early, and came by the store to help. Cas checked the big bill of goods that had arrived by truck. She took the cash to the bank in the neighboring county seat—the only bank in the county. She had reported to Cas that her father was asleep when she left the house.

After supper, Cas went over to see Chollie. He was in fine spirit. They talked for an hour about many details of the store and the farms. Cas had seen many of the old-timers that day, and they had each sent Chollie their love. Several neighbors had brought in delicacies, hoping to whet his appetite. Mrs. Cocklebur had been put to bed that day by Dr. Tarver with the warning that her blood pressure would not stand any further moving about. Despite the outward tokens of cheer, there was a deep note of depression about the place.

When the company cleared out and Kitty was off to sleep, Cas turned to Chollie, and said: "I want over everything with Mary, 'n' she wuz ter tell Mollie. Don't yer wurrie emy more, Chollie, 'bout anything. We 'gree. Miss Sally, do 'n' 'gree?"

"Yes, Mr. Cactus. Only I feel very unworthy to try to do what Pa and Ma have asked me to do. If you are willing to try me, I'll do my best. And I believe we can do it."

"That's fine. Your Ma and I are very happy over this arrangement. And now that Cas and Mary and Mollie are willing, I suggest that you get word to our lawyer to come down here tomorrow night for supper, and we will have him draw up such paper as will make it all legal, and he can take it to the courthouse and have everything recorded."

The lawyer came the following night. The proper papers were drawn and signed, with Marsh Moore and Chet Williams witnessing same. Chollie and Cas had a game of checkers with Marsh and Chet, and Miss Sally served some of the pound cake. Chollie took his slice and pinched off some of the deep, rich crust, and let it melt away in his mouth.

It was time for country folks to be going home, but Mrs. Cocklebur asked Miss Sally to take the Bible and read, and when they knelt, Chollie asked Cas to lead the prayer.

"O Lawd, how ex'lent es Thy Name in all the urth. We thank Thee, O Lawd fer all Thy goodness 'n' murcy. 'Furgive our sins, O Lawd. Bless the sick, O Lawd, 'n' ther lonely. 'N' bring us all ter see Thee in ther House uv Meny Manshuns, for Jesus' sake. Amen."

Cas and his wife walked slowly home, in the moonlight, their hearts too full for words. The world seemed very quiet. They had felt in their hearts the peace that passeth understanding.

Hunter Tells of Buck in Role of Abductor

KENNEBAGO, Me., Dec. 12.—(UP)—This is the deer hunting story of a buck which kidnaped a hunter and almost prevented him from telling the tale.

Ernest Creamer, of Greene, says, and he insists its true, he felled the animal with a rifle shot on the Kennebagos river bank. Thinking it dead, Creamer straddled the buck for operations with his knife.

Immediately the animal arose and raced with Creamer on its back. The buck plunged into the river with Creamer gripping its antlers with one hand and rifle with the other. Half way across the river Creamer took a close one-hand shot at the back of the buck's neck, killing it. He swam ashore, towing his prize.

Mobile Is Praised

For Charm, Grace

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 12.—(UP)—This historic old seaport, first capital of French Louisiana in the seventeenth century, has not lost "the charm and grace of the old south."

That is the opinion of Mrs. Sara Hewlett Prince, of Houston, Texas, nature writer and lecturer. "It is the most romantic industrial city we've ever found," she said.

She took pictures of the famed iron grillwork on several old French houses, which will be used to illustrate a novel of the south during Reconstruction, to gather material for which she is now touring the south.

Letters From Home Fail To Catch Up With Sailor

AUCKLAND, N. Z., Dec. 12.—(UP)—Letters from his family have never reached a young Latvian seaman, because he travels round the world so fast.

He is Leonard's Volkovs, who left his father's farm in Latvia six years ago when he was only 13, and has been sailing the seas since.

Volkovs was left in Auckland by a Norwegian tanker, to undergo an operation. He is a man without a country, for Latvia has lost its independence since the Russian demands on the country were accepted.

Australia Plans Huge Expenses In Air Program

$100,000,000 To Be Spent; Factories Already Producing.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 12.—(Australian Associated Press).—Australia will spend 25,000,000 pounds (about $100,000,000) on the construction and maintenance of aircraft in the next two and one-half years.

By Christmas, two aeroplane factories will have each produced their 200th plane.

Commonwealth Aircraft Corporation at Melbourne is building Wirraways—general purpose training monoplane; DeHavilland Aircraft Limited, at Sydney, is building Tiger Moths—primary training biplanes. The Commonwealth government has ordered 811 Wirraways, costing 8,000,000 pounds, which pilots believe capable of repelling any aircraft likely to attack Australia from aircraft carriers. The output of Tiger Moths, of which 650 have been ordered, has now reached 10 weekly and Gipsy engines for these machines are being produced in quantity by General Motors-Holdens Limited, Melbourne.

A long-range program for production of other types, including more advanced combat planes, is being planned. The Commonwealth Aircraft Corporation is already producing a monoplane trainer designed to bridge the training gap between Tiger Moths and the Wirraways.

Bombers Built. The prototype of a fast heavily-armed, medium-bomber is also being built. This machine, designed by the CAC, will be powered with Australian made Twin-Wasp engines. The same engines, of 1,200 horsepower, will power Bristol Beaufort medium bombers which the Commonwealth government will begin to build next year, with the aim of producing one daily.

The production of a wide range of aircraft components is also proceeding, including Vickers' guns, tires, tubes, parachutes, safety harness, radio and photographic equipment. Australia also will soon manufacture all its requirements of duralium including sheets, strips, extrusions and heavy forgings.

A Melbourne company was lately formed to manufacture aeroplane sparkplugs under license from an American company.

If shortage of metal alloys for aeroplane construction should make building wooden planes necessary, Australia has a number of timbers able to withstand the special stresses of plane framework.

As a result of these achievements it is claimed that Australian industry has made a quarter-century's normal progress in two years.

The United Kingdom government has resumed large-scale shipments of Avro Ansons and Fairey Battle bombers for advanced twin-engine and single-engine training. The original order for 330 Battles and 590 Ansons has been increased greatly, further enhancing the potential striking power of the RAF.

Training Program. It is estimated that 3,000 planes will be used in the first three years of the Empire training scheme, in which the Australian quota is 16,000 men for air crews and 26,000 for ground crews by March 1943. More than 135,000 young Australians have already volunteered. More than 12,000 have been accepted for air crews, including the four thousand-odd who have begun training. The monthly intake is now 600 to 700. Authorities are now re-examining volunteers and reassessing for pilot training men hitherto accepted only as observers and gunners. This is due to the raising of the age limit from 28 to 31 years. Of 24,600 ground personnel accepted, all but 5,400 have been absorbed. By the end of the year, half of the 40 schools needed to train air crews will have been formed. Eleven ground staff schools are already working at full capacity. The first Australian pilots trained under the Empire scheme will soon be on active service.

Meanwhile, the RAF is developing local air defenses, patrolling Australia's 12,000-mile coastline while strong RAF units are serving with United Kingdom Middle and the Far East and are winning many honors.

Sewanee Due To Quit Conference Today; Recruiting Code Drawn

Mike Conner ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 12.—The pudgy Mike Conner is sold. The Irishman who is policing the athletic policies of the Southeastern Conference with a gentle demeanor but a firm hand, is sold on the sincerity of the coaches.

But that does not mean, he declares, that he will relax his vigil in matters of overstepping bounds with regard to athletic scholarships, tryouts, snatching, etc.

If the coaches mean what they individually and collectively have told Commissioner Conner, the conference henceforth will not see any more of the following:

- (1) Tryouts.
- (2) Player snatching.
- (3) Indiscriminate use of scholarships.

A gentleman's agreement prevails. Violation might cause some embarrassment. A school could be fined as much as $1,000 or even be dropped from the conference, upon the recommendation of the commissioner.

If a player is found guilty of violating rules, and guilt is irrefutably laid to him instead of the school, ineligibility is the penalty.

It is the hope of Commissioner Conner that it will not be necessary for him to impose any penalties for violation of rules.

"My aim is to help, not to hinder, the coaches, the athletic directors, the presidents and the schools.

"All I have asked is their co-operation and I am happy to say I have received that in full measure," Conner declared tonight.

I might say the majority of the coaches, if not all of them, are sold on Mike Conner as a man and a commissioner.

Tigers Slated To Join Small School League

Annual Dinner for Presidents Opens S. E. C. Meet.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY. ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 12.—Little Sewanee, sometimes called the thirteenth member of the Southeastern conference, but definitely a credit to the organization, is almost sure to withdraw from the league. The Constitution learned tonight.

Official announcement of the fact will be made tomorrow.

Southern football tradition originated at Sewanee, a school old enough to be the mother of most members.

SIX GAMES TOO MUCH.

There was no agitation on the part of other members to expel the little Tennessee school from the league. Reports say that the Tigers will withdraw because of the proposed six conference games amendment to the rules of the conference.

It was left up to Sewanee, and she decided to withdraw. Probably in favor of a smaller conference. But if she had wanted to remain a member of the Big Thirteen she could have done so.

MEETING TODAY.

The annual Southeastern conference meeting started here tonight with the annual presidents' dinner, at which G. D. Humphrey, of Mississippi State, was host.

The first business meeting will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Here is a list of the visitors who registered for the Orange Bowl football smoker at the Holman hotel tonight:

Red Heard, L. S. U.; Red Sanders, Vanderbilt; Howell Hollis, Georgia; Arthur Hutchins, official; Bob Neyland, Tennessee; Harry Mehre, Ole Miss; Quinton Lumpkin, Georgia; J. V. Sikes, Georgia Tech; Spec Towns, Georgia; Wallace Butts, Georgia; Jack Harding, Miami U.; Bill Hartman, Georgia; E. A. Lampe, Georgia; Wilbur Huttsel, Auburn; Jeff Beard, Auburn; C. R. Nobel, Mississippi State.

Stone Mt. Quints

The Stone Mountain basketball teams triumphed over quintets from Snellville in two sensational games at Stone Mountain Wednesday night, the boys nailing out a 33-to-32 decision, and the girls barely edging the losers, 33 to 30.

Nash, with 11 points, led the Mountaineers' attack in the boys' game. Street and Moon had 10 points each for the losers. Brownlee sank 26 of 37 team's 33 points in the girls' tilt, while Kemp and Lee sparked the Snellville attack with 11 scores each.

SALICA SIGNS.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—(AP) World Bantamweight Champion Lou Salica, of Brooklyn, and 7-1 favorite, of South Philadelphia, signed articles today for a round championship match here January 13. The fight will be Philadelphia's first title match in eight years.

LISTEN TO COMMISSIONER—Here is a group of Southeastern Conference coaches and athletic directors who gathered in Athens yesterday to hear new S. E. C. Commissioner Mike Conner reveal his findings in his investigations of conditions in the football setups at the conference schools. Left to right are Red Sanders, Vanderbilt; J. B. Whitworth, Georgia; Red Heard, L. S. U. athletic director; Jack Harding, Miami U.; Dr. A. F. Kasper, of the Orange Bowl Committee; Wallace Butts, Georgia head coach; J. V. Sikes, Georgia; Major Bob Neyland, Tennessee; Bernie Moore, L. S. U. A recruiting code was drawn up at the meeting.

Golding Chosen Most Valuable On Decatur '11'

Honored at Banquet for Squad; Dr. Hall Main Speaker.

Eugene Golding, fine senior end, was voted the most valuable player on the Decatur high football team this year, and was awarded the Vernon Frank trophy at a banquet given the team by the Decatur Elks at the Decatur Woman's Club last night.

Dr. Richard Hall, pastor of the First Baptist church in Decatur, delivered the principal address and gave the boys an inspiring talk on Sportsmanship. Young H. Fraser, exalted ruler of the Decatur Elks, was toastmaster. Mayor Andrew B. Robertson and Scott Candler were other speakers on the program.

Some 75 Elks, city, county and school officials gathered to honor Coach Smoky Joe Martin's team, which had one of its best seasons. Martin and Line Coach Bill Badgett were given presents.

Overlin Battles Steve Belloise In Garden Bout

Return Title Go Is Rated Even by Odd-makers.

By SID FEDER. NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Ken Overlin and Steve Belloise are going to put on a retake of the year's hottest punch party in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, with Ken's middleweight championship on the block.

It's the old story of the boxer (Overlin) against the slugger, the veteran and his ring "savvy" against the youngster with a wallop, and the odds-makers are so confused about the whole thing they're refusing to make either a favorite. The 49th street betting set was laying "six to five and pick" tonight.

This corner still strings with Overlin. It likes the ex-sailor boy from Decatur, Ill., to repeat his decision victory over the New York youngster over the 15-round route, thereby hanging onto that portion of the world's 160-pound crown recognized in California, New York, Pennsylvania and a few way stations.

The last time these two fought it out, on November 1 in the Garden, the tussle was such a thriller that Promoter Mike Jacobs expects tomorrow's return will have the faithful making his turnstiles sing a mighty sweet tune. In fact, it wouldn't surprise "Uncle Mike" a bit if 15,000 or more fans show up to chip in to a gate of $30,000 to $40,000.

In their previous get-together, Overlin came off the floor to win. Belloise, a brother of former Featherweight Champ Mike, hit him a belt in the sixth round that sat Ken right on the seat of his silk pants. Ken got up, staved off Belloise's charge for the rest of the round, and turned the tables with one of the best rallies seen in a New York ring this year.

WEBB-TUCKER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Jimmy Webb, of St. Louis and Ft. Worth, and Tommy Tucker, of New York, today signed for a 15-round fight in Madison Square Garden, February 28. Promoter Mike Jacobs said he would send the winner against Light Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn in a title bout in the spring.

Jimmy Wilson Was Comeback Champ of Year

Shaughnessy, Rowe, Little Follow Red Catcher in Writers' Poll.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Out of necessity 40-year-old Jimmy Wilson went behind the plate for the Cincinnati Reds in this fall's World Series. He was only a fill-in for Ernie Lombardi, but he did such a grand job of catching that today he was voted the year's No. 1 comeback in the annual Associated Press poll.

Seventy-eight sports editors from every section of the country gave Jimmy 102 votes for a courageous performance that included perfect handling of the Reds' hurlers for the six games, a .353 batting average and the only stolen base of the series.

Twenty-three of the writers placed the new Chicago Cubs manager at the top of the list. Twenty-four of them gave the No. 1 berth to Clark Shaughnessy, Stanford football coach, but Wilson received more second and thirds and won by six points on a 3-2-1 scoring basis.

Baseball players easily dominated the poll, 13 of them receiving votes. Detroit's Schoolboy Rowe, although a failure in the World Series, did such a fine job of helping the Detroit Tigers win the American League pennant that he ranked third with nine first and 57 points.

Lawson Little's winning of the United States Open golf title, his first national championship since leaving the amateur ranks, was considered such a fine comeback that he was given three first place votes and a total of 49 for fourth place. Max Baer received 23 votes for knocking out Tony Galento and Pat Comiskey and Gene Sarazen 20 for his good showing in golf competition.

FREY BABY.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 12.—(AP)—There's a new member of the "home team" of the Cincinnati Reds. Traveling Secretary Gabe Paul found this telegram from the Frey home in St. Louis on his desk today: "Six-and-three-quarter-pound boy arrived Saturday noon. Mother and baby fine."

Suffridge Is Voted Lineman of Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The Touchdown Club of Washington voted today to award the Knute Rockne memorial trophy for "the most outstanding lineman of the year" to Bob Suffridge, of the University of Tennessee.

The club, composed of varsity lettermen, said Tennessee University officials had assured them that Suffridge would be permitted to leave classes to attend the club's fifth annual dinner here on January 6, when the trophy will be presented.

Limit, System Asked on Visit To Grid Finds

Favorable Comment Reported by All Coaches, But No Action Taken.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY. ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 12.—A tentative code of ethics governing the recruiting of high school football players was suggested to an informal meeting of Southeastern Conference coaches and athletic directors here tonight by Commissioner Mike Conner.

The proposed code would be a "gentleman's agreement among coaches" to adhere to the rules and regulations of the conference. Conner also suggested limitations upon the number of times prospects could be visited by one school.

He also proposed a system be set up whereby the names of prospects would be filed with the commissioner, by each school interested in them.

Then, after the prospect had applied for a scholarship to a certain school, another form would be filed with the commissioner.

Favorable comment was reported by all coaches but no definite action was taken as the coaches do not have an organization among themselves. The suggestions would have to be presented to the executive committee of the conference before becoming official.

Conner said it would be unlikely the executive committee would get the proposals at the current meeting.

The meeting was strictly informal. It was called by the commissioner for the purpose of obtaining a complete understanding

Jim Bagby Goes to Cleveland Indians in Trade

JIM BAGBY JR.

Tribe Also Gets Gene DeSautels, Gerald Walker

Pytlak, Hale, Dobson Go to Red Sox; Cramer to Senators.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians tonight announced a three-cornered deal intended to bolster their outfield and pitching staff.

The Tribe obtained Outfielder Gerald Walker, Pitcher Jim Bagby Jr., and Catcher Gene DeSautels from the Boston Red Sox in exchange for Catcher Frankie Pytlak, Infielder Odell Hale and Pitcher Joe Dobson.

The Red Sox traded Outfielder Roger Cramer to the Washington Senators for Walker before the deal could be completed, Indians officials said.

BAGBY "TICKLED."

When informed by The Constitution last night that he had been traded to the Cleveland Indians, young Jim Bagby said, "I am tickled to death. It is just what I wanted. I think Cleveland has the best balanced ball club in the league, and I believe I can pitch better ball there. We may even win that pennant next year."

"I am glad to be pitching in the town where my Dad made his great record, of course. I only hope I can do half as well as he did. I don't know Manager Peckinpaugh personally, but players who have played under him say he is a great fellow, and a fine handler of pitchers. This is just the break I have been hoping for." Jim's dad, the Old Sarge, echoed the same sentiments.

The deal was completed at Chicago today by C. C. Slapnicka, Indians' vice president, and President Tom Yawkey and Manager Joe Cronin for the Red Sox, representatives of the Cleveland baseball club reported.

"I'm delighted with the deal," said Roger Peckinpaugh, recently appointed manager of the Tribe. "As I see it, we got exactly what we went after without giving up anything but Dobson's prospects. And don't forget that Bagby has some prospects, too."

Bagby, 24, son of a hero of Cleveland's 1920 pennant-winning team, won 10 games against 16 losses for Boston last year, and can win upwards of 10 games for the Indians during the coming season, Peckinpaugh believes. He joined the Red Sox in 1938.

Tigers' Pete Fox Sold to Red Sox.

DETROIT, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Ervin (Pete) Fox, veteran outfielder, has been sold to the Boston Red Sox, the management of the Detroit Tigers announced today.

Barred from making trades by

Jones Completes 'Goodwill Tour'

Bob Jones is back in the United States after a trip to Mexico, where he played some exhibition golf matches, according to word from L. R. McGehee, airlines pilot, who saw him in Houston, Texas.

A feature of the "goodwill tour" was presentation of a beautiful tea set to Jones by the Mexican Golf Association, McGehee said.

Doubleheader Set At Y on Saturday

The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. Triangle Club will play a doubleheader at the "Y" court Saturday night. The Triangle Golds, defending state "Y" junior champions, will meet a perennial rival in the Atlanta Boys' Club Pilots at 7 p. m. The Triangle Blues will play the Miltstead, Ga., Athletic Club at 8 p. m.

The American League's no-trade rule for a pennant winner, the Bengals disposed of the 31-year-old Fox in a straight cash transaction. The price was not divulged.

Kimbrough May Pass Up Pro Game for Ranch, He Says Here

Texas Aggies' All-American Doesn't Believe Stanford Would Have Invited His Team, Even If It Had Escaped Defeat.

By THAD HOLT.

John Kimbrough, of the Texas Aggies, picked on the All-Americans last year and this, may pass up professional football for the cows and calfs and ranch life of the Texas plains, he revealed during a 15-minute stopover here last evening.

On his way to New York to do the town as guest of the New York Yankee pro outfit which seeks his services, Kimbrough said: "I don't think much of this professional football idea. There will have to be a lot more money in it than I think there is to lure me away from that ranch I've already picked out in Texas."

"But how about this trip to New York?" the reporter inquired.

"Doesn't mean a thing," retorted Big John. "I've been invited to the big town and expect to have a good time—at the Yankees' expense. But there will be no discussion of my entering the pro game. That was understood before I left College Station. I 'insisted upon newspapermen listening in on my conversation with officials of the New York team."

TOO TOUGH.

Kimbrough, a killer-diller in the backfield, doesn't believe the Texas Aggies would have been invited to the Rose Bowl even had they come through without that beating at the hands of Texas. "I don't believe Stanford wanted to play a team as strong as us," snapped Big John. The west coast didn't want any part of us last year, you remember."

Kimbrough, whose flashing white teeth would make him a perfect toothpaste ad, spent eight of the 15-minute stop-over in a phone booth. Kimbrough was renewing an old friendship with Miss Helen Hill, whose father, Lieutenant Colonel Ralph Hill, of Fort McPherson, formerly was an instructor at College Station.

HIGH SPIRITS.

Kimbrough emerged from the booth 18 nichels later in great spirits. In answer to a question about his plans for the stay in New York, John shyly admitted that a certain young lady from Washington would be in the big city to help show him around. "But be careful what you write," he admonished. "The wrong sort of reports might drift back home," you know. The 225-pound star

Ben Hogan Ties With Unknown For Miami Lead

Loving Also Has 67 in 1st Round; Heafner, Dudley Get 68's.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 12.—(AP)—Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., the mightiest little man in golf, cracked out a 31-36 for a three-under-par 67 today to share the first round lead in the $10,000 Miami open with hitherto obscure Ben Loving, of Springfield, Mass.

Hogan, front runner in the stretch battle for the year's money-winning honors, took a three-stroke margin over the No. 2 man, Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Texas, and had a two-shot leeway over Sam Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., third high.

Twenty-one golfers equaled or bettered par despite a brisk southeasterly wind.

Clayton Heafner, the big blond from Linville, N. C., and the veteran Ed Dudley, of Augusta, Ga., scored 68's.

Seven professionals, including Snead, sliced a stroke off par with 69's. Among these was the day's hard-luck player, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., who took a penalty stroke after a long conference following his round. Jimmy Thomson also carded a 69.

Others at the 69 notch were P. G. A. Champion Byron Nelson, of Toledo, Ohio; Jim Turnesa, of West View, N. Y.; Claude Harmon, of Orlando, and Tommy Wright, of Knoxville, Tenn.

McGarry, Wilson In St. Pete Finals

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Mark McGarry, former southern women's champion, won her way into the finals of the second annual St. Petersburg Women's Open golf tournament at Lakewood Country Club here today by defeating Mrs. Tom Gallatin, Tampa, 2 and 1.

Joining Mrs. McGarry in the finals was Mrs. R. E. (Billie) Wilson, Lakewood Club champion, who registered a mild upset by eliminating Frances Hadfield, former Wisconsin state champion, by 5 and 4.

Mrs. Wilson finished out her round for an 83, the day's best score. Mrs. McGarry shot an approximate 86. Mrs. McGarry is the defending champion and medalist.

Tennessee Rated Top U. S. Team in Final Williamson Rankings

Writers Place Stanford First, Volunteers 3d

More Than 500 Sports-writers, Coaches Vote in Poll.

By PAUL B. WILLIAMSON.

The popular vote on the nation's leading four teams agreed this year with the scientific Williamson Ratings, although not in the same order.

By popular vote, determined from more than 500 replies from questionnaires sent college sports authorities and sports editors of daily newspapers, the first four teams were named in order:

Stanford, with 5,691 points; Minnesota with 5,467; Tennessee, with 5,394, and Boston College, with 4,932.

The Williamson System—on a strictly mathematical rating of win-or-lose performance during the 1940 season which places winners over losers so far—consistently possible gives:

Tennessee the No. 1 post with a rating of 99.1; Stanford next with 98.6; Boston College third with 98.1, and Minnesota fourth with 97.0.

These leaders, and the others in the first 44 teams of the nation listed in the accompanying table, were ranked in the order most consistent with the record of every team in the list. Besides being the most consistent ranking of winners over losers, the ratings also take into consideration the performance of "inspired" teams which toppled higher-ranked squads one week and then fell before lower-rated teams the following week.

TWO LISTINGS.

The 44 leaders are listed both according to popular vote from returns across the nation and the statistical Williamson rating. The popular votes were computed by allowing 15 points for a first-place choice, 14 points for second choice, and so on. Votes for teams on a questionnaire from the same geographical section were tallied as "home" votes; from other sections, as "away" votes.

The totals were then "balanced." In this "balancing" there was a mathematical ratio on the number of votes from each section. That was a precaution to prevent one section which voted heavily from carrying more than its proportionate representation in the naming of the national leaders.

All "away" votes were given full value.

There were a lot of other interesting sidelights on the balloting. For example, the midwest was more loyal to Minnesota than the south was to Tennessee.

Bill Bailey and Jack Pounds Placed on All-Southern Squad

Red Mathis, of Darlington, and Knudson, of Savannah, are Other Georgians Honored.

LAKE CITY, Fla., Dec. 12.—The twenty-second annual All-Southern prep squad was formed this year on selections of over 300 scouts in 12 states, it was announced here by John "Red" Davis, chairman of the board. The squad is one of the strongest in history this year and reflects the rising temperature in football among schools in the southland.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Two of the most meteoric prep backs ever to flash across the Atlanta football horizon have justly reached the pinnacle for which all southern high school gridders strive. Bill Bailey, of Boys' High, and Jack Pounds, of Tech High, have been placed on the All-Southern prep squad, it was announced yesterday.

Bailey, one of the greatest passers ever to be developed here, was one of the big reasons the Purples went through the 1940 season unbeaten and ended up with a sensational 13-to-0 conquest of previously unbeaten Miami High last week to win the southern prep championship. It was Bill Bailey who cut loose with touchdown passes of 32 and 30 yards to Don Glenn and Clint Castleberry to rout the strong Miamians.

CONVERTED FROM END.

The slim blond with the cool head and the rifle arm deserves even more credit and respect for his great play when it is taken into account he was an end most of last year, never having played in the backfield until the Tech High game of 1939. Shorty Doyal,

Purple mentor, saw great passing possibilities in the stout right arm of the youngster. Ever since he was switched to the backfield the blond blitzkrieg has given opponents the willies with his deft passing. He is a fine runner too.

The selection of little Jack Pounds to the all-star outfit bespeaks well for his individual brilliance. The Smithies had a most disastrous season, dropping four or five games, yet Pounds was a threat in every game. He was the star of every tilt in which he performed, and seldom was held scoreless. A typical Pounds' feat featured the Smithies last game against Memphis High. With the score 12 to 0 against the Atlantics late in the game and with the ball deep in Smithie territory, Pounds ripped over tackle cut to the sidelines and slogged 89 yards in the mud to a touchdown.

Other Georgians to make the All-Star squad were big Red Mathis who led the G. I. A. A. scorers while playing with unbeaten Darlington, co-champions of the Mid-South conference with Baylor, and Knudson, a standout on the potent Savannah High eleven all year.

Prep Aces Clash At Tech Saturday.

A host of classy prep backfield stars will scamper at Grant Field Saturday afternoon when the southern championship Boys' High eleven squares off against a fan-picked aggregation of stars from other high schools in the Greater Atlanta area.

Bullet Bill Bailey, Boys' High star, and Little Jack Pounds, both picked on the All-Southern squad and the All-G. I. A. A. team, head the list of first-class ball toters. Clint Castleberry, portside Purple runner, who also made the all-conference eleven, is not far behind. Hoyt Fincher, brainy Parkway Drive signal caller, and his mates, Alf Berman and Joltin' Joe Kenimer, should make it tough on

ALL IN THE GAME

He just happens to be a man of keen understanding.

To the 'Gals' Several days ago, in writing about the forthcoming quail championship at All-benny, Ga., the writer made note of the late entry of Susannah, trim little setter entered by 'M. G. Dudley, of Greenville, S. C.

I wondered; much in a manner of thinking aloud, if it did not hold true in a much lesser degree—the superiority of the male over the female—in field trials as well as in human athletic endeavor.

John Clark McCall writes from the Phi Delta Theta house, Athens, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Troy: "It is always with great interest that I read your 'All in the Game,' and especially so when you have something to say about dogs and field trials.

"But never make the mistake of thinking male pointers or setters, in general, have more ability than the females. True enough, Bob-bitt can beat Marble, and maybe 'Susannah' won't win either, but that still doesn't prove one thing.

"History of field trials tells us that only two pointers have won the national championship three times. Both were 'gals,' as you put it. The immortal Mary Montrose was one and the great Becky Broomhill the other. I'm not taking side with the 'gals,' however. (I've got a little hussy of a pointer at home now that gives me many heartaches.)

"Fegan's Mohawk Pal, a male, was the only setter to win the 'National' three times; and, with due respect to his ability, he could hardly compare with Mary or Becky.

"My greatest respect for a female goes to one my uncle owned many years ago. Her name was Lulu S. She never won a trial but she brought into the world four winners who will ever be remembered in setter history. They were Eugene's Ghost, Jersey Prince, Old Dock's Mack, and Eugene M's Jim. And that's saying a lot for the little lady whom A. F. Hochwalt, the dean of field trial scribes, said was responsible for the deeds of her sons.

"I think you are extremely wise in devoting much of your space to outdoor topics. Field trials are gaining ground again each day. And in this, their new era, Georgia has a foremost position. We all should remain proud of that fact.

"Very truly yours, "JOHN CLARK McCALL."

Fair Question Ervin Lee Jr., 222 Clark Howell dormitory, Athens, asks a fair question, but some Tech Baby Jacket supporter will have to answer him. Here is Ervin's letter:

"Dear Mr. Troy: "During the past three weeks there has appeared in your column a letter or letters accounting for the defeat that the Georgia Tech Freshmen suffered on Thanksgiving Day.

"In each letter or letters the reason for defeat has been blamed on the poor offense of the Baby Jackets, caused by use of the varsity's opponents' plays. They will note that at least five of Tech's opponents used the Notre Dame system and if the freshmen used these against the varsity, then they had at least five weeks of practice under this system.

"However, offense is not the reason for my writing. What I would like for someone to tell me is what kind of defense did the Baby Jackets use? Apparently, no one has thought of that phase of the defeat, which caused the Georgia Bulldogs to punt on first down during all of the last quarter to keep from scoring again.

"Sincerely, "ERVIN LEE JR."

of the program and to assure one another of each's desire to adhere strictly to the rules of the conference.

"As far as I am concerned," Conner told a press conference, "we are not concerned with where we have been. We are concerned with where we are going. "My jurisdiction started on September 1. I am not concerned with what happened before that time.

"I have the backing of every the Purple foes.

However, the G. M. A. pair, Carl Anderson, a speedster, and "Moose" Porter, 195 pounds of driving fury, are as fine runners as the southern champs have faced all year. Anderson, who is also a first-rate star, has been the star of the drills to date. He faces the none-too-inspiring task of matching boots with Jake Cox, the best prep punter developed here in at least a decade.

coach in the conference. Individually, they have told me of their support. The purpose of this meeting is to let them talk among themselves and give me their support collectively."

The meeting was the highlight of the first day at the annual S. E. C. meeting here.

Marietta Season To Open Saturday

MARIETTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—Quintets from Marietta High school and the Masonic Home, at Macon, meet in a charity game here Saturday night. It will be Marietta's first game of the year.

As a preliminary battle, the high school girls, with four lettermen from last year's sextet back in harness, will meet Elizabeth, of north Marietta.

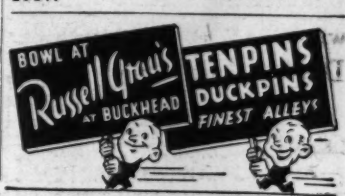

Loss of the 1939 team left Coach Jodie Hollis without a letterman to start the 1940-41 season. Candidates expecting to see action are Joe Cell Word, Jack Tilly, J. C. Jones, Joe Hamby, Howell Ravan, Fleming Jolly, Davis Walker, Frank Dossier, Olin Feagin and Jack Dunn.

Celtics Schedule Marietta Quintet

MARIETTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—The champion New York Celtics basketball team will meet an all-star Marietta quintet at Brumby Recreation Center January 23 during their tour over Georgia, Recreation Director A. H. Bishop said today.

The local quintet will be formed from such stars as Bo Johnson, former Georgia Tech cage star; Ricky Anderson, Bill Tate, Paul Varner, Remley Brumby and James Hancock.

NEVER TRAINED. The imported broodmare, Blue Grass, was never trained or raced, yet at stud she has produced many winners. Among her famous sons is the young stallion Unbreakable, bred, raced and owned by J. E. Widener. Blue Grass was foaled in France in 1917.

Col. Bradley, Vet Turfman, 81 Years Old

Owner of 4 Kentucky Derby Winners is in Poor Health.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 12.—(P)—Resting in his beautiful Blue Grass mansion, Colonel Edward Riley Bradley, turfman, is 81 years old today.

The famous horse breeder,

whose thoroughbreds won four Kentucky Derbies, spent the day with his sister, Mrs. Catherine Bailey, of Philadelphia, the only guest at Idle Hour farm. The colonel's health these days is poor.

Generous with orphans and needy children, Colonel Bradley already has made his yearly contribution of food and money for the unfortunate youngsters' Christmas season.

North Fulton Bops Hapeville Cagers

Great Offensive Elevens Clash; Defenders Meet

Point Totals of Opposing Teams Have Remarkable Resemblance.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.
NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—There's no use denying it, folks. Those bowl football game pairings were made by the same guy who orders his dinner by running down the price list on the menu until he finds a figure that matches his purse.

Who else would think of booking teams whose scoring and defensive records come so close to matching? Sometimes the fellow who orders his meal by this matching system turns up with some item that leaves him with galloping indigestion, and sometimes his bowl pairings leave the fans a little upset, but that's the chance he takes.

Anyway, here's the way our mathematical friend has lined up his teams:

ROSE BOWL.
Stanford	G. Pts.	O.P.
Nebraska	9 175	72
	9 170	54
COTTON BOWL.
Fordham	8 150	49
Texas A&M	9 170	34
SUGAR BOWL.
Boston College	10 320	52
Tennessee	10 318	26
ORANGE BOWL.
Georgetown	9 273	41
Miss. State	10 231	51

It will be noted he was careful not to send Stanford, which scored only 175 points, against Boston College, which scored 320. Our conscientious friend probably is slightly perturbed over a difference of 42 points in the scoring of Georgetown and Mississippi State, but figures that Georgetown possibly overtook its account in one of its games.

$11,000 Golf Meet Set

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 12.—(P)—Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament bureau manager, announced today that an $11,000 open offering the largest purse so far in the 1941 schedule would be played next September 4-7 at Chicago.

The first annual tournament to be called the Tam o' Shanter Open will be played at the Tam o' Shanter Country Club course, scene of the Chicago Open last summer. Dick Metz, of Oak Park, Ill., won that event. Corcoran received confirmation today from George S. May, club president.

Morris Brown Is Ranked No. 1 Negro Eleven

Atlanta Team Must Beat Wilberforce Jan. 1 To Win Title.

By The Associated Press.
Morris Brown college of Atlanta, which thundered through its season with eight victories and one defeat, ranks number one among the nation's Negro collegiate teams today—but the Wolverines must whip undefeated Wilberforce University New Year's Day to gain recognition as 1940's champion.

Final rankings announced here by Lucius L. (Melancholy) Jones, associate editor and sports editor of the Atlanta Daily World, Negro newspaper, place Morris Brown atop the heap on the basis of the accepted Standard (Dickinson) Rating System, with Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College of Tallahassee second, and Morgan College of Baltimore third.

Wilberforce, champion of the Midwestern Athletic Association with six straight wins and a tie, is fourth in the ratings but the Kenia, Ohio, team is regarded as the principal challenger to Morris Brown's gridiron supremacy. Morris Brown's convincing 28-6 victory over Kentucky State College in the Peach Blossom game Saturday while Wilberforce came to a scoreless tie with Florida A. and M. in the Orange Blossom classic, boomed the Wolverine stock. But the theoretical advantage will collapse if Wilberforce thumps the Atlanta team in Birmingham's Steel Bowl inaugural January 1.

Russell Five To Play First Game Tonight

Coach John Lewis' Russell Wildcats will open their basketball schedule Friday night against the teams of Clarkston High school on the Russell court in East Point.

Clarkston won the state championship in the "B" group last year and will be out to defend the record. Bowen and Hipp are the only men returning from last year's squad at Russell. Coach Lewis says that the team will be inexperienced but with such new men as Hayes, Huff, Almand, Rollins and Holcombe he hopes to develop a fair team.

The Russell schedule is as follows:
December 12, Clarkston at Russell; December 19, Fayetteville at Russell; December 26, Jonesboro at Jonesboro; January 2, Fulton at Russell; January 9, Newnan at Russell; January 16, Decatur at Russell; January 23, North Fulton at Russell; January 30, Jonesboro at North Fulton; February 6, Clarkston at Clarkston; February 13, Fulton at Fulton; February 20, Druid Hills at Russell; February 27, Richardson at Russell; February 28, Decatur at Russell; February 28, Newnan at Newnan; February 28, North Fulton at Russell.

In the second game the league leaders in the intermediate division, J. T. C., will play D. E. I. The first time these teams met J. T. C. won 24 to 19. Since then D. E. I. has come a long way and a tight ball game is expected.

ATLANTA LEAGUE.
Free-scoring games were on tap Wednesday night in the Atlanta League. "Y" Triangle Golds won from Ahepa, 24 to 20. Commercial High Freshmen beat The Atlanta Constitution, 28 to 21, and Morley Park took the measure of the Fire Chiefs, 49 to 23.

The best contest of the night was the meeting of the "Y" team and the Ahepa team during the first half, with the winners on the long end of a 10-to-9 score. But in the closing period the Ahepa lads proved no match for the masterful shooting of the winning representatives.

Best Blocker, Most Valuable Player To Receive Awards.

Red Dawson, Tulane head football coach, will be the principal speaker at the G. M. A. Cadets football banquet tonight at 6:15 at the Tavern Tea Room. Although Coach Bud Harris began the season with the most meager prospects in years, the Cadets have had one of their best seasons, losing only three games, two of those to unbeaten Tennessee eleven, Baylor and Montgomery Bell. Besides Dawson's talk, the feature of the program will be the presentation of a trophy to the best blocker and tackler on the team, and a gold football with an inset diamond to the team's most valuable player. The most valuable player will be elected by the players themselves.

Bravest Fliers Lose Courage, Air Chief Says

All Pilots Get 'Streaks of Nerves,' British Leader Reveals.

By W. L. WHITE
For North American Newspaper Alliance.
LONDON, Dec. 12.—(By Wireless)—You could not really call the bomb close, but it was close enough to jiggle what was left of the brandy in our glasses as we were finishing lunch. My companion, the air force squadron leader, who looks very much like Leslie Howard in his sky-blue uniform, grinned and finished off his glass. He is commanding officer of a field of eighteen Spitfire fighters which are part of the defenses of London.

"If that one was aimed at the railway station it was reasonably close," I said.
The squadron leader of Spitfires grinned again.

"I am afraid you flatter Jerry," he said. "Have you ever been up over London?"

"I shook my head."
At 8,000 feet you can see the whole town and it is pretty magnificent, but on a clear day like this Jerry would never dare come lower than 25,000 or probably 30,- 000 feet. At 30,000 you can see everything. You can see the Thames estuary and the channel and beyond that the coast of France, all of it looking just as it does on a map. Only at 30,000 feet the villages disappear, as they are much too small to see, and only the biggest towns are left. And the roads vanish, too, except the new four-lane concrete highways, as now and then one of them will catch the sun just right and gleam at you like a cobweb in a beam of light and then vanish again.

Dull Gray Smear.
London from 30,000 feet is a dull gray smear and it is about the size of a book you might toss on the floor and stand looking down at. At 30,000 the real objectives are too tiny to see, let alone aim at, and traveling at 200 miles an hour Jerry is lucky if he hits the town.

"You were going to tell me about the Spitfire pilot who was not quite as brave as he hoped he was."

"Poor chap," said the squadron leader. "So I was, just before the bomb fell, of course. I watch my pilots when we are out on patrol and if a chap's nerves are going back on him, I get him out of danger and assigned to other duties before he cracks up."

"The signs usually appear two or three days before the crack-up.
A bloke who is getting a bit wincey and whose nerves are on edge will always be thinking that his motor sounds funny or he is running out of petrol and asking permission to leave the patrol and go back to the field to have his tanks filled or his motor looked at. You cannot always tell if it is the truth or not, and neither can the poor bloke who keeps tipping one wing up against the sun."

Lagging Behind.
"What does that mean?"

"It means he is nervous. You see, Jerry usually dives down on you out of the sun because it blinds you so you cannot see him coming till he is just on you. Well, if you tilt one wing up so that it tip just covers the sun, then you can see if there are any Jerrys coming. Or a bloke may always be lagging behind the formation.
You see, when you are in formation you never can see much because the planes on either side of you are in your way."

"If a bloke is always lagging behind, it means he wants to see if there are any Jerrys about and, of course, lagging is the worst thing he could do because it is always those planes which are behind the formation that Jerry dives down on and picks off. Also,

SWEDEN'S KING—Here is one of the most recent photographs of King Gustaf of Sweden, who, although 82 years of age, has been actively at work in efforts to maintain the neutrality of his nation through the tense European war crises.

PRIME MINISTER—Per Albin Hansson, the Socialist prime minister of Sweden, is widely dissimilar in background and taste from King Gustaf, but today is engaged along with the king in one objective—remaining aloof from neighbors' quarrels.

if a chap is losing his nerve he shows it in a scramble. If a Messerschmitt comes up behind him, he loses altitude. What he should do is to go flat out in a big circle, with Jerry following him. Because after three circles our planes are faster than the Messerschmitts and he will be on Jerry's tail instead of having Jerry on his.

"Anyway, when I see a chap showing any of these signs I always take him aside to talk to him. I tell him that, of course, the other chaps know he is not afraid and that he has done a marvelous job, but ask him if he would not be happier somewhere else, maybe with the bombers."

"What do they say?"
"Nine times out of 10 they agree to it. This poor chap would not quit, though. I suspected his nerve was going, but he kept insisting he was all right, that he loved the fighters and did not want to be anywhere else and would not hear of a transfer."

"What happened to him?"
Shakes Head.
The young squadron leader, who looks like Leslie Howard, shook his head.

"It was my fault. I should have ordered him out. Only I could not be sure I was right. You see, a bloke whose nerves are going to pieces has no business in the fighters. His danger is much greater than a bloke who is okay. In a scramble he will either freeze to the controls or dive when he should not or do something else in a panic. That is what happened to him. Jerry got him the very next time he went up on patrol. He really hadn't a chance, but the poor bloke was afraid to admit even to me that his nerves were going. He did not quite have the courage to confess."

"I suppose it does take courage,"
I said.
"It shouldn't," said the squadron leader. "All of us get streaks of nerves now and then and they are nothing to be ashamed of," said the young man who has six months to live.

Sweden's King, Commoner Try To Avoid War

Gustaf and Prime Minister Tread Cautious Path of Neutrality.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 12.—(AP)—
The two men who stand at the head of Sweden, zealously intent on the nation's ticklish job of remaining neutral, are widely dissimilar in backgrounds and tastes but have one thing in common—their palpable democracy.

One is Sweden's King, Gustaf, the great-grandfather, 82, extremely thin, still addicted to tennis and bridge, big game shooting and family gatherings.
The other is Per Albin Hansson, prime minister, bald, 55, sturdily built and given to schnapps and giant cigars at home, a shrewd political tactician of the Swedish labor movement whose political future is staked on his neutrality policy.

One was born to the throne; the other in youth was a common laborer and son of a laborer.

Kindly Old Man.
The King, always Mr. "G" on the tennis courts, is a kindly old man, a plain Swede interested in the welfare of his family and enjoying the company of a small circle of friends.
His family usually accompanies him to public functions such as dedications, the group frequently including Crown Prince Gustaf

Adolph and his wife; his brother,
Prince Carl, head of the Swedish
Red Cross, and another brother, Prince Eugen, a handsome bachelor of 75, and Crown Prince Gus-tad Adolph's son and his wife.
There are six great-grandchildren,
all girls.

The King usually rises about 9
a. m. and after reading the newspapers plays tennis. Twice a week he attends a government council meeting. Sometimes he slips away from Stockholm for a day's elk shooting. He sometimes dines with the crown prince in the latter's apartment in Stockholm castle.

Lately, he has dedicated a new hospital and opened a museum exhibit of defense weapons. During the winter he will be 45 minutes away from Stockholm at Drottningholm palace, where he will play bridge of an evening and slip out of a morning to shoot rabbits or foxes.

Activities Curbed.
The King used to do a lot of embroidery work, and played the piano and organ. These activities are virtually over, though he still attends the opera and symphony concerts.

Per Albin Hansson devoted more of his efforts toward labor reform than to international policy up to 1936 when Sweden first seriously embarked on a defense program. At the outbreak of the war Hansson became the strongest advocate of Swedish neutrality.

He has few close friends outside his work. He works long hours and lives in a little two-story gray stucco house, 30 minutes by bus from his government office. It is like a dozen other houses in the street, with a small garden in the rear.
Hansson likes a good dinner with smorgasbord and he likes cards. His most frequent caller is his brother, a bricklayer until he became head of the government's social welfare division. Hansson's children are grown and he lives alone with his wife.

Dickinson, 81, Wants a Job To Keep Busy

'Need Variety or I Would Die,' Says Defeated Governor.

By G. MILTON KELLY.
LANSING, Mich., Dec. 12.—(AP)
That unpredictable old gentleman, Governor Luren D. Dickinson, is looking for a job; a very special job—something with a little spice and variety to it. He is 81 years old.

Defeated in the November election, Dickinson will leave office
January 14. He plans a six-week vacation in Florida, and when he returns he says he wants a job waiting for him. He is afraid, he explained, that he won't be able to keep busy, even with managing his farm near Charlotte and filling occasional speaking engagements.

The governor says he could not bear the thought of lonely idleness in the little farmhouse in which Mrs. Dickinson died last August 14. The couple was childless.

And he wants no sinecure.
"I would die," he said simply.
"I need something with a little variety."

Dickinson has delighted in shocking orthodox politicians, and he says his work has been a barrel of fun. He sought another term, he declared, only because "I like the work; I really enjoy it."

The governor said he was perfectly aware some members of his

SEEKS TO KEEP BUSY—Governor Luren Dickinson, of Michigan, 81, defeated in the November general election, declares he will take a job if he can get one after he leaves office in January. Governor Dickinson, who says he would die if he permitted himself to become idle, is pictured above playing Chinese checkers with Ruth Stanke, 18, niece of the man who share-crops the Governor's farm.

Republican party squirmed in New York, and his sporadic outbursts against sin and drinking. He is a life-long temperance national conference of governors worker and still teaches an adult Sunday School class.
But he brushed all that aside with the statement, "I say what I think."

60,000 Poles And Germans Change Places

Nationalities Reshuffled by Nazi Officials in Great Migrations.

WARSAW, Poland (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Dec. 12.—German authorities in Poland are tackling the "minorities problem," perennial political headache of eastern Europe, by pulling out minorities by the roots.

In great migrations, Poles, Germans, Russians and Ukrainians are being unscrambled and brought together in nationality groups in regions sharply defined geographically.

Thus, an exchange of 30,000 Germans who live or lived in the Lublin region in the "government general" district of German-occupied Poland, for 30,000 Poles who once lived in the Warthe district of western Poland, now is nearing completion.

This exchange is a specific trading of farms between Germans and Poles. They take virtually nothing with them and have been told exactly where they are going—have seen photographs of their new homes, the authorities say, and have been told the condition of buildings and size of their new farms.

They travel the distance within a few hours, mostly by train, carrying only their clothing and a few personal belongings.

Abandons Holdings.
A Polish farmer along the Warthe river, for instance, leaves six cows, two horses and a furnished six-room house. A German farmer of the Lublin area leaves six cows, two horses and a furnished house of about equal size. These families change places.

There are difficulties, of course, and heartaches. Some Poles of the Warthe district have become almost Germanized. A few Germans of Lublin have almost forgotten the German language. But they are confronted with a "last chance" to retain their nationalities.

It's moving day here in Warsaw day after day. Never in the history of the former Polish capital have so many moving vans been seen on the street as during this autumn period.

The Poles are moving out of the sections designated as a Jewish ghetto.

The Jews who have not hitherto lived within the ghetto are moving there.

The Germans are getting a residential and business quarter of their own and are moving their possessions there.

In all, 200,000 Warsaw residents are affected.

Section Segregated.
When the Germans took over, they segregated that section of the city in which the poorer Jews lived. By last spring this section was walled off from the rest of the city. Many Poles, however, continued to live in this district.

In October a new ordinance compelled Aryan Poles to move out and all Jews to move in. This transportation largely was completed by November 1.

Now the Poles and Germans are trying to get apart, each nationality moving out of the section principally inhabited by the other. So there's moving, day in and day out.

The picturesque old city of Lublin, which in modern times has been in turn German, Russian and Polish, is a fugitive center of eastern Europe.

In tumble-down houses in the old section of town are hundreds of unhappy persons who have run away from somewhere or who would like to be somewhere else.

Future Uncertain.
In Lublin's ghetto, one of the oldest and largest in Europe, are 40,000 Jews, their future most uncertain.

Among the fugitives are many Ukrainians who somehow have managed to cross from the east the closely guarded demarcation line between Russian and German zones of partitioned Poland. Many complained that one of the first Russian steps was interference with their religious activities. Churches were left open, they reported, but church taxes were raised so sharply that few could afford to pay. And persons who had not paid were not permitted to worship as of old.

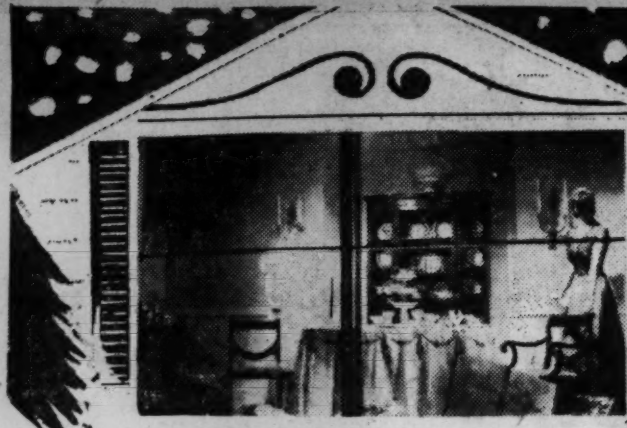

Fugitives from Russia reported that Russian administrators are depopulating a strip of territory, ultimately to be 40 kilometers (nearly 25 miles) wide, bordering on the zone of German occupation. Residents of villages in this buffer strip are being obliged to move eastward and farms are being abandoned. Ultimately, it is said, only Russian soldiers will be permitted in this area.

School Glee Clubs Will Sing Sunday

The annual Christmas carol program, sponsored by the J. W. Maddox Junior High School glee clubs, will be held in the school auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, under the direction of Miss Lorelle Tait, musical director at Maddox.

Starting several weeks before the scheduled date, the boys and girls along with their director undergo long and arduous hours of rehearsing, which add up to an hour's program of splendid and well-planned rendition of the season's most loved Christmas songs.

Susan Brooks and Clyde Leonard will portray the two Biblical characters, Madonna and Joseph. Mrs. W. W. Knight, president of the J. W. Maddox P.-T. A., announced that a short meeting would be held preceding the program. She also announced that the admission is free and everyone is invited to attend.

Not So Simple To Join Army, Reporter Finds

Enrollees Undergo Long Routine To Meet Requirements.

By CAROLINE MCKENZIE.

It's not so simple—this business of becoming a private in Uncle Sam's army.

First you get an inspiration, a bit of patriotism, then you volunteer. Your draft board glances at you, passes on you, and you're off to Fort McPherson. Then the work begins.

If you can pass before the board of physical examiners and reach your classifications and intelligence examinations satisfactorily, then you're in; but it takes time, and lots of it, to see if you can pull up to Uncle Sam's standards.

They call it processing. It might be termed revolutionizing—this business of becoming a private in Uncle Sam's army.

Fort McPherson is a whirlpool of activity, a beehive in every sense because each man has his duty to perform and he goes about it systematically.

When mamas stand on the front porch of the farmhouse and bid their stalwart sons good-bye, or when sweethearts kiss their men good-bye and think "you're such a brave, strong man," they don't realize just what their favorite person is getting into.

No Simple Business. They probably think, as I did, that you sign up, take a physical, and that's all there is to it; but this business isn't that simple.

We camped around the fort both Friday and Saturday trying to see just what goes on after the local draft board ships a man off to enlist. This is what we found:

Each day about 32 men come in. They are inducted and received, or rejected as the case sometimes may be—but each of those steps is complicated. This is no simple business.

The enlisted man walks through the fort gate, past the sentry, and over to the induction station, where he is met by officers. He gives the lieutenant his orders to report and his delivery list and the officer checks these papers against his radiogram and his other advanced data.

After being checked in, the private-to-be is sent to the post hospital for a rigid physical examination. Of course he previously appeared before the draft board doctors; but this business isn't simple. They undergo every form of physical examination. Of the first 75 men who came to Fort McPherson, five were rejected. This, however, is a small percentage according to officials.

Those men who do complete the physical are brought back to the induction station, sworn in, or given the oath of office, and then transferred to the Reception Center, where they are virtually viewed through telescopic glasses.

Cards Sent Relatives. Meanwhile, the induction officers send cards to the nearest relative to tell them that Johnny has gotten his gun and is now a private in Uncle Sam's Army.

The processing continues at the Reception Center, where classification begins. This classification includes a complete interview regarding experience and education and an intelligence test. The sample I. Q. examination which was given us looked simple enough for an eight-year-old child; but they explained that the exams were much more difficult than the sample appeared.

Vaccination and immunization tests are the highlights of the medical examination in this area. Then, when all this is completed, the boys are given their clothes—bed full of them, winter and summer underwear, winter and summer shirts, ties, trousers—more clothes than they can carry unassisted. And, naturally, they come in only two sizes, "too large or too small."

This procession takes about three days and, of course, they partake of quantities of chow during the time; but it is something of a wind-up treat for them, too, before they are shipped off to come post in the Corps Area for service and duty for which they have been best classified.

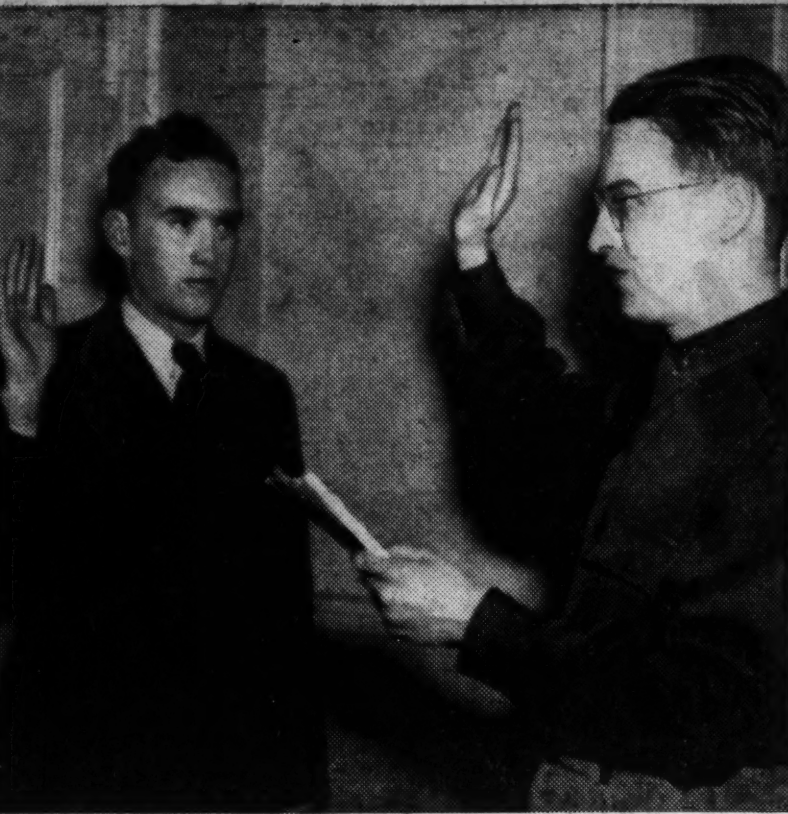

So you see, mama, it's no simple business.

DELIVERY LIST—Lieutenant W. H. Pearson takes a delivery list and order to report from Clyde Edward Castleberry as he arrives at Fort McPherson. About 32 men are inducted into service at the Fort each day. Looking on, waiting to hand the induction officer their papers, are Ed Dollar, Homer Emory and John William Adams.

OPEN WIDE—The dental clinic is only one of the major divisions of the rigid physical examination which privates-to-be are taken through. They are given a thorough examination; but this was best for a girl to photograph. The patient is William Carreker, who's being checked by Lieutenant Benton Seay.

OATH OF OFFICE—Kermit Davenport, one of the 70 out of 75 men to be accepted by the Fourth Corps Area to be a private (a high percentage, incidentally), takes the oath of office, the final step at the induction station as he repeats his pledge after Lieutenant W. E. Reynolds. This is a solemn moment in the procedure.

Station WRUL Cheers English During Raids

Non-Profit Broadcasts Make Friends for U. S.

By ALEX SINGLETON.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—(AP)—In the dim sanctuary of a bomb shelter, an Englishman scribbled an apology for writing his message of thanks in pencil.

"The barrage is heavy tonight," he wrote, "and a bomb last night upset our ink."

That message was one of hundreds sent by Britain's harassed men and women to America's non-commercial short-wave radio station WRUL for its efforts in building by air a "bridge of friendship" between the peoples of the two lands.

Relays Programs. Over that bridge daily go news broadcasts, messages of cheer, reports on this nation's progress in defense, and programs of music and entertainment. It relays certain of the Mutual network programs.

Once a week, the station sends a program from a New England city or town named for a community in old England.

A non-profit making organization, the World-Wide Broadcasting Foundation, which operates the station, was formed in 1935 by Walter S. Lemmon, radio engineer. His dream of a world-girdling radio station was born at the conclusion of the peace conference 21 years ago while serving as special radio officer on the staff of President Woodrow Wilson.

Years of Work. It took years and the development of short-wave receiving sets for commercial home use before its realization. The Rockefeller Foundation aided with financial support. Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other educational institutions furnished educational programs.

Now its broadcasting headquarters in the University Club are a stamp collector's paradise. From the far outposts of civilization—Thailand, Alaska, Australia, Africa—from more than a half hundred countries last year, come reports on its programs.

War cut down the letters from Europe, especially from the countries under Germany's rule, but swelled the number from Britain and from Latin America, to which the station each day directs a good will program in Spanish.

"We have it on the highest authority," wrote a minister in England, "that thistles do not produce figs and that few thorns produce grapes—but it seems that from beyond a hedge of thorns, the fruit may grow. . . . We find this war thorny enough, but the warmth of feeling in the United States is producing some splendid grapes of which, if I may say so, station WRUL's 'friendship bridge' is a particularly fine cluster."

"Due to this wretched bombing at night time," a son informed WRUL from Surrey, "I am unable to indulge in my usual hobby of giving my father a game of billiards and letting him win—which incidentally pleases him very much. So, sitting in the dugout I tune in to WRUL. My wife and I love to listen to WRUL, which is the bright spot of our evening."

LOOK AT THE CLOTHES—Marvin D. Bennett has only one man's (his) allotment of clothes; but they cover an entire bed. No wonder the quantity seems too large. He has summer and winter underwear, summer and winter shirts, trousers and ties. More clothes than he can carry alone.

NOW FOR CHOW—This food doesn't look so appetizing—all served in a pile with salad, entre and vegetables all merging together—but it must be good, for look at the way these eight privates go for it. This business of becoming a private in Uncle Sam's Army isn't simple, except for the eating.

Gain of Two Cotton Losing Electoral Votes Title as King in South Carolina

Census Figures Indicate Increase in 3 States, Loss in One.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—While Georgia remains unaffected, the south stands to gain two votes in the nation's electoral college on the basis of 1940 census figures just submitted to President Roosevelt by the Census Bureau.

Gains of one seat each in the house of representatives appear likely for the states of Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee. However, the net gain for the south is reduced by the loss of one seat in Arkansas.

The calculations are made on the assumption that the total house membership will be retained at 435. Congress has the power to revise the membership if it wants to exercise it.

The gains and losses in house membership, which affect 18 states, are based upon Census Bureau figures showing the 1940 population to be 131,669,275, as compared with 122,755,046 in 1930.

In addition to Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee, the states of New Mexico, Oregon, Arizona and Michigan would gain one seat each, while California would gain three. The following nine states, in addition to Arkansas, would lose one seat each: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Oklahoma.

Should congress fail to adopt legislation to change membership in the house after receiving the census figures from President Roosevelt, which, by law, he is required to submit during the first week of the new session in January, the new membership apportionment would become effective as the basis for congressional elections in 1942.

However, because of the large delegations in the 10 states which stand to lose one member each, it is anticipated that a move will be made to increase the membership sufficiently to permit the 10 affected states to retain their present totals. Census Bureau statisticians state that this could be attained only through increasing membership in the house from the present 435 to 477, which, roughly, would provide one member for each 275,000 persons, instead of one for each 300,000, as is now the case.

Cotton Losing Title as King in South Carolina

Paprika, Which U. S. Imports From Europe, Being Produced.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 12.—(AP)—Cotton is still king in South Carolina but rapidly is becoming just a has-been as far as some farmers are concerned.

The latest rebellion against the monarch's reign has broken out in Dillon county. There a group of farmers have set aside 200 acres for a year or two of experimental planting of paprika.

The European war has threatened the supply of the condiment, as this country's imports come principally from Hungary, Spain and Portugal.

The farmers will try producing paprika for a while to learn what fertilizers and strain of seed are best for South Carolina soil. A New York company has posted a $10,000 cash bond to guarantee the growers a minimum of $50 an acre. The outfit plans to spend about $15,000 additional for crushing machinery.

Not the Only Way. But this is not the only way the state threatens to overthrow the cotton regime.

George E. Prince, director of the Clemson College extension service's marketing division, said today "we are now trying to see if we can grow garlic. The only other state I know of that grows it is California."

"We are trying to find crops to be planted on acreage released from cotton and tobacco" under the marketing quota programs, Prince said.

Peanut production is being increased. A late winter variety of tomato is being grown on an increasing scale in Spartanburg, the county which has come into great prominence as a peach-growing section since the first 15 acres of peaches were set out there almost 20 years ago.

Spartanburg now has 2,000 acres in late variety tomatoes and Cherokee county 500 acres.

Rural electrification lines are making more feasible irrigation systems operated by electric motors, enabling a further diversification of crops.

Livestock Industry. Of even greater importance, Prince said, is the rapidly expanding livestock industry. This is caused by farmers planting far more acres than ever before in feedstuffs, which are being converted into cash through livestock.

As a further move along this line, record-breaking work has been under way for permanent pastures—a necessity for large-scale livestock growth.

"South Carolina is not producing anything like its meat requirements," the marketing official said.

Well over 500,000 young peach trees have been ordered for setting out in the ridge and Piedmont sections, Prince said.

Parrish Takes Army Duties In Jacksonville

Former Atlanta Bank Official Spent Boyhood in Valdosta.

Colonel Howard Parrish, of Atlanta, recently promoted to his present rank in the infantry section of the Officers' Reserve Corps, is on active duty at headquarters of the Second Military Area, in Jacksonville, Fla.

He was formerly vice president of the Atlanta Commercial Bank, and was recently connected with the United States Treasury Department. He spent his boyhood in Valdosta and worked for a time at the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company.

During the first World War he was sent to France and received a citation in general orders for gallantry in action, the Victory Medal with bars representing five campaigns, the Silver Star medal, and the Purple Heart medal.

Colonel Parrish was graduated from the special courses for reserve officers at the Command and General Staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the Army War College, in Washington, D. C. He also served a detail as an additional member of the War Department general staff in Washington.

It is interesting in this connection to recall some of the production achievements of the industry. In 1929 its assembly plants turned out 5,621,045 cars and trucks. Approximately 2,000,000 of that total were made in three months. It was said afterward that had the occasion required it the assembly plants could have produced twice that number of vehicles.

The industry had another 5,000,000 unit year in 1937—the volume was 5,016,437 to be exact—and its production facilities were only partly engaged.

Since the beginning of the current model year it has been operating on schedules that would produce approximately 5,500,000 cars and trucks if maintained until next September 30. There is no expectation of that volume for the 1941 model year; the estimate, which includes some hope as well as expectation, ranges from 4,500,000 to 4,650,000.

It is significant, however, that the present high rate of output has been maintained with few plants working more than two eight-hour shifts five days a week.

South Kirkwood Plans Yule Event. South Kirkwood citizens will stage a prelude to Christmas at 6 o'clock Saturday night when the business district will be bathed with lights and decorations at ceremonies sponsored by the Kirkwood Civic Club.

Mayor-elect Roy LeCraw, Faber A. Bollinger, Dr. Worth A. Hobby, Lionel Keene and even Santa himself are among the dignitaries who will have prominent parts in the program. The Murphy Junior High school band and glee club will participate, and little Miss Betty Sue Warner will pull the switch to turn on the Christmas lights, Dr. B. W. Medlock, club president, announced.

Davidson Alumni Meet Here Tonight

Atlanta chapter of Davidson College alumni will be host at the regional alumni meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the Harris tearoom, 22 Marietta street. Ernest A. Beaty, member of the Latin and German departments of Davidson, will speak on "What's Good and What's Wrong at Davidson."

The meeting, held for nearly 100 alumni living in a 175-mile radius of Atlanta, is arranged by W. E. McNair, temporary chairman of the region. Harilee Branch Jr., of Atlanta, national president of the Davidson Alumni Association, will also speak. Motion pictures of the 1940 football team, band, glee club, and other school activities, will be shown.

President of the Atlanta chapter will be elected to succeed Grier Martin, who resigned last spring.

Choir To Present Christmas Concert. The fourteenth annual Christmas carol concert of students of Atlanta University, Morehouse College and Spelman College, will be presented at 8 o'clock Friday and Saturday nights at Sisters chapel, Spelman College.

The choir—485 strong—will include a number of new selections as well as old favorites on its program.

BUT, IT STARTED AS a little seed

Santa Turns Highbrow in Ideas of Toys

Arts, Sciences Stressed for 'Junior' and 'Little Sister.'

Santa Claus has gone highbrow with a Ph. D. degree. His workshop at the North Pole has been converted into a college of arts and sciences.

The toys he makes are not the mama dolls and little red wagons that delighted the hearts of yesterday's boys and girls. The roller skates and footballs are gone from the shelves of Atlanta's retail toy departments.

Instead for Christmas Junior and Little Sister want a chemistry set or miniature loom, upon which to weave a rug or afghan. They climb on Santa's knee and childishly ask for an X-ray kit or a sound studio "like they have in Radio City."

A tour of the local department stores reveals a 1940 edition of boys' and girls' toys that would confound a university professor. Youthful fun has shifted from brawn to brains; the simple toys have been replaced by educational gadgets.

Trust to Luck. Modern mothers and fathers ask Junior what he wants for Christmas, and then trust to luck they know what he's talking about.

For instance, he might want a spectroscope—a replica of the huge apparatus that astronomers use to determine the mineral content of distant planets. With a junior spectroscope set comes a handful of minerals that precocious youngsters can identify with their new toy.

Little Sister probably wants a loom, on which she can make rugs for her doll house. Incidentally, the doll house probably has a furnace in the basement and tiny radiators in each room. If she doesn't know what kind of a rug to make, give her an "Automatic Designer." Spin it once, and little wheels draw a pattern. To save Little Sister's fingers is a pair of elastic scissors.

Magnets always have attracted boys, big and little. But only little boys dare own an electro-set, equipped with a piece of iron and the necessary apparatus to magnetize it yourself. Don't give Junior a set of lead soldiers; buy him a casting set, and let him make them himself.

Woodburning Set. If somebody's daughter is tired of paints or of colored clays, she will ask Santa Claus for a wood-burning set and promptly begin etching designs on the accompanying blocks, the leg of the antique chair and on the dining room table.

Perhaps Junior doesn't want to grow up and be a policeman. Maybe he wants to be a biologist. All right. Start him off right by giving him a microscope, complete with slides and a sample of "diatomaceous earth" to peer at. If he wants to be a mineralogist like Uncle Ned, there is another kit with sample rocks, chemicals and a geologist's hammer.

The electrical age provides such toys as a telephone set, which comes assembled and can be put together only by somebody with the mentality of a 10-year-old boy. A radio construction kit works the same way, except it requires a mentality of under 15 years of age. No adults admitted.

For youngsters with lusty lungs, Santa Claus has invented a glass-blowing set. Tubes and bulbs of glass, a pipe and a Bunsen burner are included, along with a set of directions. Tiny tots can blow it successfully; adults will only get burned about the head and face.

Threat to Education. Perhaps it's a plot. Perhaps the younger generation got sick and tired of Daddy and his friends playing all day with the electric train or the log cabin construction kit. So they're asking for presents they know Daddy and his friends can't work—until Junior explains how its done.

A threat to public education is found on one counter that emphasizes typewriters, adding machines guaranteed to do home-work and a miniature rotary printing press. It is not impossible to picture Junior figuring up his arithmetic on an adding machine Santa brought, and then running off 100 copies of the answers on his little printing press. These, of course, are sold for pennies.

If a parent tries to stop this effort, undoubtedly he will get a lecture on the freedom of the press as set forth in the Constitution. This fact, and others like it, was learned in a new game called "Questions and Answers That Stump College Graduate Students." The name isn't that long, really, but it's that bad.

Other games are constructed around the child's knowledge of ancient history, the arts and literature and psychoanalysis. Their equipment doesn't include such naive toys as balls and bats, skipping ropes and the like.

Santa is doing his best to undermine youthful respect for parental intelligence. It's odd that such children, who can play with such complicated toys, still believe in Santa Claus. Or is it?

Gainesville Elks Plan Gifts for Unfortunates

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. GAINESVILLE, Ga., Dec. 12.—Gainesville Elks are heading a movement, with other civic groups participating, designed to provide Santa Claus for many unfortunate boys and girls of the city and Hall county.

Baskets of food, clothing and toys will be brought to headquarters in a truck provided for the purpose. Co-operation with churches and other organizations will assure no duplication.

As their part, local firemen are repairing and painting toys donated.

Navy Enlisting Posters Drawn By Veteran Tar

Matt Murphey Finds Terra Firma Boring; Served During War.

By IRA WOLFERT.
For the North American Newspaper Alliance.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The stern and dashing, also attractive, posters that have been enticing young men into the United States Navy are invariably made by Matt Murphey, a small-town fellow who, after spending fifteen hard years working his way up in the fleet, hasn't forgotten how to pronounce "aw shucks!"

Mr. Murphey started in the Navy, as every enlisted man starts, by chipping off paint and how he spends his time putting paint on, and it may be called progress. As for "aw shucks," it seems, oddly enough, to be more typical of Uncle Sam's present-day Navy than "Avast me hearty," or even the four-letter words.

Although, the Navy teaches nearly everything else, it does not teach art. Mr. Murphey learned how to draw on his own time and from correspondence school courses. His interest in the subject was awakened by a shipmate, who was handy with a pencil.

It was no recruiting poster that got Mr. Murphey into a sailor's uniform. It was, instead, an eloquent companion who got an assist from a setting that consisted of a submarine that had run aground, the U. S. N. tender Cheyenne and pretty girls.

"Deck Hand" on Land.

This was in December, 1916, at Eureka, Calif. At the time, Mr. Murphey had done with two years of high school and vice versa. He was putting in his time as a "deck hand"—meaning, he explained, a fellow who attends to whatever comes up—in a garage at Redding, Calif., hard by the Pacific Ocean.

So the submarine H-3 ran aground and Mr. Murphey and his pal went over to Eureka to see the sight.

"There was this tender," Mr. Murphey said, "and the tugs, all heaving away at the boat and the whole coastline was decorated with sailors and pretty girls, the pretty girls having eyes for nobody but the boys in blue."

"Well, after a discouraging time with the girls and a pretty good time with the sailors, my friend says, 'Let's join the Navy,' and I said it was a good idea. I joined all right, but he backed out at the last minute. I heard after that he got caught in the draft, before this one, and was about to be called into the Army when the armistice came. What happened to him after that I don't know, but whatever it was I guess he kind of missed something when he backed out of joining up with the fleet."

Mr. Murphey served as a quartermaster of signals on convoy duty during the war and then started to take courses in how to be an artist in 10 easy lessons at home. His home then was the out-stack destroyer Woolsey, Id. 77.

"In 1923 my enlistment was up," Mr. Murphey said, "and I decided I was good enough to go out and make the world with my pen. So I went looking for work and the job I got was as a freight handler at a department store in Los Angeles for $22 a week."

"My handwriting was good. The courses had given me that much. I moved along in the freight-handling department to $37 a week and I kept going to art school at night. I submitted thousands of drawings, well, hundreds, anyway, to the advertising department of the store and pretty soon they put me to doing art work up there for $42.50 a week."

Returned to Navy.

"I stuck it to 1928. Then I got red of dry land. The trouble with dry land is that it's always there wherever you put your feet down and that gets kind of boring. So, it wasn't a recruiting poster that got me to hankering again for the navy. I knew what it was like and nobody had to sell me a bill of goods."

In 1928, he enlisted again and, through his previous enlistment, he had risen as high as noncommissioned officer could get, he had to start from the bottom all over again—one year as third-class quartermaster, chipping paint and scrubbing decks,

Law Loopholes For U. S. Loans To Britain Seen

RFC Said To Be Clearly Exempted From Johnson Act.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Revision of the Johnson act, which promises to be the subject of lively discussion in the next congress in connection with proposed loans to Great Britain for prosecution of the war, may not be necessary after all.

Congressional leaders and some of the government loan agency heads who have examined the act in the light of current developments take the position that ample loopholes are provided to make considerable loans to the British without further legislation.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, second ranking majority member of the Senate Finance Committee, and Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, the Democratic whip of the upper chamber, are two of those who openly have taken this view.

"There is no doubt in my mind," said Senator King "that the government may make loans to foreign countries under provisions of the Johnson act. The act definitely prohibits individuals or others, other than the government, from so doing, but very definitely is so worded that the government is not denied this right."

Favors Aid.

"I remember specifically that, at the time the bill was before congress, our government was considering the advisability of issuing loans to South American countries. The act therefore was so phrased that such action would not be prohibited. I decidedly favor aiding Great Britain, Greece and China and desire to see our government do so in every manner short of war."

"In my opinion," said Senator Minton, "the act was clearly intended to permit the government, through such agencies as the RFC, which was in existence at that time, to make such loans as it saw fit."

The Johnson act, sponsored by Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, and approved April 13, 1934, was designed to prevent loans to foreign governments in default of World War obligations owed the United States. The first section of the act makes all of this clear enough, but, as inter-

Senator Offers Defense Labor 'Peace' Plan

Other Major Issues Also Tackled by Young Joseph Ball.

By J. A. O'LEARY.

For North American Newspaper Alliance.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—A tall, serious-looking young man from the west—recently appointed Senator Joseph H. Ball, of Minnesota, only 34 years old—has rolled up his sleeves and gone to work earnestly, preparing to play his part in consideration of the major issues that will confront congress this winter.

Although on the national scene less than two months, he took the initiative recently in asking the senate to consider the Minnesota plan for settlement of labor disputes as a means of averting tie-ups in national defense plants.

Senator Ball went on record at the time of his appointment in favor of such aid to Great Britain as military experts believe is possible without crippling American defense, but he made known today that he would vote against repeal of the Johnson act, which bars foreign debtor nations from floating loans in this country.

The young St. Paul newspaperman, whom Governor Harold E. Stassen picked to succeed the veteran isolationist, Senator Lundeen, also has some well-defined views on other pressing problems. And, while he answers questions with a frankness indicating he has the courage of his convictions, he makes it clear that he wants to study these other major legislative questions carefully before offering specific remedies.

General Outlook.

His general outlook at this time on some of them may be summed up as follows:

He does not regard the present farm program as a permanent solution of the ills of agriculture. He is opposed to recent suggestions for a federal sales tax to meet the government's urgent revenue requirements, mainly because it bears no relation to ability to pay. He thinks revision of income taxes would be a preferable source.

If the administration sets out to cut non-defense expenditures to balance that part of the budget separately from national defense, Senator Ball does not see how it can be done without applying a percentage of reduction all along the line.

He is particularly interested in perfecting the social security program, with two general objectives in mind: (1) To make its operation less cumbersome on the employer of a few persons; (2) To broaden its application to include large groups not benefited at present. He said he recognizes that neither of these improvements is easy of solution, but indicated he wants to study them.

"Critical Move."

Asked to comment on the question of extending credit to Great Britain, he said, "It seems to me that would be a critical move, because they owe us five billions now" (referring to the debt from the last war).

Directing attention to what this war is costing Britain, Senator Ball expressed the belief that any credit extended in this country now "isn't going to be a loan, but a grant."

"If it is found advisable in the interest of our own defense," he added, "and it is shown she hasn't any available resources, I would rather make it an outright gift." Asked what he thought of the suggestion that England be asked to give the United States some of its colonial possessions in this hemisphere in exchange for needed supplies if its credit becomes exhausted, Senator Ball said he preted by congressional leaders, the loophole is contained in a second section which reads: "as used in this act the term 'person' (or those forbidden to make such foreign loans) includes individual, partnership, corporation, or association, other than a public corporation created by or pursuant to special authorization of congress, or a corporation which the government of the United States has or exercises a controlling interest through stock ownership or otherwise."

RFC Said Exempted.

The RFC, giant lending agency of the government, is said to be clearly exempted from the restrictions of the act. The leading officials are understood to take this view of the matter, although they have not been claiming it openly for fear of becoming involved in congressional debate. If the administration should decide on a policy of granting British loans, however, there seems little doubt of the proper supporting interpretation being given by the agency's legal staff, as well as the Department of Justice.

Senator Johnson, meantime, has served notice that he will vigorously oppose any move to revise the act. He was prompted to make the statement before returning to California for the Christmas holidays recently after proponents of the all-aid-to-Britain-short-of-war predicted steps in this direction would be taken during the coming January regular session.

PERFECT MEMBERSHIP—The third grade was the only class in the Harris Street school to roll up a 100 per cent P-T. A. membership in the drive this year, and last Friday 36 of the pupils were honored at a party. Here they are, with a few of their mothers standing in the back, shown after Captain Jack Malcom, of Atlanta, and Chief Bill Tyler, of the East Point police department, had congratulated them. First row, left to right, Tommy Odum, Floyd Guest, Lewis Jones, Wesley Reese, Fred Bearden, Lewis Davis, Robert McCallum, Tommy Dunn and Billy Billingsley; second row, left to

"would want a lot better deal" than this country got in the recent destroyer exchange, referring to the defense-base leasing privilege in certain British possessions.

In elaborating on his statement that the present farm program is not a permanent cure, Senator Ball said the agricultural problem is still a question of prices, and that if the price level can be brought up to the proper level, the farmer will not need annual benefit payments.

When this session of congress began last January, Minnesota had two Farmer-Laborites in the senate—Senators Shipstead and Lundeen. Today it has two Republicans. Senators Shipstead was re-elected in November, but ran this year as a Republican. Senator Ball was appointed as a Republican. Although he is now filling out the remaining two years of the late Senator Lundeen's term, he plans to seek election for a regular six-year term in 1942.

Senator Lundeen, who was killed in an airplane crash a few months ago, voted as a member of the house in 1917 against American entry into the World War. As the employees or employers in a defense factory desire to negotiate working conditions, they must give written notice. If no agreement is reached within 20 days, the employees or the employers may give notice of intention to strike or lockout, as the case may be, after the expiration of 30 days. This waiting period would be utilized by conciliators from the Department of Labor to try to work out an agreement. The theory behind the waiting period plan is that after a strike or lock-out has occurred, feeling becomes more intense, making compromise more difficult.

Soviet Supplies Sent to Nazis By Kaganovich

Great Russian Organizer Able To Handle Railroad Problem.

By ROBERT MAGIDOFF

MOSCOW, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The star of Lazar M. Kaganovich, Russia's greatest organizer and trouble-shooter No. 1, is rising once more as the Soviet Union is taking advantage of her neutrality to build up her war potential.

Until the purge of 1936-1938, Kaganovich was second to Joseph Stalin alone in popularity and influence, but the period of wholesale arrests brought new men to the foreground.

Actually he never lost his share in determining Russia's course—the privilege of the eleven members of the all-powerful political bureau of the Communist party, headed by Stalin.

It is popularly believed among the Russians that Kaganovich shares with Andrei Zhdanoff the distinction of pinch-hitting for Stalin when he goes on vacation.

Appointed vice-premier of U. S. S. R. in August, 1938, Kaganovich retained his post as commissar for railways, a job he has held since 1935 with a brief interruption in 1937. Kaganovich then was relieved of his duties as commissar for railways in order to head the commissariat for heavy industry. But his successor soon made such a mess of Russia's transport that Kaganovich had to be recalled to undo the damage.

Charged With Task.

In the spring of 1938 he again was charged with the task of insuring timely delivery of raw materials to industrial plants and distribution of finished products to Russia's innumerable cities and villages.

As commissar for railways, Kaganovich also has been in charge of transporting troops, ammunition and provisions to the new, extended frontiers of the Soviet Union.

A special task with which Kaganovich is entrusted is delivery to Germany of supplies of raw materials under the terms of the Soviet-German trade agreement.

That this is no mean task can be gauged from the fact that the terms are generally believed to have called upon the Russians to provide the third Reich during the first year of the agreement's operation with a million tons of oil, an equal amount of barley, 100,000 tons of raw cotton, probably as much grain, some 50,000 tons of manganese, and smaller quantities of iron ore, phosphate and other raw materials.

Most of these supplies have to be transported by rail through the ten railway lines linking Russia and Germany in what formerly was Polish territory.

Not Kaganovich's Fault.

Unofficial reports have it that Moscow has not fulfilled some of its obligations under the agreement. The explanations given, however, do not attribute this failure to Kaganovich's inability to transport the goods, but rather to other reasons of a political nature.

Kaganovich's rise to power as an outstanding industrial executive in 1935 ended all talk of his being slated to succeed eventually to Stalin's place as the Communist party chief, putting him rather in the ranks of strictly administrative leaders like Premier Vyacheslav Molotov.

Kaganovich launched his career, however, as a Communist party functionary. At various times between 1920 and 1935 he headed party organizations in central Asia, the Ukraine and Moscow province.

Kaganovich directed the building of the first subway in Moscow, and he alone of all the Soviet leaders proved able to cope with the problem of railways—for centuries the weakest link in Russian economy.

Kaganovich was born November 22, 1893, son of a poor Jewish leather worker in the Ukraine. At the age of 14, Lazar began work as a shoemaker, later as saddler.

Kaganovich joined the Bolsheviks as a youth of 18. He was arrested and exiled in 1915, but escaped and continued underground work in various Ukrainian cities.

Follower of Lenin.

A follower of Lenin, Kaganovich was arrested by the Kerensky government after the Bolshevik revolution in February, 1917. He escaped to White Russia, where he was active in the Bolshevik revolution in October of the same year.

Kaganovich took active part in the civil war that followed, and in 1920 he was given his first important political assignment as the Communist party boss in Tashkent, capital of Uzbekistan, central Asia.

He became a figure of national importance after receiving the job of secretary-general of the Communist party of the Ukraine in 1925. He held this post for three crucial years in the history of Soviet Russia, as this was the period of the sharpest, decisive clashes between Leon Trotsky and Stalin.

After Trotsky's banishment, Kaganovich became the most important Jew in his country. He was appointed third secretary-general of the Communist party, a key post which he has held ever since. Two years later he was transferred to Moscow, as head of the capital's party organization.

Tall and handsome, Kaganovich is one of the most attractive among Soviet Russia's leading personalities. Even among the hard-working Soviet leaders he is considered a "human dynamo" capable of showing not a trace of fatigue after 15-16 hours of incessant work.

Canada Looks To Days When War Has Ended

Joint Foreign Policy With U. S. Is One of Aims.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.—(P)—Canada is looking ahead, although preoccupied with her war effort, and there is a surprising volume of public and private discussion of problems likely to arise when the war is over.

These problems resolve themselves broadly into four main questions:

1. What sort of new world order is coming out of this struggle; for what kind of democracy, political and economic, is the world to be made safe?

2. What will be the character of Canadian-United States relations, both from the strictly Canadian-United States point of view and from the viewpoint of Canada as a link between the British commonwealth and the United States?

Question of Aims.

3. Where will Canada fit into the Pan-American picture?

4. How will Canada's industry, now swiftly expanding under the whip of war needs, fit into the post-war set-up?

These are large questions, particularly the first, since it raises in turn the question of ultimate war aims.

There has been a vast amount of editorial comment and other discussion, some of it originating in England and prominently published here, to the effect that a new kind of democracy is being forged under the sledge-hammer blows of total war.

There are even forecasts of far-reaching developments inside Britain when the war aims of this newly emerging democracy are crystallized in the form of a clearly stated program.

That will not come, the Canadian weekly "Saturday Night" predicts, until Britain's defensive battle has been clearly won and the time comes to launch the long-awaited offensive on the continent of Europe.

Due to Labor's Aid.

Under the caption, "Britain's Coming Crisis," this publication says the "prevailing effective unity" in Britain now is due to the fact that British labor is co-operating wholeheartedly with the conservatives in what is obviously a fight for the sheer existence of Britain.

Once the existence of Britain no longer is in question, the workers who have daily risked death for home defense may weigh the price of a grand offensive "in scales unknown to officialdom, or the city, or the aristocracy," the article says, adding that in the resultant internal controversy "will be at stake a whole social order, a whole economic system, and the future of international relations, including colonial relations, for an indefinite period."

Parliamentary debate on Canada's war effort has included somewhat similar foreshadowings of a popular insistence that this war must be fought, not to defend the old order, but to shape the new.

Speakers have insisted that there must be no repetition of the post-war poverty of returning soldiers such as characterized the end of the last war. Some have demanded a clearer statement of war aims to convince the people that the sacrifices they will be called on to make will end internal inequalities as well as foreign aggression.

The trend of Canada's future relations with the United States has been underscored by creation of the permanent joint defense board and a rapidly widening co-operation between the two countries in all matters affecting the security or welfare of North America.

"The link forged by the Canada-United States defense agreement is no temporary axis," Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King told the house of commons recently. "It is part of the enduring foundation of a new world order, based on friendship and goodwill."

Some Canadians foresee a merger of the British commonwealth and the United States, with Canada as the hub of an English speaking union. In general, however, the Canadian attitude toward the United States still is cautious.

Nevertheless, even those who hesitate to advocate any revolutionary change in the status of the two countries emphasize the necessity of far greater co-ordination in the future.

Businessmen, noting the production crisis which arose when Canada suddenly found herself drastically dependent on American factories while her war industry still was geared to England's, have begun to insist on closer co-ordination between all lines of Canadian and United States production. As the magazine "Canadian Business" has put it, people are beginning to see that in Canada and the United States "virtually all problems are mutual—not merely those of defense."

There is also a tendency to concede that, whatever the outcome of the war, Canada and the United States henceforth will have to strive for a common foreign policy before either of them gets into another war—not merely some form of friendly collaboration after the war has begun. As a writer in the University of Toronto Quarterly has expressed it:

"We cannot hope to occupy half a continent without deciding the nature of our relations with the other half. We cannot possess vital coastlines fronting on two oceans without recognizing that our neighbor—to whom, whether we admit it or not, we look for protection in case of attack—has also interest in seeing that no other state is provoked by our actions into an attempt to seize those positions."

Pan-American Trend.

As to Canada's attitude toward the Pan-American Union, here again recent developments suggest the trend toward a new position. The Canadian position heretofore has been that the Pan-American Union is a union of republics, and Canada is not a republic; in fact a kingdom, with George VI as reigning monarch.

Recently, however, the Dominion government announced its intention to open Canadian legations in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro, and soon afterward preparations were made to send a Canadian trade delegation to the West Indies and Latin America. Some observers interpreted these moves as a prelude to Canada's entry into the Pan-American community.

Canada's relations with Latin America naturally are tied up with the post-war future of Canadian trade and industry. Some pessimistic forecasters fear that when the war is over and the munitions boom collapses, Canada's vastly expanded industry may be reduced to competing with United States manufacturers for the markets of South America, especially if Germany emerges from the war strong enough to dominate Europe's trade.

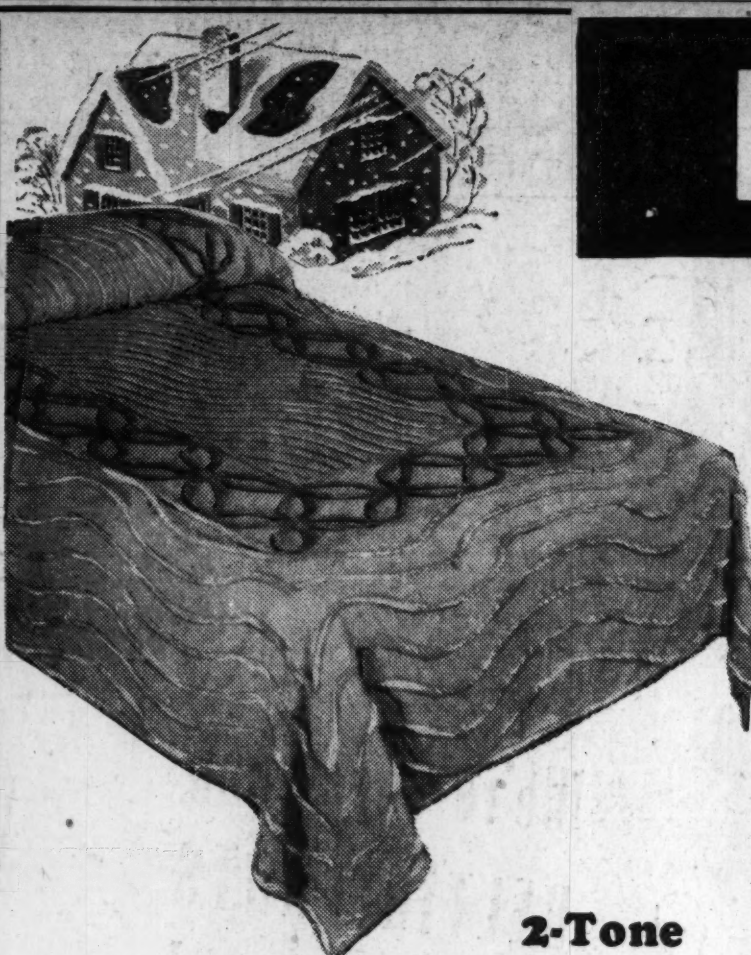

Migration Expected.

Others, however, foresee a great migration of British factories to Canada—regardless of the outcome of the war—which would make Canada the center of a trade with South America which formerly had its headquarters in England. Canada then would be entering the South American market not with articles already manufactured more cheaply in the United States, but with "English" wares formerly produced in the United Kingdom.

The trend in this direction is indicated by the fact that British capital already is financing new plants in Canada instead of rebuilding English factories destroyed by bombing raids.

That colossal economic readjustments are inevitable, regardless of how the war ends, is acknowledged generally here.

That is one reason why Canadians, in and out of parliament, are insisting that their government keep its eye on post-war problems as well as the immediate task of waging war.

Children love to take part in the exciting preparations for Christmas. They should be permitted and encouraged to make simple cookies, candies, table and tree decorations. Under the inspiration of an anticipated visit from good, old Santa Claus, they will do their best.

Cookies for Cheer

At Christmas time there must be cookies and plenty of them. They're perfect refreshments, together with a cup of cocoa or chocolate for children's parties, with tea or coffee for drop-in company, or for dessert with puddings or ice cream. No household has completed its Christmas preparations until the cookie jar on the pantry shelf is filled to the brim. Boxes of cookies, selected for their keeping quality, make acceptable Christmas gifts. They carry a very personal greeting to the recipient. Following are some particularly choice recipes for cookies that keep well.

Black Walnut Cookies.

- 1 3-4 cups butter or margarine
- 1 pound brown sugar
- 1-2 cup granulated sugar
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 teaspoon black walnut flavoring
- 1-2 cups black walnut meats
- 1-2 cups shredded coconut
- 6 cups sifted cake flour
- 1 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1-2 teaspoon soda

Beat 6 eggs and add 1 cup light brown or yellow sugar and 1 cup granulated sugar. Beat until frothy and well blended. Then mix in 2 teaspoons vanilla, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped figs, 1 cup chopped dates and 1 cup chopped nut meats, and 2 cups flour sifted.

An easy recipe and ingenious equipment for decorating are used here by Virginia Weidner. Her pasty tube is a funnel made of white paper.

Mix together 1 cup shortening, 1 cup milk, 2 cups granulated sugar and 3 eggs. Sift 2½ cups flour with 2 teaspoons baking powder, add 1 tablespoon orange juice and the grated rind of half an orange. If there is not enough flour to roll, add enough to make the dough easy to handle. Roll quite thin and cut into desired shapes. Sprinkle liberally with powdered sugar and decorated with candied fruit or flowers, candies or nuts. Bake in moderately hot (400 degrees) oven.

Be sure to caution the young cook to leave plenty of space between cookies when placing them on sheet. Otherwise interesting shapes will be spoiled by running together.

Fig Oaties.

- 1-2 cups dried figs
  - 1 cup butter or margarine
  - 2 cups granulated sugar
  - 3 eggs
  - 1-4 cup milk
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
  - 1-2 cups sifted flour
  - 2 teaspoons baking powder
  - 3-4 teaspoon salt
  - 5 cups quick cooking oats
- Boil figs about 5 minutes in water to cover; drain, clip stems and cut figs into thin strips. (Small scissors make this easy.) Cream, butter or margarine and sugar; add beaten eggs and stir to blend. Add milk, flavoring and flour sifted with salt and baking powder and beat. Add figs and oats and stir to blend. Drop by small spoonfuls onto a greased cookie sheet and flatten slightly. Bake in a moderately hot oven 400 degrees about 13 to 15 minutes. Press a nut meat or a strip of fruit into the tops before baking, if desired. For a glazed top brush with honey and place under broiler for a minute or two. Makes 5 1-2 dozen medium-sized cookies.

Christmas Cookies.

- 2 cups yellow sugar
  - 1-2 cup strained honey
  - 1-4 cup butter or margarine
  - 1-2 ounces citron, ground fine
  - 2-2 cups flour
  - 1 tablespoon baking powder
  - 1 teaspoon cinnamon
  - 1-2 teaspoon cloves
  - 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg
  - 1 egg
  - Juice and rind of one small lemon
  - 2 tablespoons milk
- Add yellow sugar to honey and heat until sugar is dissolved. Add the butter or margarine and let mixture cool. Mix and sift the spices and baking powder with the flour. Add, with other ingredients, to the honey. Add just enough more flour to make the mixture easy to handle. Roll 1-4-inch thick and cut with fancy cookie cutters or use press. Bake in greased pans in moderate oven about 9 minutes. Pack, when cool, in tin box lined with waxed paper.

Chocolate Drops.

- 1-2 cup shortening
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 2 eggs well beaten
  - 2 squares chocolate, melted
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1 cup flour
  - 1-2 teaspoon salt
  - 3-4 cup pecan meats, cut fine
  - 1-2 cup semi-sweet chocolate cut in small pieces
- Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, beat in the eggs. Add melted chocolate and vanilla and mix well. Sift flour and salt together, combine with nut meats and the cut chocolate and add to first mixture. Drop from a teaspoon onto greased cookie sheets. Bake in moderately slow oven 12 to 15 minutes.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 13, 1940.

Ye Olde Plumme Pudding

Christmas dinner without a plum pudding just isn't Christmas dinner to people who love the romance of tradition. From the time when the original plum pudding made its bow at the beginning of Christmas dinner back in the days of the Normans, when it was called a plum pottage, through the days of Dickens, when it appeared at the end of Christmas dinner, surrounded by fascinating blue flames, right up to this current season of festivity, plum pudding has been as important as the Yule Log, Mistletoe, the Holly Wreath or jolly old St. Nick himself.

For those of us who like to make our own, the following recipe is one that has come down from generation to generation from an English great-great-grandmother.

English Plum Pudding.

- 2 cups of finely chopped suet
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup shredded orange (or lemon) peel
- ½ cup molasses
- 2 cups seedless raisins
- 1 teaspoonful cinnamon
- 4 eggs (beat whites and yolk separately if desired)
- 2 cups prepared flour
- 1 cup shredded citron
- ½ cup candied sliced cherries
- 2 cups currants
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1-4 cup brandy

Put all dry ingredients into a mixing bowl, put in eggs one by one, each being mixed thoroughly with the other ingredients before the next one is added. Next to follow is the milk, molasses, the brandy and spices. Steam for four hours. When sending to the table stick a sprig of holly in the top; at the table pour over the pudding a quarter cupful of brandy or rum, and set fire to it. Serves 8.

Plum Pudding Sauce.

Cook together a cupful of sugar and 1-4 cup of water until the syrup spins a thread. Beat the yolks of three eggs until lemon-colored and thick, and pour the hot syrup over them, beating all the time. Add a cupful of cream, one teaspoon lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of brandy. Strain and serve immediately.

*May be steamed in top of double boiler, being careful to allow enough room for expansion.

Quick Dinners For Busy Days

These are busy days. And they're happy days, for breathes there a man, woman or child with soul so dead he does not feel a glow of happiness upon selecting a gift for somebody? This season when children are excited about the coming visit of Santa Claus, and grown-ups are self-forgetful in order to provide happiness for others, should be enjoyed to the fullest. It should not be marred by fatigue and overstrain. When well planned the days can be filled with shopping, holiday cooking and extras, and all done happily. Simplified and well planned meals will help more than anything else to provide time for the extras and the hours for shopping. Here are suggestions for simple, nourishing dinners:

DINNER NO. 1.

Sausages and Apple Rings
Canned Spaghetti
Buttered Spinach
Beet and Green Pepper Salad
Tapioca Pudding
Coffee
Milk
Sauteed Sausages and Apple Rings.
1 1-2 pounds pork sausage
3 large apples
Arrange sausages in skillet with enough water to cover about halfway. Cook rapidly until water evaporates, about 10 minutes. Remove to hot platter and saute apples which have been cored, but unpeeled, and sliced thick in the sausage fat.
Arrange around the sausages. Serve hot. Serves 6.

DINNER NO. 2.

Grill of beans and hamburger with sliced onions and tomatoes.
Head lettuce with Thousand Island Dressing.
Hard Rolls
Stewed Fruit with Wafers
Coffee or Milk

1 1-2 pounds ground beef

2 cans spiced or baked beans
2 large onions sliced
2 large tomatoes, sliced
Make hamburger meat, handling lightly, into patties or balls or shallow baking dish. Into little mounds around meat, place beans. Over all slice onions. Place under moderate heat until meat is brown on one side. Turn, sprinkle with salt and pepper, a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, slice tomatoes over all and return to broiler until meat is brown on other side.

DINNER NO. 3.

Canned Cream of Tomato Soup
Casserole of Tuna Fish and Noodles
Buttered Green Peas
Corn Muffins
Plain Cake with Fudge Sauce
Coffee
Milk

Into a buttered casserole place half of the noodles, over the noodles place the flaked tuna, and over tuna the remaining noodles. Over all pour the mushroom soup, top with buttered soft bread crumbs and bake about 20 minutes in moderately hot oven.
Filled Rolls.
Hard rolls, the centers scooped out, and filled with a meat mixture make an unusual main dish for a quick meal. To make them: Cut a slice from top of bakery rolls and scoop out all soft crumbs. Fry crumbs in butter or margarine, add 1-2 cups white sauce, 1 1-2 cups chopped left-over meat, 2 teaspoons minced onion, salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne. ## These Children Help With Plans For Santa's Visit

Our friends and neighbors—readers of the Food Parade—write us a great many letters. Many are inspirational and it's a pity we don't have space to print lots of them. This one was selected and a space made for it today because it sounds like those children had fun decorating their home for Christmas. Of such small things are responsible citizens made.

Bryson City, N. C.
December 2, 1940.

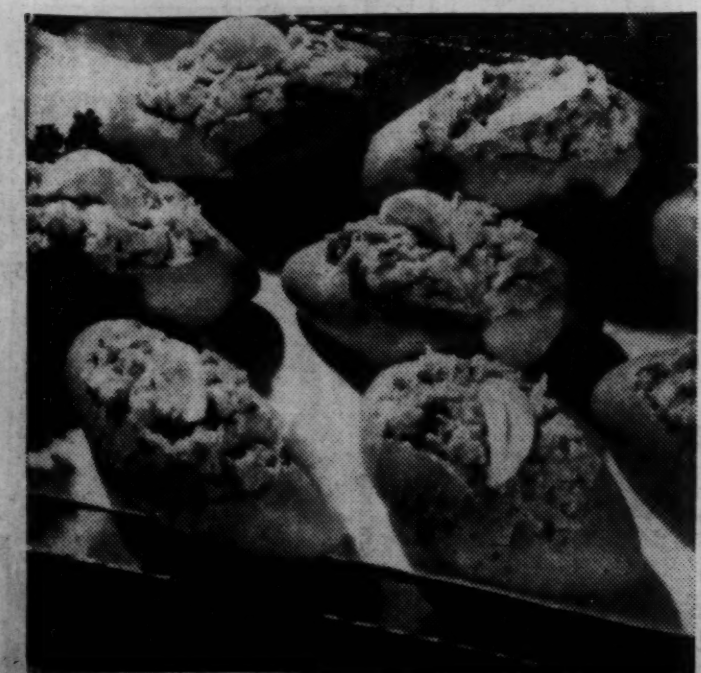

Dear Miss Saver:

When the holidays bring the children rushing home from school, hungry, gay, dashing here and there in the fashion of youth, I find I must be a bountiful provider for hungry appetites. I serve this salad generously from a big glass bowl:

One head of lettuce, chopped; two cups diced apples, one cup raisins, one small can of pineapple, diced; 16 marshmallows, diced; one cup peanuts; one-fourth cup mayonnaise. Mix ingredients lightly but well.

The children were anxious to decorate, so I let them. They were very successful. They got two branches, which were shaped well to resemble trees. They cooked a paste of flour and water. Then, with the paste, they painted the leafless trees and sprinkled them with artificial snow. The snow stuck well in the paste. The trees were then planted in small tins of dirt to keep them from toppling. Icicles of blue and silver, and blue balls fairly covered the trees. A tree was placed at each end of the mantel and the tins were completely concealed with a snow scene of cotton and artificial snow. White reindeer, from the five and ten, gave the last touch. The scene is so pleasing that the children have promised a similar scene for the table.

Very sincerely,
MRS. EDITH WALKER.

Ideas From a Cook's Notebook

Select a whole or half a fresh ham or a boned fresh shoulder of pork, depending on the number of people you plan to serve. A whole fresh ham will weigh anywhere from about 6 to 9 or 10 pounds; a shoulder about 4 pounds. Have the ham or shoulder boned so that stuffing may be used and have the outside rind scored or cut in small squares to make carving easier. Make the stuffing by mixing together 2 cups soft, fine stale bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, the grated rind and juice of 1 lemon, 1 tart apple peeled and chopped fine, 1 teaspoon mixed poultry seasoning and enough hot water to just barely moisten. Stuff the cavity in the meat with the mixture and tie securely. Place the meat, rind up, in a roasting pan, sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour and bake in a hot oven—450 degrees—for 30 minutes. Then baste with 1 cup cider, grapejuice, pineapple juice or plain water, cover the pan, reduce the heat to a very moderate temperature and continue baking, allowing 30 minutes for each pound of meat. Pork must be thoroughly cooked and if a comparatively low temperature is used the meat will be very tender. In serving, use a sharp knife and cut down in thin slices through the crisp brown rind, or crackling and fat.

Make caramel syrup and keep on hand for custards, coloring, cake flavoring, etc. Put 1 cup granulated sugar in a small pan and stir constantly over a slow fire until the sugar is melted, brown and free from lumps. Be careful not to scorch it. When the sugar is melted stir in 1 cup boiling water (be careful of sputtering) and cook again for 5 minutes or until the syrup is smooth. Cool and pour into a jar to use as needed. For caramel custard, pour two or three tablespoons of the syrup in the bottom of the mold; use a teaspoonful to color gravies (it is not sweet); add 2 or 3 tablespoons to a cake batter to give a caramel flavor.

Vegetable Souffle

- 1 tablespoon minced onion
- 1 tablespoon finely cut green pepper
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1-2 cup cooked peas
- 1-2 cup cooked diced carrots
- 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1-3 teaspoon pepper
- 1-2 cup finely cut celery
- 1 cup milk
- 3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored
- 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Cook onion and green pepper in butter until tender but not browned; add peas and carrots. Combine tapioca, salt, pepper, celery and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 8 to 10 minutes after water boils again stirring frequently. Add vegetables. Cool slightly while beating eggs. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold into egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish. Place in pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 to 60 minutes, or until souffle is firm. Serve with crisp bacon, if desired. Serves 6.

Lumpy sauces sometimes can be made smooth by beating them with an egg beater; a custard that has just begun to curdle or separate can sometimes be "brought back" by the same method. Such mixtures are never as thick as they would otherwise have been, but are perfectly usable.

Baked Fish With Mustard Sauce.

- 1 1-2 lbs. fillet of haddock
- 3-4 teaspoon salt
- 1-8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1-2 cup dried bread crumbs

Cut fillets in six servings and season lightly with salt and pepper. Lay in shallow, well-greased baking pan. Make sauce of 1 tablespoon butter, flour, water, lemon juice and mustard, stirring constantly until thickened (about 3 minutes). Pour over the fish. Add remaining tablespoon butter to bread crumbs and sprinkle over fish. Bake about 20 minutes in moderately hot oven 400 degrees F.

Toasted bread sticks are fine with soup or salad. To make them, cut stale slices of bread into fingers, or sticks half an inch wide and about 1-2 inch thick. Beat 1 egg and mix with 2 tablespoons milk. Dip the bread sticks in this and then roll them in very fine bread crumbs. Place on a shallow pan and bake in a very hot oven—300 degrees—until crisp and brown, or saute in hot butter until brown. If fried, drain on soft paper before serving. In any case, serve hot.

"MASCOT"—Chuck Wise, of Decatur, "mascot" of Veterans' hospital, who will take part in the Christmas festivities to start December 17 and continue through the holidays.

War Veterans To Celebrate Yule Season

First of Programs at Hospital 48 Will Be Held Tuesday.

Celebration of the Christmas season of 1940 by World War Veterans at Hospital No. 48 will begin next Tuesday evening, and will wind up with a party celebrating the departure of 1940 on the night of December 31.

Two of the various veterans' organizations, the Betty Harrison Jones and Morton T. Nicholls chapters of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, will inaugurate the pre-Christmas holiday season. A program under the direction of Albert W. Leake, state hospital chairman of the Georgia department of the disabled veterans' organization, and Hargrove, a national officer.

Headlining the vaudeville program Tuesday evening will be Chuck Wise, of Decatur, official "mascot" of the veterans at Hospital No. 48, who was "adopted" by the patients there several years ago. He will be supported by Performers Helen O'Leary, Charlotte Bishman and the Edmondson twins in novelty acts and black-face comedians, Pace and Kitchen.

The Salvation Army also will play a prominent part with a religious ceremony under the direction of Captain Mildred Mockabee, while other service organizations and their auxiliaries will provide and participate in a varied entertainment program every day and evening throughout the entire Christmas season.

LOUISVILLE, Ga., Dec. 12.—Perhaps for the first time in its long history, the old slave market on Broad street here is gaily decked with Christmas lights. The building's history stretches across nearly two centuries. The market, said to be the only one now in existence, was built in 1758, according to best authorities available.

NOTED SURGEON — Dr. Frank Howard Lahey, president-elect of the American Medical Association, who will give the Floyd Wilcox McRae memorial lecture Monday night at Crawford W. Long hospital.

Lahey, Noted Surgeon, Will Speak Monday

Leader To Deliver Floyd Wilcox McRae Memorial Lecture.

The annual Floyd Wilcox McRae memorial lecture will be given at 8 o'clock Monday night by Dr. Frank Howard Lahey, president-elect of the American Medical Association. The scene will be the nurses' home of Crawford W. Long Memorial hospital, and Dr. Lahey's subject will be "The Management of Gastric, Duodenal and Jejunal Lesions." All members of the Fulton County Medical Society and the medical profession and this section are invited.

A renowned surgeon, Dr. Lahey has held such posts as professor of surgery at Tufts Medical school, professor of clinical surgery at Harvard Medical school, surgeon in chief at N. E. Deaconess and N. E. Baptist hospitals, director of surgery and founder of the Lahey clinic, Boston. He served as major in the medical corps during the World War, is a regent of International College of Surgeons in Geneva, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, and a member of the American and International Surgeons' Association, American Association for Study of Goitre, and member of the council on medical education and hospitals of the American Medical Association.

Women's Group Helps Trainees

The American Association of University Women in Washington has called upon its members to help meet recreational needs of trainees in army camps.

University women, Dr. Kathryn McHale, general director of the A. A. U. W., said, could make their homes available for off-duty trainees to meet their friends and relatives.

In a letter to all A. A. U. W. branches near army camps Dr.

McHale advised members: "First, to approach the camp commander and offer the co-operation of the A. A. U. W. branch and learn where co-operation is desired. "Second, if the camp commander approves, to initiate the organization of a local civilian committee which would furnish an opportunity for citizens to participate in the defense program and serve as the responsible clearing house for the community's efforts; or if an official defense committee has already been appointed by your mayor or county officials, you may want to develop your program in co-operation with the official group."

19 Still Await Transfer Order At Boys' Farm
Must Be Sent to Milledgeville Before Closing of Institution.
Nineteen inmates of the white youth's industrial farm, near Hapeville, must be transferred to Milledgeville before the institution can be closed in accordance with plans made early last summer, Ira Dodd, superintendent, said yesterday.
Although plans were made for transfer of the boys to Milledgeville last July, the work has not yet been completed, and Dodd says he has received no transfer order.
He is standing by for the order, which will permit him to close the institution and resume his duties as superintendent of transportation for the Fulton county school system.
No new prisoners have been assigned to the farm for the three or four months, and many paroles have been granted, Dodd said, but the 19 are still an unsolved problem.
The lack of new assignments and the granting of paroles, together with the end of the terms of several boys, have reduced the population of the prison from its maximum, 85, to the present 19.

Glover Witness Faces Perjury Charge Here
W. A. Turner Indicted by Federal Grand Jury.
W. A. Turner, yard man at the Miller county convict camp and a government witness in the trial of J. G. "Bugs" Glover, who was convicted last week of mail fraud charges, was charged with perjury in a federal grand jury indictment returned here yesterday in federal district court.
The indictment charges Turner perjured himself when he answered "no" to the question, "You didn't tell Mr. Hays or Mr. Geer to make the deed to Mr. Glover?"
Later Hays (B. C. Hays, Colquitt attorney), testified during the trial that Turner told him to deed the property to Glover. The property in question was several acres which was being transferred from Miller county to the convict camp and on which a warden's house was later erected.
Glover was convicted on all 20 counts of an indictment which dealt with the construction of warden's houses on land owned by the defendant.
Turner's bond was set at $500.

YULE "MONEY" TREE.
CARROLLTON, Ga., Dec. 12.—A "money" Christmas tree that will be decorated with currency contributed by friends and members of the Tabernacle Baptist church will benefit that institution's building program December 22, the pastor announced today.
Each man gave a scientific discussion of some phase of children's diseases in which he has specialized. Then the entire group participated in a round-table debate session.
Dr. Allen H. Bunce, president-elect of the Medical Association of Georgia; Dr. C. W. Roberts, president of the Fifth District Medical Society, and Dr. Charles E. Rushin, president of the Fulton County Medical Society, participated in the evening program, as did Dr. Mercer Blanchard, of Columbus, past president of the Georgia Pediatric Society.

CAA Program Includes Work at Candler and Camp Gordon.
More than $1,000,000 in improvements to Candler Field and Camp Gordon airports will result from a $40,000,000 program announced yesterday in Washington, to be conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. Four other Georgia cities received $424,000. A $250,000 grant for Candler Field will enable somewhat more than $800,000 of work to be done, through co-operation with the Works Progress Administration, while $150,000 given the Camp Gordon port will bring a total of $291,000 in improvements by the same means.
Improve Runways.
Candler Field will have a new 4,200-foot north-south runway, extension of the east-west runway to 4,800 feet, a vast paving program which will create parallel runways, permitting simultaneous take-offs and landings, thus adding greatly to the facilities, and will receive new lighting and radio installations. The city and county recently purchased 140 acres for the extensions.
Camp Gordon's port will receive a 1,000-foot addition to the 2,000-foot northwest-southeast landing strip now being graded; three paved runways, 150 feet wide and, respectively, 3,900 feet, 3,500 feet and 3,200 feet long; also taxi strips and aprons and contact and basic lighting systems.
Savannah Aided.
The policy as announced in Washington is limited to "development of actual landing facilities."
Savannah received $88,000 to widen and extend two runways of the municipal airport and $184,000 to clear, grub, drain and grade a new all-way No. 3 landing field at its second municipal airport.
Albany was given $138,000 to pave three runways at its municipal airport and install field marking.
Augusta was allotted $52,000 to complete grading the field and building area at the municipal airport to install contact lights.
Americus drew $50,000 to pave a third runway to Southern Field.

Garden Club Sponsors Cordele Lighting Contest
CORDELE, Ga., Dec. 12.—The Cordele Garden club again will sponsor a city-wide Christmas decoration program this year, Mrs. J. B. Downs, club president, has announced.
Prizes will be awarded in the various classification of decorations including outdoor living trees, arches, doorways and window decorations in homes, as well as for business houses.
The downtown section of Cordele is brilliantly lighted with myriad colored electric lights along sidewalks and overhead on the main streets.

Illinois Farm Leader Heads National Group
NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.—(P) J. H. Lloyd, director of agriculture of Illinois, today was elected president of the National Association of Commissioners, Secretaries and Directors of Agriculture, concluding its 23d annual convention here.
The convention in final business adopted resolutions opposing a national sales tax, which they said should be confined to state and local levies. Gasoline taxes for other than highway purposes also were opposed.
J. Roy Jones, commissioner of agriculture of South Carolina, was elected first vice president and Jewel Mays, commissioner of agriculture of Missouri, secretary-treasurer.

River Water Pollutes Supply in Rochester
ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 12.—(P) — Pollution of Rochester's water supply brought a warning today to residents to boil all water used for drinking purposes.
Dr. Paul A. Lembcke, state district health officer, said the supply was polluted last night when water from the Genesee river was "accidentally permitted to enter a main without being chlorinated or filtered."
The Rochester Telephone Corporation pressed into service 300 extra operators to notify its 95,000 subscribers to boil all water "until further notice."

DODGE CONVERTIBLE COUPE—The newest addition to the 1941 list of Dodge luxury liners is shown. It has an electrically operated top and four disappearing windows among other distinctive features.

Dodge To Add A Convertible Coupe to Line

Production Started on New Model With Unusual Features.

Production has begun on a convertible coupe by the Dodge division of Chrysler Motor Company—adding another custom model to its Luxury Liners.

The new model is described as of unusual design in a number of respects. It has, in addition to the conventional windows disappearing into the doors, two rear windows disappearing into the sides of the body.

Provision of the two extra windows gives the convertible coupe the wide range of vision ordinarily found in sedan and brougham body types.

With all windows raised and the safety glass ventilator wings closed, the occupants are glass-enclosed in front and at the sides, protected from wind and dust yet enjoying the unobstructed view and the open-air freedom that make this type of car the preference of many motorists.

Electric motors operate the collapsible top, rising into its protecting position or folding back and lowering into place as the driver manipulates a control button on the instrument panel.

Easy access to the rear seats is through wide doors, past tilting front seat backs.

The main chassis features are a 119 1-2-inch wheelbase and the power plant. The body structure is marked by a luxurious leather-upholstered interior.

Albany's Unfortunates Will Be Remembered

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
ALBANY, Ga., Dec. 12.—The unfortunate of Albany will be well remembered at Christmas if material assistance all are carried out.

Chief D. W. Brosnan, of Albany's fire department, finds time each year to carry on the "Empty Stocking Fund" launched here many years ago by the late Walter Mallard, city commissioner.

Through this fund, several thousand dollars are raised each year to care for children Santa Claus might otherwise miss.

Other organizations are gathering used clothing, books and other serviceable gifts to be distributed at Christmas.

Albany 'Tree of Light' Illuminated for Yule

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
ALBANY, Ga., Dec. 12.—Christmas lights have been turned on over Albany's streets and the "tree of light" with its hundreds of multi-colored bulbs has been lighted on the city auditorium lawn.

Local merchants have had a good fall already and many of them have expressed the opinion that Christmas business will be the best in years. Farmers appear to have had a good year and to have more spending money than usual, while construction pay rolls here, the largest in history, have released large volume of extra money for the channels of trade.

NEW Compound Used For Artificial Noses

The newest development in plastic surgery is the discovery of a rubber compound for the making of artificial ears and noses which Dr. Arthur H. Bulbulian, Rochester, Minn., calls the most satisfactory material yet devised.

The liquid compound is put into a suitable mold to dry in the air. It resembles the human ear or nose so closely that it is "not readily noticed unless it is examined carefully," Dr. Bulbulian said. It is a flexible material which may be dyed to the natural skin color.

Luxurious Gifts

Such things as fragrant bath powders and colognes, pretty gift box sets of make-up, dainty sachets and scented coathangers, lovely perfumes in glamorous bottles or in novel form, manicuring sets complete in every detail, compacts and lipsticks are a few of the items which stopped pretty Miss Barbara Green, 811 Peachtree street, when she was shopping for Christmas.

Gifts of Cosmetics Please The Women on Your List

By Winifred Ware.

Women love luxurious things, so you won't go wrong if you make your gift selections from the dazzling packages on the cosmetic counters. For every feminine name on your list, you can find an appropriate gift. There are so many nice little toiletries that a woman may consider too much of a luxury to buy for herself, but she'll be pleased to receive gifts of this sort.

And here again, are some suggestions that may help you with your list. A beautifully shaped box in silver holds the most delightfully fragrant contents—a large bottle of talcum powder, a box of face powder which will last for quite a while, a rouge, and best of all, a bottle of one of your favorite perfumes. The price will astonish you—all this, for $2.95. If it's sweet scented sachets you know she will like, we've found just the thing. A box of four sachets—or a box of two if you prefer—in blue and white and peach and white satin. You can pick your favorite fragrance, for the sachets come in several odors. The box of four may be bought for $3.50. And here's something different along the same line. A coat hanger covered in peach or white satin with a white lilac scent. These are designed to keep clothes fresh and dainty. (Something for the woman who has everything.)

Of perfumes, there are many from which to choose. This time we decided upon a French perfume, whose odor is captivating and lasting. The bottle itself is decorative and the size in the picture $10.

Another perfume, known to many, comes in the novel form of a lapel pin. The pin is a cunning little man in gold, who holds a tiny bottle of this perfume, and in the particular gift package we saw, there were two refills included. Pin and two refills for $7.50.

Compacts are always acceptable gifts, and one with an attached lipstick is doubly appreciated. Our choice was a gold case and lipstick put out by one of your favorite beauticians. It's flat and convenient for carrying in the pocket-book. The price, $3.50.

For milady's bath we chose a simple but pretty box containing a large box of bath powder and bottle of cologne. The box you get for $2.00 and she'll be pleased with the delicate fragrance.

If there's any more information you want about these items, or you'd like the names and the stores where they may be bought, call Winifred Ware at WA. 6565.

Study Art In Home Course

Readers Agree With Medicine Theory

By Dr. William Brady.

Many correspondents, commenting on the fact that little medicine is suggested in this column, tell me that they, too, think people take too much medicine and then explain that they have found that if one eats the right kind of food and pays attention to elimination he generally keeps pretty well.

If it were only to carp I'd let it pass, but for health's sake I must take issue with the latter part of the program. By paying attention to elimination, I take it, these correspondents means keeping on hand physic of some kind and taking some of it whenever they think elimination is not what it should be.

In the first place, elimination is not the word for it. Defecation is the word; the waste matter expelled by defecation consists chiefly of food residues and water and enormous numbers of harmless bacteria and small traces of substances that were eliminated or excreted hours ago.

In the next place, it is far better as a rule of health or hygiene to pay no attention at all to defecation other than to heed the call when it comes.

There may be indications for laxatives or cathartics in the absence of a physician but, honestly, I can't think of one offhand. Certainly, there is no sane reason or excuse for plying the alimentary tract with physic of any kind as a regular habit or even as a part of the treatment of a minor illness or a threatened illness.

This is not just crazy theory. I prescribed and administered plenty of cathartics in my early years of practice. Then I broke the habit and thereafter patients got along as well or a little better without the constant nagging. I used to think an occasional dose of this or that laxative advisable and took it myself. But I broke that habit, too, and in the past 20 years I have taken nothing of the sort. I have found that the less you take of such medicine the less you imagine you need it.

After I had been worrying along for five or 10 years without physic I wrote a book—or, anyway, a booklet about it. The booklet has only 36 pages, but a whole of a title, to wit, "Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene"; for copy in close 10 cents and 1-cent stamped envelope bearing your address.

People who resort to physic habitually or frequently must remember they not only interfere with digestive processes which are essential for health but in many instances suffer injurious by-effects from the drugs in the medicine.

My advice is don't pay attention to "elimination"—now that you know it isn't elimination it ought to be easier for you to keep your mind off it. Instead, you might pay more attention to your breathing—now, there's a function which is probably susceptible of considerable improvement, if you haven't yet learned how to breathe.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Hives.

Boy, 14 years old, suffers much from hives. He is on a diet but gets no relief. (B. W. N.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for monograph on "Hives."

Oculist Survived Guillotine.

I expect to take post-graduate instruction in otiaryngology in

New York this winter. It would be a favor if you will advise where I may get instruction in electro-coagulation of tonsils. I still remember the hemorrhage and pain I suffered when mine were equilibrated 15 years ago. (—, M. D.)

Answer—I am mailing you an answer, Doctor. Even if some victims survive without suffering such distress, I can't for the life of me understand why an intelligent person should choose the old Spanish custom if there is a physician within reach who is skilled in diathermy extirpation.

MY DAY: Helen Keller Appeals for Blind

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Wednesday.—We held a meeting yesterday of the Committee for National Achievement Award of the Chi Omega. In the afternoon, I had a small tea for various people who have come to Washington for one reason or another, and whom I had not had an opportunity to see.

In the evening, I attended the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra concert, which was, as always, refreshing to the soul. After that, I took the night train to New York City, so that I might have a full day here. My first official appearance will be at the sale for the blind at 11 o'clock this morning.

While I am talking about the sale for the blind, I might mention an appeal which has come to me from Helen Keller on behalf of the American Rescue Ship Committee. This ship is to bring refugees from Lisbon, Portugal, to various safe ports on this side of the ocean.

More directly in line with her work for the blind is a second appeal from Miss Keller, asking for help for the institution for the Chinese blind. They are trying to reoccupy their school in Shanghai, which was closed because their workshop was wrecked by war conditions. If you can send something through Miss Keller, she will be grateful for a contribution to either or both of these interests.

I have just received a notice about the Christmas cards being sold by Parents' Magazine. Eighty-five per cent of the cost of these cards goes into a fund for needy children, sponsored by the magazine. This fund distributes the money thus raised to charitable organizations throughout the country and renders outstanding service to children in need.

This is a way in which you can buy something almost all of us need and, at the same time, do something for unfortunate little children at this time of the year, when they should be uppermost in our minds. Christmas is the feast for little children, instituted because of the birth of a Little Child many years ago.

More in sorrow than in anger, someone called to my attention the fact that I had said a great deal about a book called "Happy Days in Czechoslovakia," but had never mentioned another book called "Jenik and Marenka," by Zdena Trinka. I hastened to acquire the book and I hope that many other people will do likewise, for it is delightful reading.

I think children will enjoy it greatly. The illustrations are not quite as attractive or as distinctive as are those done by Mr. Yurka Bures in the other book, but I think you will like the one right at the beginning of a little girl feeding the ducklings. Many of the other illustrations have charm, even though they seem a less vital part of the book than those done by Mr. Bures in the other Czechoslovakian book.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Mother: "I'll be in the other room, making the beds. When you are all ready for school, call me because I love to go to the door with you and see you off."

Mother: "Don't forget your book, Jean. Here's a clean handkerchief, Jack. Remember it's music lesson day, Jean. Have you cleaned your teeth, Jack?"

If mother cannot resist taking children's responsibilities for them, it is advisable for her to take herself away from the scene of temptation.

Has Merle Oberon Sense of Humor?

By Sheilah Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 12.—Garbo's picture "Ninotchka" forfeited one million dollars because of the no-foreign market situation. This information is supplied by Ernst Lubitsch on the set of his current picture "That Uncertain Feeling." Lubitsch is trying to do for Merle Oberon in this picture what he did for Garbo in "Ninotchka." He is unearthing her sense of humor.

The one and only time that Merle went in for comedy (not counting her early musical with Maurice Chevalier) was in "The Cowboy and the Lady." She was dunked in a pool by Gary Cooper. But even this hilarious happening did not make the picture a comedy—or anything else. But Lubitsch assures me that we will be just as surprised at Merle's new flare for comedy as at Garbo's.

"She (Merle) has a fine sense of timing," he says, "and that is the most important part of comedy." Lubitsch yields the secret of his comedy tactics. "I make them play the part with absolute seriousness and sincerity. It's the situation that has to be funny." According to Lubitsch, Jack Oakie is the best comedian in Hollywood. "What couldn't I do with him!" he exclaims. He would like to bring Maurice Chevalier back to this country. (Chevalier scored his success in Hollywood under the Lubitsch banner.) "But the last I heard of him he was ill in Cannes."

Lubitsch concludes by assuring me that he does not rely on risqué situations for the success of his films. "My pictures are not naughty. They are adult." Whatever they are, I like 'em—always, excepting "Angel," of course!

A brief glimpse on the "Ziegfeld Girl" set finds Lana Turner acting drunk as a monkey and holding on for dear life to the arm of a chair. She has just been slapped on the face by Dan Dailey, junior, who is a prize-fighter in the film—to prove it he has a beautiful cauliflower ear.

Well, anyway, Lana is drunk, and she is supposed to walk down a flight of stairs. "Come on, you glorious girl," she says aloud. "Stairs are your specialty. Shoulders back, and don't forget to smile." Then she sinks—and sinks and sinks. Not because she's drunk but because the stairs are not there. They're on another set—and that part of the scene will be taken another day. Lana is wearing a golden gown designed by Adrian. It covers her neck, throat, arms and reaches to her heels. And yet contrives to be the most revealing gown of this or any other season.

The current game on the "Road to Rio" set is to stop Carmen Miranda and ask her, "Say some dialogue from the picture." Where-lingo that is supposed to be American, and then smiles at you and says, "Okay?" The rest of her vocabulary is "Ameesh!" for Don Ameche; "Alece!" for Alice Faye; and "good shot!" for anything and everything.

Parents And Couple Disagree

By Caroline Chaffield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am nineteen and I've been engaged for a year. My parents were once happy over it and said they would do everything in their power to help us. However, my fiancé is independent by nature and we believe we can get along without help, which is what we want. His particular type of work is rather slack in winter season, but he does have jobs to piece out in this time. I have a grand position in a doctor's office and together we would have enough to live on.

My fiancé is in the draft and he is sure when he will be called. Even if he were called now I could live at home and support myself until he returned. After everything seemed settled my parents up and say we should wait a year. We don't want to wait and we think they are unreasonable and we are putting it up to you. Please straighten us out.

ANSWER:—You haven't tried to get your parents' viewpoint yet. You should remember they have your good will at heart and are thinking of your ultimate happiness as well as your present happiness.

First of all, you should realize that people who put up the cash for any investment should have a say-so as to how, when, and in what amount the investment shall be made. While you say you are not asking help, you are planning to make your home with them after marriage and probably expecting to live there without cost to yourself.

Second, with your combined earnings you and the fiancé think you can pay expenses, provided he can find the odd jobs, etc., and etc. Neither of you has any savings to take care of emergencies which may arise. They come up after marriage like thunder showers, swiftly and without warning. Your parents would have to underwrite these contingencies.

There are a lot of feminine heartaches bound up in the draft: mother's and girl friend's tears are flowing; but when the big baby boys are all settled in camps and the letters flow back and forth tears will be dried and bright plans made for the reunions. And when Johnny comes marching home, straighter, stronger, harder, handsomer than ever, won't everybody be proud and happy?

Make-Up Tricks Bring Out Good Points for Picture

By Ida Jean Kain.

So you're going to have your picture taken for Christmas! But don't you wish you could commandeer the talents of a make-up genius who knows just how to bring out your good points and to play down your bad ones?

That's what I thought! And with that in mind, I have covered the tricks of make-up as fully as possible with Eddie Senz. He is the man who keeps so many pretty faces from landing on the cutting-room floor in New York—the screen's springboard to Hollywood—and who fixes the faces of Broadway stars for their first nights.

Mr. Senz says by all means wear one of those paste or cream foundations on sale at all department, drug and 10-cent stores. But don't buy too heavy a cream, or apply it too heavily. You don't want an opaque mask! The grain of your skin should show. The sun-tan shades are best and you can use a darker shade to minimize an area that is too wide. For example, with a pronounced, wide jawline, start the darker paste, powder or rouge up near the temples and slant it down toward the chin, blending the two shades expertly so there will be no line of demarcation.

And, by the way, never apply rouge in a round spot on the cheeks! If you do, it will show up as a round spot. If used at all, rouge should be applied with an eye to shading the features. Mr. Senz says, very much the same way a darker powder or foundation cream would be used.

And don't, please, make up your mouth too small for a large face! Keep the face in proportion with a generous mouth and good eyebrows. For some reason, most women like to make their mouths up small. Usually this is not becoming. Of course, you may have a mouth that is too large. In that case, you can shade a little poetic line and apply the lip rouge slightly within the natural line.

The tendency with the eyebrows, Mr. Senz observes, seems to be to start the line with a sharp stroke just over the corner of the eye. This is very wrong! Especially with a nose that is long and thin—it pulls the face together. The correct technique for most faces is to start the eyebrow slightly back with a very faint stroke, shading it deeper at the center and tapering off with a faint elongating line. The eyes may be made to appear larger by touching the corners with a very fine pencil and making the line so subtly that it isn't noticeable. Eye shadow, started about the center of the upper lid and worked up and out toward the eyebrow, will enhance the eyes—provided it's used with the expert touch. The same is true of mascara.

You should have your hair done the day before—never the same day—you visit the photographer, and you should insist on a style that is simple and natural. If the lower jaw is too wide, the hair should not end with the jawline and bush out at the sides. The idea seems to be this: When the face is wide at one point, fluff out the hair at another point to bring it into better proportion. With a long face, the haircut is difficult—it can't be too long or too short. You would have to try it out, with your other features in mind.

For your figure's sake, wear neutral colors. Beige and gray are safe. If you are short and curvy, don't wear jet black, tweedy suits, horizontal lines, or shiny belts! And don't wear a white collar under a double chin—the color acts as a reflector and highlights the feature.

Even with a perfect figure, brassiere and girdle are to be recommended for full-length pictures—the movie starlets wear 'em!

Finally, if you're tired, postpone your appointment until you are well rested—you photograph years older when you are worn out.

Even though you're not having any pictures taken, you can profit from this advice by a high priced beauty consultant. Think it over—then act.

A Pert Ruffled Basque Frock

By Lillian Mae.

Your little girl will resemble her favorite story-book heroine in this pert frock by Lillian Mae, pattern 4529. Made in blithe basque style, the two-piece bias skirt flares for style and action. That pointed front waist-seam and the trim panelled bodice are most becoming; the sleeves are long and full or short and puffed. Enchanting pinafore touches are added by gay ruffles and a perky bow-tying sash. Another version of this pattern shows a contrast of ruffles, perhaps with a matching skirt. The optional collar might be in contrast, too. If you want a more tailored frock, make the button-trimmed version without collar or ruffles. Bloomers or panties are included in this adorable style.

Pattern 4529 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, short-sleeve dress, takes 2 1/4 yards 35-inch fabric; long-sleeve dress, 1 1/2 yards 54-inch fabric.

Conflicting trends prevailed in the bond market today.

A group of British Empire bonds rose 2 to 4 points, reflecting enthusiasm over the turn of the war in Egypt, and a selected group of domestic issues made some progress, but there were many losers.

Pact Is Signed By Yugoslavia And Hungary

Lasting Peace and Eternal Friendship Is Pledged.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Hungary and Yugoslavia concluded a pact of "eternal friendship" today.

The agreement, signed here by the foreign ministers of the two countries, read:

"Article 1. Lasting peace and eternal friendship shall exist between the kingdoms of Yugoslavia and Hungary.

"Article 2. The signatories agree to consult with regard to all questions which could concern their mutual interests.

"Article 3. The pact will become effective when the instruments of ratification have been exchanged with Budapest, and this will be done promptly.

A joint communique declared that strengthened relations in political, economic and cultural spheres would "serve the best interests of the two neighbor countries and also the well-being of the Danube basin."

Informed persons said that the conversations had not touched on the revision of frontiers. There were unconfirmed reports that the Bulgarian foreign minister might visit Belgrade soon in a possible Yugoslavian-Bulgarian rapprochement.

Hungary is tied indirectly with the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis; Yugoslavia is not.

Music Club Plans Reception To Honor Mrs. Wayne Wilson

... IN A GESTURE of love and appreciation to the dean of Atlanta music teachers, the Atlanta Music Club will pay homage to Mrs. Wayne Wilson at a reception next Tuesday evening. The reception will follow the Young Artists' program to be presented by the Music Club and will take the form of an elaborate Christmas party held in the ballroom of the Atlanta Woman's Club, with Mrs. Harold Coolidge, president of the Music Club, as official hostess.

It is entirely appropriate that honor be paid Mrs. Wilson, for she is one of Atlanta's most beloved figures, as well as one of the city's most gifted musicians. She has served as an inspiration to southern music lovers for many years and has numbered among her pupils members of the state's most prominent families. Her niece, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Mrs. Blewett Lee, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, the late Mrs. Alex Smith Sr., and Miss Nan Stevens were among those who received their training under her guidance, her more recent pupils including such gifted musicians as Genie Snow, Marion Calhoun Cardwell, Mary Nelson Ream, Frances Arnold Richardson, Margaret Fraser and Mrs. Walter Colquitt.

Born Lennie McCandless, Mrs. Wilson demonstrated her extraordinary musical talent at the early age of five. Her father, it seems, engaged a very distinguished German lady, Madame Bews, to teach his sons and daughters music.

The family then lived in Camden, S. C., and a fine Steinway piano was sent down from New York for this purpose. Mrs. Wilson recalls that her first public appearance was as a soloist at a concert given for the Boykin Legion when she was six. Then the War Between the States broke out, and her teacher was drowned en route to Germany aboard a blockade runner.

Her musical career was interrupted, but only for a short time. She soon received a scholarship from Archbishop Kendrick, of Missouri, awarded to the most talented girl musician in South Carolina. At 14 she entered Visitation Convent in St. Louis, where she attended school for two years, receiving training in both voice and piano, and winning first prizes in both fields. Mrs. Wilson's beautiful and well-trained voice, as well as her inspired touch on the piano, has thrilled innumerable audiences throughout the years.

When she moved with her parents to Atlanta, she became a member of the Beethoven Society and was asked to compete in a contest in Macon, where she won first prize in both piano and voice. She opened her first music class in 1870, and, though she married in 1878, she continued to teach until she moved with her husband to Memphis. Later she went abroad to study voice in Florence, Italy. Piano, however, was her "first love," and it was not long before she redoubled her efforts to perfect herself as a master of the keys. Subsequently she studied under the great masters in Vienna, Paris and Berlin. The most famous of these teachers, perhaps, was the noted Leschetitzky of Vienna, to whom she later took Mrs. Walter Colquitt, one of her most gifted pupils, for lessons.

The teacher who left the most marked impression upon Mrs. Wilson, however, was Ethel Newcomb, Debussy's noted and favorite pupil. Of this renowned musician, she says: "Ethel Newcomb has done more for me than Leschetitzky or any other. She is my teacher and beloved friend."

No tribute that Atlanta music-lovers can pay Mrs. Wilson is too great, for the musical development of the city has felt her influence, perhaps, more than that of any other—an influence that pointed always to the highest and noblest pinnacle!

Myrtle V. Stone Becomes Bride Of J. H. Christian

Interest centers in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Stone of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Myrtle Virginia Stone, to John H. Christian Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Christian, of East Point. The ceremony was solemnized at the Peachtree Road Presbyterian church on December 6 at 8:15 o'clock, with Rev. E. T. Wilson officiating.

Prior to and during the ceremony a program of music was presented by Mrs. R. T. Wilkes, George Wilkes and Miss Mary Frances Simmons.

Miss Clara Jones, maid of honor, was gowned in aquamarine crepe trimmed with brown. Brown accessories and a spray of Talisman roses completed her costume.

Mrs. George Wright, of Anniston, Ala., was matron of honor and the best man was Hugh Thompson, of East Point. Gene Harris, of East Point, was usher.

The lovely bride was gowned in a soldier blue costume suit with which she wore a matching hat trimmed with a shoulder length veil. A shoulder bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies completed her costume.

Miss Evelyn Harrison Makes Formal Bow At Brilliant Reception and Supper Dance

Amid an enchanting setting of white pine trees accented by nandina berries and red poinsettias suggesting a veritable winter wonderland, Miss Evelyn Harrison was presented to the married contingent of society at a brilliant late afternoon reception yesterday. An elaborate supper-dance last evening, when younger members of the social contingent paid homage to the pretty belle, followed the afternoon affair.

Miss Harrison, fete member of the Debutante Club, received on both occasions with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julian M. Harrison, in the spacious ballroom of the Piedmont Driving Club, which was transformed into a scene of wintry beauty.

The lovely blond debutante chose for her formal presentation a gown of billowy white net fashioned becomingly with short puffed sleeves, and a fishu of filmy net edged with ermine tails. A cluster of similar fur tails graced the V-neckline. She carried a dainty white chiffon muff showered with white orchids and Parma violets, the beautiful flowers having been a gift of her brother, Julian Harrison Jr.

Mrs. Harrison was exquisitely gowned in a model of chalk-white crepe, styled with a draped bodice. The gown was trimmed with emerald and rhinestone clips placed at the neckline and on the short sleeves. A cluster of deep purple orchids adorned her shoulder.

table in the entrance hall was an artistic gilded cornucopia filled with overflowing dried foliage, grapes, lemons, pears, limes and pine burrs. The striking arrangement was designed by Mrs. E. W. Cauthorn, a close friend of Mrs. Harrison. A lane of snowy trees decorated the foyer, while artificial snow men guarded the steps leading to the ballroom. Lighted white trees formed a background for the columns which were enveloped in emerald green metal paper. Clusters of white pine needles and cones graced the tops of the stately columns and bows of laurel roping were strung between the arches.

The buffet tables, overlaid with lustrous white satin covers, featured holly green velvet runners in the center with the velvet motif repeated as a border. The centerpieces formed of clusters of pine cones, nandina berries and red poinsettias were designed in umbrella effect. Branched silver candelabra holding burning white tapers flanked the central arrangements and silver services were placed at either end of the tables.

Assisting the hosts in entertaining in the afternoon were Mesdames Glenn Ryman, Frank Carter, Robert Strickland, Marcus Emmert, Clarence Haverly, Fred Patterson, Edward Cauthorn, Bolling Jones Jr., George Street, Harold Cooledge, W. W. Anderson, R. Clyde Williams, Charles Pottinger, Clement Evans, John Westmoreland, Langdon Quin, Lawrence Willet, Norman Cooledge, Ryland Knight, W. A. Boykin Jr., A. P. Brantley and J. W. Patterson.

Misses Ann and Mary Helen Harrison, sisters of the debutante; Miss Glenn Ryman and Miss Ann Marshall Emmert, received the cards at the door.

Others assisting in the afternoon were Misses Joy O'Brien, Helen Diggs, of Washington, D. C., Ann Crosswell, Mary Jessie Strickland, Marguerite Emmert and members of the Debutante Club.

In the evening at the supper-dance, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ryman, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. McDuffie, Mr. and Mrs. Clem Powers, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Paden, Mr. and Mrs.

MRS. PRESTON S. ARKWRIGHT.

Talented Atlanta Women Offer Timely Suggestions

Pinebloom is the name of the Ponce de Leon avenue residence of Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright and Mrs. Glenville Giddings, wherein hospitality is the watchword. These talented women, noted for the beautiful and original decorative effects created for Pinebloom, offer timely suggestions on "Christmas Decorations," which is published in the December issue of Garden Gateways. No name is assigned to the screed, but Mrs. Arkwright and her daughter, Mrs. Glenville Giddings, president of Druid Hills Garden Club, offer timely suggestions.

Mrs. Giddings' first suggestion is almost a command: "Suit the decoration to the home. This is the keynote of all Christmas decoration for the most beautiful decoration can be ruined by being placed in the wrong spot. No matter how small or provincial the home, there is an appropriate decoration for that home."

Mrs. Arkwright and her daughter believe that first impressions are strong, and that the Christmas spirit should be felt upon approaching or entering the house. A spray, a garland or a wreath of evergreen on the doorway can reflect this idea.

Here is their suggestion: "Rhododendron, mountain laurel, magnolia, cuttings from your shrubbery and galax leaves can be used effectively. In making a garland for the door, make use of the principles of flower arrangement and group similar shrubs together—for example with a pine center, group holly on either side, and this can be made effective with a red oilcloth bow, for oilcloth can stand the weather. Another idea which is popular in the east is the use of sleigh bells. Hang your bells against a pine background on the side of the door for friends to ring as they call."

The Christmas tree should be placed in the room where the family assembles. At Pinebloom, the paneled reception hall, a spruce tree blends with evergreen and red berries, and flower arrangements are carried out in the use of evergreens placed in containers. A rosette made of wide red ribbon with streamers may adorn the vase of evergreens, to create a center of interest and featured as a large blossom.

Red and silver ornaments, balls of varying shapes and sizes, silver angels and Santa Claus can be used to decorate the Christmas tree in the room where the family foregathers. The strings of lights should be put on first, the tinsel should form the background for the decorations, but must not bind the ornaments. Red candles are most appropriate for this room.

In a room with a blue background one might enjoy using silver and white. Where the background is peach, gold and green are most effective. In a green dining room, all silver decorations are stunning.

"Many people like to have painted Christmas trees, and Mrs. Giddings gives excellent instructions for this. First place the tree on a firm standard, upright, and set it in a place where spraying will not matter, and of course get a spray gun which will spray paint. A flit gun can be used for small pieces, but a gardener's spray gun should be used for anything as large as trees. Use first a coat of flat paint and allow it to dry thoroughly. If it is white or silver enough, then one coat of finishing enamel is enough. The paint frequently has to be thinned with turpentine to go through the spray. One of the prettiest shrubs to paint is southern smilax, which may be used to drape doorways or mantels. Magnolia and English laurel are also most effective and when painted white, silver or gold, have a classic beauty.

Painted evergreens blend with a painted tree, a silver tree calls for blue ornaments, as well as ornaments with blue accents for side arrangements. Silver wreaths may be used with blue ribbon to give the desired effect. Red lights and red balls are effective on a white tree, which suggests a snow scene. Evergreens may be painted white to be used with sprays of red berries, red ribbon and red candles, in the opinion of Mrs. Arkwright and Mrs. Giddings.

"In a Colonial home garlands of pine and pine cones are most appropriate, either draped on the mantel, or on the mantel shelf, with arrangements of evergreens, pines, magnolias, rhododendrons and mountain laurel. Wherever possible use old-fashioned white candles in this room.

"Any of these Christmas suggestions adapted to your home should prove most effective and give you a beautiful, yet not expensive, Christmas decoration—but remember to suit the decoration to your own home," concludes Mrs. Giddings.

Miss Cohen Weds Irwin Greenbaum

The marriage of Miss Edna Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Cohen, of Claxton, and Irwin Greenbaum, son of M. R. Greenbaum, was solemnized recently at the Congregation Ahavath-Achim. Rabbi Harry Epstein performed the ceremony.

The altar was banked with palms and floor baskets filled with white gladioli and chrysanthemums.

The lovely bride entered with her mother and father by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Sam Goldstein. She was gown in a model of aquamarine crepe trimmed with brown velvet bows at the neckline. Her hat of brown feathers was trimmed with a shoulder-length veil and she wore brown accessories and a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the rectory of the synagogue. The bride's table was centered with a tiered wedding cake and green crystal vases holding white snapdragons and red roses flanked the central decoration.

Mrs. Cohen was gown in a model of black crepe studded with gold beads. Black accessories and a spray of gardenias completed her costume.

Mr. Greenbaum and his bride left for a wedding trip to New York, and they are now residing at 949 Courtney drive.

Miss Ham Becomes Bride Of Hilton Sims Hutchinson

VALDOSTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—The marriage of Miss Anna Frances Ham, of this city, to Hilton Sims Hutchinson, of Tifton, was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the First Methodist church of this city. Rev. Shuler Peele, of Winter Garden, Fla., a cousin of the bride, performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends. Before the ceremony, James Dasher, organist, with Harris

Dukes as soloist, presented a program of wedding music. As the guests assembled, Mr. Dasher played "Liebestraum" and "Evening Star" and Mr. Dukes sang "All for You" and "Because."

The bride was given in marriage by her father, G. C. Ham. She wore a bridal gown of white satin, designed on princess lines. The sweetheart neckline was outlined by a wide band of white sequins and seed pearls. The bishop sleeves were puffed at the top, fitting tight below the elbow. The skirt was full and her veil featured a circular tier of hip length and a face veil, and it was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a fan-shaped bouquet of valley lilies and illusion centered with a deep purple orchid and showered with valley lilies.

Miss Ruth Pollock, of Quitman, maid of honor, wore a gown of magnetic blue chiffon velvet made with sweetheart neckline, short puffed sleeves and a draped bodice. The floor-length skirt was gored with back fullness, and she wore a picture hat of matching velvet and carried a muf of the same material. The muf held an arrangement of pink spectrum carnations, snapdragons and gerbera of the same shade, showered with narrow pink ribbon.

The bridesmaids were Miss Lawton Lee and Miss Janie Garrett, of Quitman; Miss Margaret Baker and Mrs. Williams Culpepper, both of Valdosta. These attendants wore gowns of rose chiffon made along the same lines as the gown worn by Miss Pollock. They wore picture hats of matching material, and their muffs were showered with carnations in deep rose, showered with narrow pink ribbon.

Little Diane Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Smith, was the flower girl and her costume of yellow was a replica of those of the bridesmaids. Her muf was filled with rose petals which she spread in the path of the bride.

The groom was attended by Aldine Bosser, of Tifton, as best man, and the ushers were A. J. Whitehurst, 3d, of Thomasville; Lester Rowe, Tom Crodell and Lenox Hutchinson, all of Tifton.

Mrs. G. C. Ham, mother of the bride, wore an afternoon gown of Colonial blue costume velvet, with matching accessories, and her shoulder spray was red roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Frank Smith, of Cartersville, the former Miss Billie Ham, sister of the bride, wore an ensemble of brown, combining a silk dress and wool coat, and her flowers were talisman roses.

After the ceremony, a wedding reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Ham, on College street.

Mrs. Frank Smith, of Cartersville, and Mrs. Maxwell Oliver presided at the silver service. Serving were Mesdames William Permenter, Charlie Joyner, Ray Shirley, of Tifton; Mrs. Shuler Peele, of Winter Garden, Fla.; Mrs. Fred Denton, of Homerville; Mrs. Robert Anderson, of Bristol, Va.; Miss Mildred Lockerman, of Montezuma; Miss Cleo Barber, of Bainbridge.

Others assisting were Mesdames Mack Register, Jon Sineath, R. C. Winter, W. A. Jamison, Miss Jennie Traucht, Mrs. Tom Howell and Mrs. Jack Warlick. Miss Mary Lee Dasher kept the bride's book.

After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson left on a wedding trip, after which they will reside in Tifton. For traveling the bride wore a two-piece ensemble of silk and wool, in cameo beige. Her topcoat was of sheer wool of matching shade. Her hat was the same material as her dress, and she wore orchids.

Alpha Omicron Pi Holds Celebration

The traditional celebration honoring the founders of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority was held last Sunday the same hour that other groups of active and alumnae members were gathered all over the United States and Canada.

Miss Charlotte Granberry and Mrs. John W. McConneil planned the supper and placed four tall red candles at intervals down the length of the table, one for each founder, and arranged red roses in bubble bowls, which were placed between the candles.

Mrs. Claude C. Bell, president of the Atlanta chapter, read a poem by Mrs. George S. Perry, of New York city. Mrs. Perry, Jessie Wallace Hughan and Elizabeth Heywood Wyman, the three living founders, were meeting with the New York group. Mrs. George V. Mullan, the fourth member who established the sorority, died several years ago. Mrs. Fay Pearce, who knew personally each of the four founders, paid tribute to them.

Ten years ago the sorority adopted as its national social service work the support of the social service department of the frontier nursing service, an organization which is supported by voluntary contribution, and which brings medical and health services to the descendants of pioneer settlers still living in the fastnesses of the Appalachian mountains in Kentucky.

Mrs. Alan Ford, who has visited the service, read several accounts of Christmas celebrations in the hills, parties which are given by the service for over 6,000 children living in this region. This year the Atlanta group contributed, in addition to money and used clothing, two dozen woolen skirts and two dozen overalls as gifts for the Christmas parties.

Letters from three former members of the chapter who are now living in other cities were read by Mrs. R. E. Matheson, from Mrs. George Dean, of Montgomery; Mrs. Robert Taylor, of Greensboro, and Mrs. Douglas W. Copeland, of Lynchburg.

Cook, to Lieutenant James Albert Bassett, 501st Parachute Battalion, which was solemnized at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Fort Benning chapel. Captain Weller read the marriage lines before a gathering of society.

The beauty of the chapel was enhanced by its decorations of palms and English ivy used to entwining the altar rail and the pillars behind the choir stalls. Floor baskets held mammoth white chrysanthemums and cathedral tapers burned in eleven-branched candelabra. The music was presented by Mrs. A. L. Averett at the organ.

Ushers were Lieutenants Elliott W. Amick, William Neff, Hubert Strange, William Vansboro, Ole Danielson and Carl Buechner.

The bridesmaids wore gowns of porcelain green velvet and carried bouquets of yellow roses. They were Misses Christine Cowan, of Plainfield, N. J.; Jessie Pierce and Mary Elizabeth Sayre and Mrs. Elliott Amick. Miss Virginia Clay was maid of honor. Her dress was of yellow velvet and she carried a bouquet of roses.

She wore a gown of ivory satin made with a long basque and full circular skirt. A coronet of orange blossoms held the voluminous veil to her soft blond hair, and she carried a white satin prayer book ornamented with a white orchid and showered with valley lilies.

Following the ceremony the bride and groom left the chapel passing under the traditional arch formed by the crossed sabres of the groomsmen.

Lieutenant Bassett and his bride left for a motor trip after which they will reside at Fort Benning, where the groom is connected with the newly formed Parachute Battalion. For traveling the bride wore a deep red wool dress with black accessories and a silver fox jacket.

VARIETY—Kate Smith will present Henry Fonda and Linda Darnell, youthful Hollywood stars, in a microphone preview of their forthcoming motion picture, "Chad Hanna," on her variety hour broadcast with Nan Rae and Mrs. Waterfall, Ted Straeter's chorus, Jack Miller's band and Ted Collins, over WGST at 7 o'clock tonight.

"Chad Hanna" is an exciting romance of circus life in upstate New York a century ago and is based on the novel of the same name by Walter Dumax Edmonds, author also of the best seller "Drums Along the Mohawk." Besides the romance of Fonda and Miss Darnell, it involves the precarious fortunes of Mr. Huguenine, who unexpectedly found himself sole proprietor of a circus and one sick lion, through a mortgage foreclosure. The fortunes of "Huguenine's One and Only International Circus" rise and fall with the state of health of the lion.

DRAMA—Frederic March and Florence Eldridge, one of America's favorite stage-screen-radio husband-and-wife teams, will co-star in the "Playhouse" production of William Martin's American hit novelette, "Doctor in the House" as the play over WGST at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Directed by one of radio's outstanding women producers, Diana Bourbon, and touched deftly with Wyn Murray's orchestral accompaniment, the mood and meaning, "Doctor in the House" is an American "Citadel." William Martin tells of a young physician and his wife who establish themselves in a mid-western mill town. The town has come upon trying days following the close-down of the mill. Most of the population either was employed or subsisted through the industrial plant's activity.

BUSTERS—Because a sheriff of a county in a mid-western state believed a criminal, regardless of how clever he was, makes one mistake, he was able through the able assistance of fellow police officers to bring about the downfall of a powerful organization, the Tinchey-Glenday gang, which case will be dramatized on Gang Busters, over WAGA at 8 o'clock tonight.

A bank robbery, the murder of its cashier and the mistake—feature the thrilling crime-drama to prove that crime does not pay.

DIVORCE—Joan Blondell is all cooped up in a budget and doesn't like it on the "I Want a Divorce" program over WATL at 8:30 o'clock tonight. The story concerns the purse-aches of a husband whose wife shuffles through more money than he has ever seen.

Song-Story Folk Unite.

Song-story tellers of Japan have united for the new way of life. Naniwabushi, stories in song, have become frivolous, and the police of Tokyo, Osaka and other cities of the mandate that recital be suited to the serious times. As a result Naniwabushi societies throughout the country are uniting to place their calling on a higher, more patriotic plane.

Girl Robbed by Bandits

After an arduous journey by road and river, Miss Joan Stanniforth, 26-year-old English girl, has arrived at Kewiang, China, from Hong Kong to become secretary to one of the leaders of the Chinese Red Cross. The boat on which she traveled was stopped six times by bandits the first night, and all the passengers, including Miss Stanniforth, were robbed. The following night the party was held up for six hours by Japanese-trained Chinese mechanized troops.

U. S. Credit Aids Films.

To finance production of films in Spain a British motion picture group is using "frozen" United States commercial credits by permission of the Madrid authorities. At first it was planned to spend the total amount on a single large film, but now the plan is to produce several less expensive pictures. The proceeds from such films as are distributed in the United States may be retained to apply against the peseta capital advanced by a large American creditor.

MR. AND MRS. DAN W. THOMAS.

Miss Margaret Denson Weds Dan Walter Thomas at Home

The marriage of Miss Margaret Denson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Denson, to Dan Walter Thomas, son of Mrs. Norman Thomas, was solemnized on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride. Rev. Walton Cook officiated. Music was presented by Mrs. Nell Ivy and Mrs. Walton Cook.

The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Denson and Mrs. Carl Lance. They were gown alike in soldier blue crepe with black accessories. The bride was given in marriage by her father and at the improvised altar they were met by the groom. The groom's attendants were James Wilson and Jimmy Baughan. The bride wore a soldier blue gown accented by black accessories and a shoulder cluster of roses. The bride's parents entertained at a reception. A tiered cake centered the lace-covered table. The bride's mother wore a lavender dress with a shoulder spray of red roses. The groom's mother wore a navy blue dress with a shoulder spray of red roses. The young couple will reside on Atlanta avenue. Guests were Mrs. J. M. Denson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cook and Sam Wessinger.

Mrs. Cormany and Mrs. Lott Are Selected for Committee

Mrs. R. B. Cormany, of Rome, and Mrs. James Lott, of Americus, were the two members named to the nominating committee from the state at large at the recent meeting of the executive board of Baptist W. M. U. of Georgia.

Mrs. Guy Atkinson, of Cartersville, and Miss Evelyn Lewis, of Thomasville, were named alternates. A member from each of the eight divisions to be elected at an early session at the annual convention in March will complete the personnel of the committee.

Miss Janice Singleton reported November receipts of $14,739.36, an increase of $838.95 over the same period in 1939. The Mrs. W. J. Neal offering for state missions far surpassed gifts of previous years.

The goals for periodicals, Royal Service, Y. W. A. Window and World Comrades have not been reached.

The McLure Memorial fund for the training school located in Louisville, Ky., has been the union's special in 1940. Mrs. Columbus Roberts has directed this work. The goal of $10,330 has not been met. Mrs. Roberts asked that receipts be sent to headquarters as early as possible. Mrs. Henry Munger, known to Georgia women as Miss Laura Lee Patrick, one-time secretary-treasurer of Georgia, sent a gift of $100 to be added to this fund.

The vice presidents have planned to hold the 77 associational meetings in January. Prominent speakers have been secured.
